SINCE the appearance of our last number, the welcome intelligence arrived stating that the Afghans had attacked the Sherpur cantonments, and been not only repulsed, but driven off the field with great loss and in utter confusion by our Cavalry and Horse Artillery. That evening and the following morning they evacuated the city, betaking themselves to Kohistan, of which most of them are natives. On the next day, also, General Gough, with his brigade, marched in from Bulkhek. General Roberts forthwith occupied the city, and organised a light column, under General Baker, to follow on the 27th the fugitives into Kohistan. It would seem as if a heavy snowstorm prevented this column from penetrating far into this wild district, for it returned after a three days' absence. General Baker's only exploit was to demolish Mir Botcha's fort, which he found deserted. No resistance was offered, and the Kohistanis are so cowed that, on the 31st, the headmen of the districts and villages visited by the flying column came in to make submission. The circle of investment has been, in short, completely shattered, and General Roberts is master of a considerable district round the capital. Though, however, the chain has been broken, the links are not yet destroyed, and may any day be rewelded. We must, therefore, take care not to be lulled into a fancied security by the present aspect of affairs. At the same time, it cannot be denied that the success was one very creditable to General Roberts and his troops, and that the enemy paid dearly for their temporary triumph. It is estimated that during the fortnight which terminated on the 23rd they lost nearly 3,000 men, and such a heavy list of casualties will, no doubt, produce a great impression. Another circumstance favourable to us is that the enemy, during their occupation of Cabul, wrought great havoc on the houses and property of all who were not Mussulmans, and have left the city quite a wreck. The most active of our opponents naturally fled. Consequently, we have been, no doubt, received by those inhabitants who remained not as foreign conquerors, but as deliverers from intolerable oppression. Hence, we may expect to have them on our side, as long as we occupy the place. Supplies, we are glad to learn, are coming in freely, and all apprehension of scarcity during the rest of the winter, save as regards horses, is removed. The task of feeding his transport animals and artillery and cavalry horses will, however, continue to give General Roberts much trouble, and it is to be hoped that the Indian Government will at once telegraph an order for some consolidated horse food, one of the most useful inventions of modern times. It is satisfactory to learn that, notwithstanding that he is unlikely to be again besieged in the Sherpur cantonments, General Roberts is busily engaged in strengthening his defences, and destroying all buildings and walls in the neighbourhood likely to give cover to an assailant. Communication with Peshawur is now tolerably well secured by a chain of strong posts, but at various points along the line there has been skirmishing during the past week, and if we wish to avoid a check, the means of rapidly moving flying columns from point to point must be provided. According to the Viceroy, who is kindly performing Sir Frederick Haines's duties, as well as his own, supplies and transport abounded all along the line, from Dakkha to Jugdallak. It now appears that somebody has said the thing that is not, for we learn by a Daily News' telegram that much indignation has been caused in India with regard to deficiencies of transport, General Gough having been obliged to march on Cabul almost without rations, and with only four days' forage. From other quarters come statements that the sepoys are very badly supplied with warm clothing. With a muzzled Press, the truth only slips out tardily and by accident; and it was from Lahore that the Daily News' telegram arrived. We may, by the way, ask how it is that the Press telegrams from Cabul are so many days later than those forwarded by General Roberts? Notwithstanding, however, this suspicious circumstance, and the deficiency of warm clothing and transport, we are entitled to begin the new year with the agreeable conviction that, for the present, at all events, matters are going on fairly well in Afghanistan. As to the future, it is not a pleasant subject to dwell upon, for how we are to settle satisfactorily our relations with Afghanistan,—how we are to get out of the country with credit, and when our military occupation will cease, neither we, nor any one else, can venture to predict.

The year which has now closed has been by no means an uneventful one for the Navy, although that activity which was so marked a feature of 1878 has been absent. The causes for England's anxiety respecting the Eastern Question having been removed or modified, it was determined to make an effort to reduce the Navy Estimates, and so successfully was this effected, that the Estimates showed a net decrease of more than a million and a half. As a natural result, the additions made to the Fleet during the past twelve months have been few, the Agamemnon being the only armoured vessel which has been launched in 1879. But several unarmoured vessels of useful types have been completed, and the energies of the yards have been devoted to preparing for sea some of our ships of the latest design, as well as those which were purchased with the supplementary two millions granted for the Naval Service, when there was need for adding materially and quickly to the strength of the Fleet. The Mediterranean Squadron has been reduced in power, as also has the China Squadron, the second ironclad on that station having been sent to the Pacific, and the Comus and Albatross having been told off for the relief of five smaller vessels, a change in the constitution of that command which may prove a slight economy, but which takes from the Service four commanders' commands. The Pacific Squadron has not been materially augmented, although the duties have been rather heavy, in consequence of the war between Chili and Peru, a war which has not been without advantage to Maritime Powers, as giving the first instance worthy of note of an engagement between armoured ships, and we may feel sure that the lessons to be learned by this action will not be lost sight of. The Cape command was happily increased at a most fortuitous moment, by the decision of Captain Bradshaw, of the Shah, to repair there from St. Helena, with all the troops on the island, so soon as he heard of the disaster at Isandlhwana, when on his passage home from the Pacific. The appreciation both of the Colonial and the Home Governments and of Parliament was conveyed to this officer for his timely service, and his name will always be remembered in the colony as having shown himself a friend in need. Indeed, the Naval Service, as a whole, came well to the front at the Cape, and the services of the Naval Brigade and the excellent conduct of the men has met with recognition in every quarter, and has reflected the greatest credit on the Service as a whole. The result of the services rendered by the Navy is shown in the honours conferred by her Majesty upon some of the senior officers and the selections for special promotion made by the Admiralty. Although those specially selected are not borne as additional of their rank until absorbed in the usual course, as we wish were the custom, still the advantage of getting some officers on the Captains' and Commanders' Lists at a comparatively early age cannot fail to have advantages when those thus promoted have shown themselves to be both zealous and efficient on active service. These special promotions, however, afford a striking contrast to the usual dull rate at which officers of almost every grade advance, or rather creep, up their Lists. It is true that the compulsory retirement by age has thinned out the Flag Lists this year, and has caused one or two captains to create a vacancy before they otherwise would; but as a whole, promotion in the Navy, whether of lieutenants, sub-lieutenants, assistant-paymasters, or engineers, is terribly slow, and the long-promised steady flow seems as far away as ever. At the very end of the year, their Lordships persuaded the Treasury to consent to something being done for the sub-lieutenants, and the Order in Council, to which we referred more than once as being "hung up," has at last seen the light, and gives some little hope of better things for 1880, sub-lieutenants having almost reached the depths of despair in 1879. No other class has been given any reason to hope for a helping hand, except it be the Medical Branch, who naturally expect to follow the wake of their brethren in the Army in obtaining fresh privileges which may prove attractions to the profession. We have, fortunately, been spared any such fearful disaster as the loss of the Eurydice, but still the year has borne a plentiful crop of accident, beginning, as it did, with the bursting of the Thunderer's gun, whereby ten were killed and nearly forty were wounded. It was just one year ago that that accident happened, and experiments are still being made to ascertain the true cause of the bursting of the gun, doubt having been thrown upon the decision of the Committee appointed to inquire into the matter. There have also been several accidents with torpedoes and torpedo-boats, probably owing in a measure to our increased activity in instructing officers and men in practice with this means of warfare. Strandings and collisions have also been more than usually frequent, though happily there have been no serious results, although there have been a few very narrow escapes. Fires, too, on board ships in harbour followed one another with alarming rapidity, but thanks to the efficient arrangements for extinguishing fire, and the quickness with which the outbreak was in each case discovered, the damage received by fire was in no case very great. As regards the Admiralty Office, the action of the Board with respect to the position of one of the Lords gave rise to much comment, and brought the ancient institution into some ridicule; but as Lord Clanwilliam has had his own way, and as Sir Edmund Commerell does not object, there is little to be said on the matter, except that it would be well to keep such matters within the walls, and not to allow an important appointment to remain vacant for a whole month, while the knotty point of dignity is being solved. Great changes in the department are now about to take place, and with a smaller personnel, and the retirement of some of those who have learned to look upon themselves as necessities to the well-being of the Service, some of the civil influence which has too often hampered a Naval Lord in his desire to do his duty, may be removed with advantage to the Navy. Another unfortunate incident, and one which has not placed the Admiralty in a favourable light before the public, has been the dismissal of the Superintendent of Charts, for venturing to give his opinion on a question which concerns the Service, but is, at the same time, of great importance to the whole civilised world. Mr. E. J. Reed, M.P., took an opportunity of keeping up his connection with the Navy by making a furious onslaught on the system of pensions in an electioneering speech. It was a sop for the economists, and they swallowed it, but there is little fear of Mr. Reed's attack having any effect, as pensions will, and must, exist in a Service as poorly paid as is the Royal Navy. We had hoped that 1879 might have seen the establishment of the long-talked-of and much-wished-for Seamen's and Marines' Widows' and Orphans' Fund, but as yet nothing very definite has been arrived at. We must, therefore, be content with the knowledge that the question has not been shelved, and that their Lordships are satisfied that the establishment of such a fund would be of advantage to the Service, and should be carried out, if it be possible, to make it a success. The Navy has been gratified in receiving an 1879 edition of the "Admiralty Instructions," a work which has helped to clear the dense fog in which multitudes of circulars and contradictory orders had involved the former edition. Another work has also been published under Admiralty authority, which will be useful in settling many a disputed point,—namely, an elaborate book of uniforms, giving illustrations of the distinctive marks of each and every grade. The sailing of the two sons of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales for their first sea-going cruise, has given further proof to the Navy of the confidence with which it is viewed by the Prince as a good school; and the Coastguard has been gratified by the appointment of Admiral Superintendent having been filled by H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh. There is also a happy event which should not be forgotten in looking back over the past year, and that is the mark of esteem shown to that popular officer, Admiral of the Fleet Sir H. Keppel, by the banquet given on his retirement. Few officers have met with such a distinction at the hands of the Service. Taking 1879 as a whole, it has been a year of progress, and the Admiralty has continued to retain the confidence of the Fleet, which, in its turn, has merited the confidence both of the country and the Admiralty by the opportunities it has taken of giving examples both of its readiness and efficiency.

According to colonial newspapers and private correspondence, neither officers nor men are behaving in a creditable manner in South Africa. Indeed, discipline seems to have been sadly relaxed, and self-respect on the part of many to have disappeared. One of our correspondents writes to us:—"This Army is in a ruffianly condition,—see Worthington's trial for murder, and local papers for accounts of disturbances in every town, as the troops march down." Worthington, an ex-trooper in the King's Dragoon Guards, was tried a few weeks ago for having, on June 13, murdered a native of the name of Siguler. The presumptive evidence was rather strong against the prisoner, but it consisted chiefly of his own statement, when confined in the guard tent and drunk, that he had killed a native, and it was found impossible to connect the statement with the crime. Very properly, therefore, a verdict of "Not guilty" was returned. Had, however, the trial taken place in Scotland, the verdict would, most probably, have been one of "Not proven." Nor is it the men only who have been disgracing the British uniform. According to a local paper, the conduct of Captain Kevill-Davies, 17th Lancers, and Lieutenant Blake, 57th Regiment, at the Pinetown races, has been much talked about in Natal. An extract which has been forwarded to us speaks of a "fracas" between Captain Kevill-Davies, a powerful man, and a Mr. Ratsey, greatly his inferior as regards strength. Of the details, however, we are ignorant, and only know that Captain Kevill-Davies's behaviour has been strongly censured. With respect to Mr. Blake, Mr. Henwood, the clerk of the course, asserts that he asked that officer to stand back, as the crowd was interfering with the racing. The reply to the civil request made to him was a threat to hit Mr. Henwood over the head with a stick. On Mr. Henwood remonstrating with Mr. Blake, another officer interposed, and abused Mr. Henwood. The soldiers standing by began to shout that they would take the part of their officers. Mr. Henwood on this, fearing a riot, went away. Subsequently he met Mr. Blake, reminded him of his threat, and asked if he was prepared to carry it out. On this, Mr. Blake, who had a knobkerry in his hand, struck Mr. Henwood. The latter then provided himself with a cane, and offered to fight his assailant, who, however, declined the encounter. This is substantially Mr. Henwood's public statement in a newspaper. If it is not true, he ought to be prosecuted for libel; but if true, Mr. Blake is evidently not fit to hold a commission. Captain Kevill-Davies's behaviour also, unless we have been misinformed, is worthy of severe punishment. Not only did these two officers—assuming the facts to be as we have stated them—discredit their uniform, but they also set a very bad example to the private soldiers who attended the race-course; and Mr. Blake, at all events, was nearly the cause of a riot. We trust, therefore, that a strict inquiry has been made into the affair by the officer commanding at Pinetown, and that steps have been taken for either the refutation or the punishment of the scandal.

The time has arrived for this country to ask itself the question whether it has or has not been betrayed by that false science which, according to Beattie, "leads to bewilder and dazzles to blind." The results of a few practical experiments carry far more conviction with them than do volumes of precepts. There is no gainsaying this truism. And yet it is not the first time we have asserted and proved that false science has been imported into what has been termed the "reconstruction" of the Navy. Excellent abstract reasons have repeatedly been produced to prove that the new types of ironclads designed by Mr. E. J. Reed, C.B., and subsequently by his brother-in-law, Mr. Nathaniel Burnaby, C.B., were of such faulty design and construction as to render them a real source of danger, instead of strength, to the country they were meant to defend. But no attention has been paid to these theoretical arguments. The ironclads existed, could be seen, looked strong and powerful, were said to be so, and had never been tried. Their designers claimed a trial. It was granted. It has come! So was it in the case of the Tay Railway-bridge, the largest of its kind in the world, and one of the most magnificent specimens of modern engineering science. Unfortunately, its construction was based upon false principles. It was a scientific novelty, meant to overcome the forces of Nature and prove the superiority of man. But at the very moment it was required to stand, it has fallen like a pack of cards into the turbulent and storm-tossed waters of the Firth of Tay. In this manner have the forces of Nature asserted their superiority over man's false science. The Royal Navy of England stands in much the same predicament as did that modern scientific wonder before it collapsed. Those ships, which in times past have been our greatest defence and ornament, our ancient and natural strength, "the floating bulwarks of our island," are not to be relied upon in the present or future, should a sudden tempest burst upon them, in the form of that deadly shower of metal a European war would hurl at their doomed hulls, however devotedly their gallant crews might strive to defend them. A critical survey of the present state and condition of the ironclads of Great Britain discloses the astounding fact that this great Naval Power has no ship in all respects adapted to the exigencies of modern naval warfare, or capable of being successfully defended against those vessels of a similar type or class in existence among the fleets of other nations. No single ship is either ram or torpedo-proof. None are even shot-proof. Since we commented on the recent naval combat in the Pacific, authentic information has reached us concerning the Huascar's fight, from which we find that the history of her defeat and capture discloses the fact that armour-plating under 6 in. in thickness is absolutely useless for any of the purposes of modern naval warfare, even when opposed to ordnance of no very great calibre. The Peruvian and Chilian ironclads carried guns of similar calibres; but, whereas, those on board the Huascar were protected by plates only 5½ in. thick, on the sides of the Chilian men-of-war was to be found armour 6 in. thick. A single Chilian shell penetrated the Huascar's turret, while two others exploded between decks, and these spread death and destruction around in such profusion as to thoroughly demoralise the mixed Peruvian and British crew, many of whom jumped overboard in preference to standing the chance of such another explosion among them. The Chilian ironclads, with their 6 in. of iron armour, appear to have sustained comparatively but slight injury from the 300-lb. projectiles thrown by the guns of the Huascar. Here are facts which cannot be disputed. For years we have been demonstrating that, theoretically, at least half the ironclads retained on the list of effective ships of the Royal Navy are worse than useless, either for offensive or defensive purposes. We have repeatedly asserted that the great variety which is to be found among the ironclads of the British Navy unfits them for the exigencies of a general action; and that, while the paper fleet numbers several hundreds of vessels on which it is customary for the Lords of the Admiralty to lavish unqualified praise, in reality we can boast of possessing but very few efficient vessels. But our warnings have remained unheeded by the country. The number of vessels composing its Navy has imbued the public with a false sense of security, and no amount of theoretical arguments could possibly have undeceived it. Now, however, the results of a single action have rudely shaken the general confidence which existed among most classes of the community in the efficiency of our first line of defence. The strength of our Fleet is a subject in which all Englishmen are deeply interested, but it is seldom possible for the general public to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion as to the actual state and condition of our Navy. The repeated assertions of those at the head of the Service, to the effect that its matériel left nothing to be desired, have invariably been accepted as correct, and those who dared to raise their voices in public to question such statements have usually been set down as factious opponents of the existing Administration. But now we have the inexorable logic of facts to support our arguments. The Huascar was of a certain offensive and defensive strength. The latter was found seriously wanting in efficiency. Have we vessels similarly defective, still classed as effective on the list of the Royal Navy? It is not a matter of daily occurrence for two nations to afford the world the spectacle of hostile ironclads encountering each other upon the high seas in deadly combat, but such a sight has been provided for us by the Republics of Chili and Peru. These have tested their metal, and that of Peru has been found wanting. Are we to wait until the day arrives when it shall be found necessary to test our new metal to be assured that the greater part of it has also been found wanting, and that a disaster has consequently overtaken the ironclad Navy of England upon those very waves it was once our proud boast to rule? Taking all the surrounding circumstances into account, it is only natural to suppose that the naval combat in the Pacific has been watched from all countries by those interested in the subject of naval construction, and that critical eyes have already detected the fact that 5½-in. armour not only offers no protection, but that it is a serious source of danger in action. Have we no ships dependent on this dangerous plating for their protection? Knowing, as we do, that out of a total of 55 ironclads, afloat and in course of construction, some 28 are rendered absolutely useless from this and other causes, we are not at all surprised to find a decided inclination growing up throughout the country to condemn our Navy as inefficient; nor that an opinion appears to be gaining ground outside the Service that its fighting power is not what it should be. Let it only be admitted that vessels protected by plates of less than 6 in. in thickness are valueless when opposed to 300-pounder guns, and it naturally follows that we must instantly condemn one-half our ironclad fleet, of which 10 large and costly monsters already lie "unappropriated." Others must now follow. The Warrior, Black Prince, Achilles, Defence, Resistance, Hector, Valiant, Bellerophon, Prince Albert, Scorpion, Wivern, Research, Pallas, Viper, Vixen, Waterwitch, and the last and newest type of vessels in the Service, the Shannon, Nelson, and Northampton, are absolutely worse than useless, their armour being under 4½ in. thick, while the Northumberland, Agincourt, Lord Warden, and Minotaur have their guns protected by plates no thicker than 5½ in. Their guns, too, do not exceed those of the Shah in power, and we know by experience that she was unable to pierce that very armour which was powerless to defend the Huascar from being penetrated by the guns of the Chilian ironclads. These were only 300-pounders. But what could even 12-in. plates do against the 35-ton guns now in general use, throwing 700-lb. shot? Luckily for us, but few 100-ton guns are yet afloat, for the Monarch, Repulse, Penelope, Orion, and Belleisle carry but 6-in. armour-plates. The Neptune, Sultan, Swiftsure, Triumph, Audacious, Invincible, Iron Duke, and Hercules carry only from 8-in. to 9-in. armour, to protect their guns; as do also those miserable failures, now called coast-defence ships, Cyclops, Gorgon, Hecate, and Hydra, which may all be expunged from the list of effective ships of the Royal Navy. The Glatton carries 12 in. of armour, the Hotspur and Rupert 11 in. The Téméraire, Alexandra, and Inflexible, called cruising ironclads, but which carry no adequate coal supply, as also the Devastation, Thunderer, and Dreadnought, are not so well protected or armed as either of the latest Italian ironclads. We have left, in course of construction, the Agamemnon, Colossus, Conqueror, Superb, Ajax, and a Polyphemus. Of these ships, not one is a match for the Italian ironclads Dandolo and Duilio, the most powerful ships afloat; while a target, representing a section of the Inflexible, carrying 24 in. of armour, has already been perforated by a Krupp gun, and that at a range exceeding one mile, the gun being less powerful than those carried by the Italian ironclads. We shall have to recur to this subject next week, as the result of the naval combat in the Pacific can be clearly shown to condemn most of the ironclads on the list of so-called efficient ships of that Royal Navy on which, "under the good providence of God, the wealth, safety, and strength of the kingdom chiefly depend."

The Canadian paper, the Mail, of Dec. 12, contains an interesting article on "Canada's Military Resources." This article deserves great attention, not only on account of the loyal and patriotic spirit in which it is written, but also because the subject itself is one of vast importance to the whole Empire. Of all the outlying portions of the dominions ruled over by her Majesty, India and Canada alone could furnish a substantial and efficient contingent for Imperial purposes. Indeed, we are inclined to think that we ought, in a great emergency, to rely solely on Canada for assistance, for it is scarcely possible to conceive an emergency in which India would not find it difficult to do more than hold in check Russian hostility against herself. Canada, it is true, would not be neglected by Mr. Gladstone's amiable Christian friends, the Russians; but her military position is such that she could easily baffle any petty Muscovite expedition, and at the same time dispatch a contingent to fight alongside of English Regular troops in Europe or Asia Minor. According to Colonel Strange, a reliable authority on the subject, and whose views are endorsed by the Mail, Canada could furnish a contingent of 10,000 men—infantry, cavalry, and artillery. Colonel Strange's scheme is that the nucleus of this force should be furnished by,—for the infantry, two battalions, each company being numbered after and affiliated to one of the ten military districts; for the cavalry, the troops at Toronto and Quebec; for the artillery, the present gunnery schools at Kingston and Quebec. An efficient body of engineers could also be provided. In taking into consideration the military value of Canada, we must bear in mind that it would be able, in case of war, to furnish far more than a mere body of hardy, strong, and intelligent young men, individually skilled in the use of their weapons. Canada possesses a carefully elaborated and well-worked organisation, and an embryo army capable, at a moment's notice, of being enormously expanded, and of being within a few months raised to a high pitch of efficiency. The general Militia numbers upwards of half a million, and the active Militia 43,000 men. Of the latter, General Sir Selby Smith says:—"The infantry are fully armed, clothed, and equipped; fairly well drilled, and proficient in the use of the rifle." We may add that the cavalry would do outpost duty well, and that the artillery work their guns efficiently. As to the engineers, they are about as good pioneers as any country could produce. The chief drawback is that Canada is weak as regards the production of warlike material, being chiefly dependent for a supply on England. As regards the Navy, the Canadian fishermen and mercantile marine could, if furnished with vessels of war, soon efficiently man them. From the above, it is pretty evident that, in the event of a war, Canada not only would be no encumbrance to the mother-country, but could afford it material assistance, and that it would be ready to do so is happily beyond all question.

Rear-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., accompanied by H.R.H. the Duchess of Edinburgh, left London on Monday, December 29, for Cannes, south of France, on a visit to H.I.M. the Empress of Russia, whose present delicate state of health has caused much anxiety.

General Younghusband, superintendent of the Royal Gun Factories, has gone to Italy to witness a gunnery trial of a novel and interesting kind, the gun being of 100 tons weight, but made of cast iron instead of the wrought iron or steel which modern artillerists regard as indispensable for heavy weapons if they are to fire large charges. The strain to which this cast-iron monster will be subjected is not stated, but the gun is described as being strengthened with hoops of steel and theoretically capable of great endurance.

The whole of the projectiles, both Palliser and common shell, fired from the 38-ton gun, the Woolwich Infant, brought home from the turret of her Majesty's ship Thunderer, now under repair at Malta, in the recent experiments at the proof butts in the Government marshes adjoining the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, have now been recovered from the butts, except one which was found ten feet deep in the clay foundation, and after removing the crusher-gauge left for removal at some future time. The crusher-gauges have all been examined, and the records of the trials thus completed. It is not yet decided when the committee will resume operations, but it will not be before the Christmas holidays are over. Sir William Palliser's gun has been damaged by a double charge, the strain on the gun having caused it to bulge. But it had previously been done to death. This gun is now being strengthened for further experiments, but from the results already secured Sir William Palliser claims that he has clearly demonstrated the superiority of wrought iron over cast steel tubes.

The Government have decided to re-introduce heavy breech-loading ordnance into the Service, to avoid a repetition of the Thunderer accident. It is understood that the Government has not only sanctioned the manufacture of a large number of guns with breech-loading action, but have also made an extra grant to meet the necessary expenditure. The system of breech-loading will probably be that which has been ~~described as the~~ "French screw-relieve" system, a screw through which smooth ~~ways are cut at~~ intervals to allowed of the breech-piece being readily unlocked and withdrawn, and as readily replaced. The breech-loaders will be somewhat heavier, gun for gun, than the muzzle-loaders, owing to the need of greater strength at the breech, which must always be their weak point. The 38-ton muzzle-loader will therefore have its companion breech-loader 42 tons in weight, and the 25-ton gun of the present day will be succeeded by one of 26½ tons, loading at the breech. It is intended to impart the additional strength required by shrinking on an additional coil.

It is officially announced that Mr. Edmund N. Swainson, one of the principal clerks of the Admiralty, has been appointed assistant-secretary of that department, and that Mr. W. Hale White has been appointed assistant-director of Navy contracts at the Admiralty; Mr. F. F. Cox, Admiralty clerk, Royal Dockyard, Malta, being appointed to the Naval and Victualling Depôt, Sydney.

Staff Captain Youel having retired, the Admiralty has appointed Staff Captain Harvey, to be master-attendant of Devonport Yard, and his late appointment as assistant-master-attendant will be filled by Staff Captain W. H. Sharp.

Captain Duncan Davidson, who has been succeeded in the command of the Serapis by Captain Guy Twiss, was superseded at his own request, having more than completed his three years' term of command.

We regret to hear of the death, from small-pox, of Sub-Lieutenant Harry Moore, of the Rupert, and to learn that two of the ship's company have also died from the same disease. Sub-Lieutenant Moore was the senior on his list.

Admiral the Hon. Charles G. B. Elliot, C.B., will hoist his flag as Commander-in-Chief at Devonport on the 9th inst. He will retain the services of Mr. Hemsley Shanks, R.N., who has been Secretary to Admiral Farquhar during his command, and no changes will be made in the staff at the Admiral's Office.

The water distilled in her Majesty's ships for drinking purposes is so often nauseous, through being strongly flavoured with tallow and the odour of leather hose, that one would imagine any improvement that would ensure a pure liquid would be appreciated. In the French Navy a distilling apparatus is being brought into use which supplies water deliciously fresh, inodorous, aërated, clear, and limpid. The apparatus is of three parts:—No. 1 contains an aërator, No. 2 a refrigerator, and No. 3 a case of animal charcoal. The steam passes through two cones of the aërator, the second enclosing the first; air is drawn through the second, and condenses the steam in an air-current, and this supplies well aërated water. The refrigerator is of a porous nature, connected with certain tubes which admit the cleaning of the refrigerator. These tubes, are enclosed in a box through which sea-water flows, coming in at the bottom and leaving at the top in a heated state. The condensed water finally enters the case of animal charcoal, and circulates through it.

In the Courtenay Automatic Whistling Buoy, the rising and sinking of the buoy on the waves is made the means of compressing air and blowing a whistle, which, it is said, can be heard at a long distance. These buoys have recently been tested by the French Lighthouse Board and recommended to the Ministry of Marine for adoption in France, and we understand that one is to be tried on the Goodwin Sands. The Torpedo School at Portsmouth has not, we believe, yet discovered a ready and efficient means of indicating the whereabouts of Whitehead torpedoes, on their coming to the surface when used for practice. We, therefore, commend the principle of the automatic whistle to the notice of the Admiralty, with a suggestion that the residue of compressed air in the torpedoes might be utilised for the blowing of a whistle. The only disadvantage of the system lies in the fact that, at night or in a fog, although the sound is distinctly heard, no two men on board any vessel will agree in indicating the direction from which they believe it to proceed.

Rear-Admiral Robert Jenkins, C.B., was placed on the Retired List on January 2, ten years having elapsed since he was last employed afloat. His retirement promotes Captain J. K. E. Baird, R.N., to the rank of Rear-Admiral, creating a vacancy on the list of her Majesty's Naval aides-de-camp. On January 9, Admiral Arthur Farquhar will be placed on the Retired List, under the age clause of the Warrant of 1870. He will be succeeded as Naval Commander-in-Chief at Devonport by Admiral the Hon. C. G. Elliot, C.B. The retirement of Admiral Farquhar promotes Vice-Admiral Arthur Cumming, C.B., to Admiral; Rear-Admiral Henry Boys to Vice-Admiral, and Captain C. T. Curme, R.N., Superintendent of the Steam Reserve at Devonport, to Rear-Admiral. A good-service pension of £150 a year will be placed at the disposal of the First Lord by the promotion of Captain Curme.

Admiral Sir Geoffrey Hornby, K.C.B., terminates his three years' command in the Mediterranean on the 14th inst., but will delay hauling down his flag until the arrival of his relief, Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B.

The Rev. Reginald Treffry, Chaplain of the Belleisle, has, we hear, been presented by the Lord Chancellor to the Rectory of St. Endellion. Mr. Treffry was appointed a Chaplain in the Navy in June, 1873.

Rear-Admiral Waddilove returned to Devonport from leave of absence, and rehoisted his flag as second in command of the Channel Squadron, on Saturday. The movements of the squadron have been delayed by the exceptionally severe weather.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Rear-Admiral Arthur Hood, C.B., after assembling off Portland on January 2, was to have immediately sailed for Lisbon. The vessels comprising the Squadron are the Minotaur, Captain Rawson, flagship of Rear-Admiral Hood, C.B.; the Agincourt, Captain Buller, C.B., flagship of Rear-Admiral Waddilove; Northumberland, Captain Wratislaw. The Achilles, Captain Heneage, joins the Squadron at Lisbon.

Captain Twiss, who has been appointed to the Serapis, and Paymaster Ramsay, returned to England last week from their duties as transport officers at the Cape, the staff appointed for carrying out the naval transport service during the Zulu war having now been broken up.

We hear that Captain Makaroff, whose name is familiar in connection with his scheme for stopping holes in ships' bottoms, and who achieved distinction as a torpedo officer in the Russo-Turkish war, has been appointed chief of the Russian torpedo flotilla.

Mr. Andrew Baillie, naval instructor of the Northumberland, has passed the examination for Interpreter in Spanish, and has obtained a first-class certificate.

The Admiralty circular, to which we referred last week, directing that no captain of the Marine corps should receive his promotion to the rank of Major unless he had passed through a course of equitation, is already bearing fruit, inasmuch as sixteen or eighteen officers of the Artillery and Light Infantry branch of the corps assembled at Canterbury on the 1st inst., to undergo a course of equitation at the riding-school. Amongst this number are Majors who have not yet passed the school, Captains, and Lieutenants.

The Chinese Government is reported to have sent an ultimatum to Japan, demanding the acceptance within three months of its proposal to make the Loochoo Islands semi-independent. In the event of the Japanese Government rejecting this proposal, it is asserted that China will declare war against Japan.

Captain Sulivan, commander of the Duncan, flagship at the Nore, has made a present of 1,000 trees for planting in the new Naval recreation-ground at Sheerness. The land has been levelled, but at present nothing is being done to further the work, in consequence of nearly all the seamen from this port being on leave. When they return, however, the work will be proceeded with. A plan of the pavilion intended to be erected has been submitted and approved. The building is to cost £400, which is to be paid off in four annual instalments. The pavilion will be two stories high, and is to contain every accommodation for providing meals, &c., and the usual waiting-rooms.

The following Captains of Royal Marines will reach the age for compulsory retirement during the year 1880, under the Order in Council of 15th January, 1878, should they not be promoted before they reach the dates noted against their names, viz.:—James W. Scott, September; Samuel T. Collins, May; William E. Despard, August; Robert J. Pascoe, June; Newell F. Way, August; Charles E. Servante, June; Jacob M. W. Silver, September; Thomas P. Norton, October. As the four first-named stand respectively first, second, third, and fourth for promotion, it is possible that they may be fortunate enough to fall into vacant majorities before their date for retirement arrives.

The Royal Navy List for January, 1880, edited by Mr. C. E. Warren, R.N., and Lieutenant-Colonel F. Lean, R.M.L.I., has been issued with that strict punctuality which has always been a distinctive feature of this valuable work. The present number contains, in addition to the usual information, the "Zulu War Services," supplied by an officer present at the front; as also many additions to its information regarding other war services, and a more complete series of dates, and other information of interest to officers of the Royal Navy, the Royal Marines, their families and friends. It is a pity, however, that so many columns appropriated to dates should remain vacant. That this is so, is no fault of the editors of this carefully and accurately compiled Royal Navy List, but is entirely due to an apparent absence of esprit de corps among the officers of the Service, many of whom do not appear to take the slightest interest, even in matters that so nearly concern them as the correct rendering of their past services. Surely of these they are not ashamed? Nevertheless, although we understand that in several instances prepaid envelopes and wrappers have been forwarded to officers for particulars as to their past services, no response has ever been received. We think officers should exert themselves to assist the editors of the Royal Navy List, in their endeavours to supply both the Service and the public with a creditable Navy List.

We are glad to learn that there has been no such dearth of stokers at Devonport as we were led to suppose, and on which we made comment last week. Our correspondent at the port inadvertently wrote a cypher to many, and represented the number of vacancies as 200, whereas they were but 20. Had the original number given been correct, the surprise we expressed would not have been uncalled for.

Mr. Edwin Swainson, who has been appointed assistant-secretary at the Admiralty, consequent upon the retirement of the chief clerk and the five principal clerks who stood above him, is in addition to be the principal clerk of the legal branch, the heads of the other branches will be, Mr. Macgregor, military branch: Mr. Awdry, civil branch; Mr. Vansittart Neale, naval branch. The clerks of the first class who have resigned are Messrs. James Noel, Joseph Senior, Herbert Domvile, Arthur Knox, and Carrington Wilson; and of the second class, Messrs. James Gambier and Hesketh Hodgson. Four clerks are to be drafted into the Secretariat from the Accountant-General's Department, and thus while many well-known faces will vanish from the office, the importation of new men will make the old building appear all the more strange after this sweeping reform.

Will their Lordships be good enough to look at the sentence of court-martial awarded to the Sub-Lieutenant of the Opal, who has just been tried at Sheerness, and compare it and the offences with that of the Assistant-Paymaster late of the Warrior, and now of the Fantome? The harshness of the sentence upon the latter officer will be at once apparent.

A slight flutter has been caused at the Ports by an order received from the Admiralty for a nominal return of all officials in the Naval establishments who are engaged in any way in mercantile pursuits. Directors of companies and trading societies begin to think the tradesman's agitation against civil-service trading is likely to bear fruit.

Captain Brine, acting upon instructions from the Admiralty, has placed the tenders of the Lord Warden and the diving apparatus of the ship, together with any hands that may be required, at the disposal of those engaged at the wreck of the Tay Bridge.

The weekly mail service from Southampton to Gibraltar and Malta will be discontinued on February 1, and letters will be sent exclusively viâ France. Those for seamen and soldiers will continue to be sent at the usual rate of one penny, if posted under the existing regulation conditions.

We are sorry to have complaints from the Cape as to the really shameful state of the clothing of the troops in the Transvaal, and a correspondent in another column draws attention to the appearance presented by the 94th Regiment. What says Pimlico to all this? Is it the fault of that department, of the men themselves, or of whom?

The Channel Squadron will remain absent from England for at least five months, according to the programme of movements which has been arranged. The head-quarters of the squadron will, as usual, be Lisbon, but Gibraltar will be visited.

A telegram to the Standard from its Madras correspondent announces that General Sir Neville Chamberlain, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., will vacate the chief command of the Madras Army, and return to England, on April 1 next, being succeeded by General Sir Edwin Johnson, K.C.B., Royal Artillery, at present employed as military member of the Governor-General of India's Council.

The French Radicals have been again crying out against Marshal Canrobert, who, for many years, has been unpopular with the "Reds," because he played a part in the coup d'état. A short time ago, having to resign his seat in the Senate by rotation, he was not re-elected. A Liberal was returned in his place. This defeat greatly encouraged the Radicals, who again assailed the old soldier, and called on the Government to deprive him of his post as President of the Committee on Promotion. The Marshal has now been elected a Senator in another Department, but this fact has in no degree abated the animosity of his political foes, who clamour more loudly than ever for the veteran's removal from office.

What is called M. Laissant's Bill will be shortly brought before the French Parliament. It is to this effect:—Article 1. All Frenchmen not unfit for military service shall form part of the active army, for three years, of the reserve of the active army for six years, of the territorial army for five years, of the reserve of the territorial army for six years. Article 2. After the first and second year in the active army men able to show a sufficient amount of military instruction and education will be allowed to pass into the reserve of the active army, after having undergone an examination. Article 3. Each year, at least a month before the examinations, the War Minister will limit the number of soldiers to be allowed to pass into the reserves. This is short service with a vengeance!

L'Armée Française says that the President of the Republic has signed an important decree reorganising the committees of Infantry and Cavalry. Each of these committees will be composed of seven members, the commander of an Army Corps for president, two generals of division, two brigadiers, and two colonels. The two Presidents have already been appointed—General Clinchant for the Infantry, and General Galliffet for the Cavalry. It is hoped that with the aid of these committees the War Minister will be able to shake off the baneful influence of the bureaux, which are always being accused, rightly or wrongly, of impeding progress, and of throwing obstacles in the way of needful reforms. L'Armée Française considers that the bureaux will not presume to play tricks with such distinguished officers as Generals Clinchant and Galliffet.

The return of Colonial Forces raised by the Natal Government during the campaign in Zululand would seem to be a most triumphant answer to the charge of inertness and indifference so often hurled against the unfortunate colonists. It shows that counting heads, there were more Local troops of various kinds engaged in the field than there were Imperial troops. No fewer than 21,435 colonists and natives were actually called out for service, while 2,860 were in readiness as a reserve, so that the Colonial Contingent may be set down at 24,295. The regularly enrolled Colonial Forces numbered 130 Mounted Police, 399 Mounted Volunteers, and 300 Reserve Volunteers. There was a further batch of 83 Irregular Volunteers organised for the occasion, and 100 mounted native scouts,—these figures have nothing to do with the Native Contingents or Border Levies, and their European officers drafted from the ranks of colonists. The last are not distinguished from their men, but their number was considerable. Seventy-five colonists acted as leaders of native levies with great ability and advantage. The return is also defective in regard to the Town Guard, and other purely local organisations of a defensive character, which ought fairly to be included in the estimate. We may fairly reckon that about 1,800 colonists were actually under arms, or over one-third of the adult European males in the country. Of the natives 23,000, or exactly the same proportion, taking the men at about one-fifth of the white, turned out. A contribution of one-third of its whole strength, during a war which might bring critical danger at any moment to the doors of every man's own home, will, we submit, bear comparison with the experiences of any people in any age. In the case of England, it would mean the enrolment of over two millions of men, a force larger than any Continental power has yet put into the field.

Much has been said and written of late in favour of making athletic proficiency an element in the competitive examination. Such advocates will be interested to learn that at the examination for Woolwich, just ended, a certain military school, which holds a prominent position at football and athletic sports, sent up thirteen candidates, eleven of whom qualified; while of the forty-five elected for admission no fewer than eight were there prepared. This at least goes far to prove that high intellectual training is clearly not incompatible with prominence in games and sports. The danger in the present day is that the latter should exclude the former; a proper combination of the two, all will agree, is to be aimed at, and this, at the school alluded to, seems to have been attained.

Colonel Sir P. S. Lumsden, K.C.B., C.S.I., Bengal Staff Corps, late Adjutant-General of the Indian Army, has arrived home from India on vacating his appointment as Chief of the Staff to Sir Frederick Haines.

The latest addition to the forces at Fort Weeber, says a Natal paper, is "Captain Riotter's Dragoons. They are a native force, mounted on oxen, and very fierce in aspect. The gallant Captain has hitherto drilled them on foot, but is daily expected to be seen astride a fiery horned charger."

The contents of the December number of the "Journal" of the United Service Institution of India will be found of great interest. Articles appear on the following subjects:—"Native States Contingents;" "A Reserve for the Native Army" (by Lieutenant E. G. Barrow); "Camels in connection with the South Afghan Expedition, 1878-79" (by Veterinary-Surgeon C. Steel); "Progressive Advance of Russia in Central Asia" (translation from the Russian, by Captain W. E. Gowan); "Spanish Mountain Artillery," parts IV. and V. (Lieutenant J. C. Dalton, R.H.A.); "Mule Breeding" (Veterinary-Surgeon J. J. Meyrick, R.A.); "A Scheme for increasing the strength of the Native Armies of the Bengal Presidency, on the breaking out of a war either in Europe or Asia" (Captain H. S. Anderson); "Afghanistan and England in India" (translated by Lieutenant-Colonel H. A. Little, from the non-official section of the Militaire Wachendlatt).

A telegram from Cape Town announces that Sir Garnet Wolseley is still at Pretoria, and that his departure for England is fixed for this month. We learn by last mail, that Sir Garnet Wolseley's staff was reduced to Lieutenant-Colonel Brackenbury, R.A. (acting) Chief of the Staff and Military secretary; Mr. Herbert private secretary; Surgeon-Major Jackson, C.B.; Major McCalmont, 7th Hussars; Captain Maurice, R.A.; Lieutenant Creagh, R.A., in camp near Fort Albert Edward, on the Olifant River. Captain Yeatman Biggs was Staff officer to Major Creagh, at Fort Burgers. The heat was said to be of a very trying kind. Our correspondent winds up by saying, "If the Boers do not prove as troublesome as their words, Sir Garnet Wolseley will leave Pretoria soon after his return from the Sekukuni campaign, and proceed by the Diamond Fields for the Cape, where he will take passage for England."

When we heard from the Cape, Captain A. M. Paterson, 16th Regiment, who we stated lately had been appointed brigade-major at Singapore, was under orders to leave South Africa at once to take up the duties of his appointment.

The recent changes in the administration of the Army are estimated to save £18,000 a year. But as a set-off against this sum has to be reckoned the money spent in providing pensions for the superannuated officials who accepted the terms of retirement under the War-Office Reorganisation Scheme.

The Canadian Minister of Defence, in order to provide immediate facilities for officers who have been appointed "provisionally" to companies of infantry in the Canadian Militia to obtain certificates of qualification, has made the following arrangements:—Three schools for practical military instruction of officers of infantry are authorised to be opened on the 7th inst., one at Toronto, for the province of Ontario; one at Montreal, for the province of Quebec; and one at St. John, province of New Brunswick, for the maritime provinces, to be maintained during a period of two months, provided enough candidates come forward for instruction. The commandants and adjutants will be supplied from the district staff, and two non-commissioned officers for each school will be detailed to act as drill serjeants and instructors. Officers who join any school will not be required to remain thereat longer than necessary to enable them to pass the required examination. The number of officers who may be admitted for instruction in each school is not to exceed fifty. Of these, twenty may be residents within the city at which the school is established, and thirty from corps whose head-quarters are distant more than two miles from such city. If in either case vacancies occur at any time, they may be filled by such officers of infantry, either from the city corps or from corps outside the limits of the city, as may desire to join. Officers who join for a course of instruction, if residing in the city where the school is maintained, or within two miles thereof, will receive no personal allowances during the period they are under instruction. Those residing more than two miles distant from the city will receive, on obtaining a second-class certificate, an allowance at the rate of seventy-five cents per diem for the days actually present under instruction, and in addition, an allowance at the rate of six cents per mile in lieu of transport, for one journey going to, and one journey returning from the school. Officers who desire to join a school are to make application through the ordinary channel to the brigade-major of the military district within which the school is maintained.

In a despatch dated Cabul, October 22, General Sir F. Roberts, commanding the Cabul Field Force, writes:—"In my despatch dated October 20 I mentioned the names of the officers whom I or the brigadier-generals under my command desired to recommend to the favourable consideration of the Commander-in-Chief. I have now the honour to submit an abridged list of those whose services have been more particularly marked and valuable. Though this return has not been called for, its submission appears to be in conformity with the instructions contained in Adjutant-General's No. 2,662A of July 5, 1879, and I furnish it in the hope that it may be of some assistance to his Excellency in selecting the officers whom he may be pleased to bring to the notice of the Government of India and of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief for some recognition of their services." List of officers referred to above:—"Brigadier-General T. D. Baker, C.B., commanding 2nd Brigade; Colonel C. M. Macgregor, C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., chief of the staff; Major W. Galbraith, 85th Foot, assistant-adjutant-general; Captain R. G. Kennedy, deputy-assistant-quartermaster-general; Captain G. T. Pretyman, aide-de-camp; Deputy-Surgeon-General S. C. Townsend; Deputy-Surgeon-General J. H. Porter; Lieutenant-Colonel M. H. Heathcote, superintendent of transport; Captain E. Straton, 22nd Foot, superintendent of signalling; Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. J. Clarke, 72nd Highlanders; Major G. S. White, 92nd Highlanders; Lieutenant-Colonel G. N. Money, 3rd Sikhs; Major J. W. M'Queen, 5th Punjab Infantry; Major A. FitzHugh, 5th Goorkhas. The name of Captain E. D. Shafto, Royal Artillery, commissary of ordnance, would have been included in this list had he lived. With regard to Lieutenant-Colonel Clarke, I may be permitted to remark that unless he gets a step in ranks he must retire in a few months under the operation of the Warrant of 1878. He is an excellent officer, and would be a loss to the service. It is possible that Majors M'Queen, FitzHugh, and Galbraith may have been recommended for some reward for the recent campaign. I trust, however, that I shall not be considered out of place if I bring their names forward for some further reward. Nothing can exceed the good service performed by Majors M'Queen and FitzHugh, and also by their distinguished regiments. Major Galbraith has been in the field from the first, and has given me the greatest assistance. With him I should like to associate Major Collett and Captain Badcock—officers who, though not present during the recent operations, contributed in no small degree to the success of last winter's campaign, and who are now both hurrying out from England to join me. Lieutenant-Colonel Money has held a very important command and done excellent service. The other officers I have named are one and all deserving of his Excellency's consideration and support."

Most of the new detached forts round Paris are now completed, and for the last few weeks the forts on the south-west of the French capital have been cutting their teeth, or rather firing their guns in order to test the platforms, embrasures, &c. In the event of Paris being invested again, the Parisians will probably neither see nor hear anything of the operations, as most of the new detached forts lie from ten to twelve miles from the enceinte. It was, no doubt, considered necessary to try the soundness of the new forts to stand their own fire, in consequence of certain disagreeable revelations made some months ago with regard to the manner in which some of the contractors of the new frontier forts had eluded the plans furnished by the military authorities. There was a great fuss made about this affair in the summer, and the Germans were accused of complicity, but we have not heard of any of the parties concerned in the fraud having been brought to trial.

It is quite time that we called attention to the almost universal non-observance of that portion of the "Royal Warrant for the Appointment, Promotion, and Retirement of Combatant Officers, dated August 13, 1877," which treats of "seconded officers." If we take up the official Army List and look through the various Line regiments, it is impossible to help being struck with the number of names of officers that appear as if they were doing duty with their battalions, whereas, in fact, they are far away from their regiments, holding appointments "other than regimental." The paragraph of the Royal Warrant, page 19, runs thus:—"Article 62.—An officer below the substantive rank of Lieutenant-Colonel appointed to the Staff, or to hold any appointment other than regimental approved by our Secretary of State, or a Lieutenant-Colonel of our Royal Artillery appointed to a civil situation, shall, on completing three months' service in such appointment, or in the case of an aide-de-camp, one year's service as such, be seconded in his regiment." Now, this article is, if others in the Warrant are not, perfectly intelligible. There can, therefore, be no question as to its being carried out in the spirit or not; and yet, are officers seconded as a general rule? We say, certainly they are not. There are some who have passed the whole period of Staff employ—five years—without ever being placed on the Supernumerary List of their regiments,—some on Staff employ in India for shorter periods; others on active service in Afghanistan, the Cape, and elsewhere. Not one officer, that we can find, who is, or has been, superintendent of gymnasia has been seconded. The article says,—"Or hold any appointment other than regimental." Then why are these officers not seconded, and the step given in the regiment? Let any commanding officer be asked his opinion on the subject, and he will, as very many have already officially, denounce the pernicious practice of keeping officers on the working strength of the battalion who are away from it, holding an appointment not regimental. They complain, and very naturally, too, of the paucity of both captains and subalterns to do the work that is required. One captain is superintendent of gymnasia,—his company for two years has no captain; another is at the Staff College, when for two years his company has no captain; another is in command of a detachment, say of 50 or 100 men, made up to its strength from the various companies; meanwhile, this captain's own company (as well as the others) is in the hands of a subaltern. This class of officer, too, numbers in its ranks, at all times, many absentees,—either going through a course of musketry at Hythe, fieldwork or signalling at Chatham, a gymnastic course at Aldershot, or a garrison class of instruction. There is no limit fixed, nor any provision made by the authorities for the performance of their duties in their absence. The commanding officer, of course, is compelled, most reluctantly, to throw the work of those absent upon others who may be unfortunate (we regret to use the word) enough to remain at head-quarters. Now, the first of these cases—the superintendent of gymnasia—is, undoubtedly in direct defiance of the article, not seconded, his being so would be a gain of one captain to many commanding officers, which would be one step in the right direction. Instead of curtailing the opportunities of such an excellent provision as this article gives us for accelerating promotion, were the authorities to expand its powers and second those at the Staff College as well, the Service would be benefited, the regiment relieved of a strain, and a wholesome fillip given to promotion.

Kingstown and Port Royal, Jamaica, are being placed in a proper state of defence, at a cost of £10,000, their condition having been brought prominently before the notice of the War Office last year, when there seemed every reason to fear England was on the point of being involved in a European war.

The single stations so prevalent in the Madras Presidency of India are generally agreed to be the ruin of the Madras Army. There are, no doubt, still many able commandants, but it is useless to disguise the fact that there are very many unfit ones. If a force of artillery, European infantry, and two Native infantries were brigaded together, under the eye of a smart Brigadier, and frequently exercised, such misrepresentations could not be made with impunity. The General would soon learn who was the efficient and who the inefficient officer. Whilst the Madras Army sees no service and is employed on police duties, it never will be an army, in the strict acceptation of the term,—an army fit to go anywhere, and accomplish anything. Either it is worth the while of Government to maintain it as a fighting-power, or to disband it, and to employ constables in its place. But if the recruiting be looked to, the old organisation resumed, the stupid Staff Corps knocked on the head, and the troops brigaded and properly commanded and employed on service, then, and not till then, will the Madras Army resume its position as second to none as a fighting-power in India. The Committee now being assembled in India would do well to go into the subject thoroughly, and if it does so, we feel convinced that it will find much room for sweeping reform; and from what we know of the martial spirit of the general body of officers on the Madras side, we have no hesitation in saying that any changes introduced with a view of increasing efficiency, and adding to the general usefulness of the Madras native regiments, would be hailed with satisfaction. Some would doubtless feel a pinching of the shoe, but such men would seek retirement, and make room for others. They would be no loss, indeed their withdrawal would be an undoubted gain,—a gain in every way.

The French Parliament will shortly have to consider several important questions. In the first place, a decision must be arrived at with regard to mounting captains of infantry. That they must be mounted has been decided upon in principle, for no captain on foot could ever command a French company on its war establishment,—that is to say, 250 strong. But Parliament must vote the necessary supplies, and the 3,000 horses which will be required must be found. Arab steeds were contemplated, but the War Minister finds those animals far too lively and vicious for officers anything but well acquainted with horse-flesh. It was also proposed to draw supplies from South America, but the ugly brutes sent over from the Argentine and other Republics are untrained, and only fit for artillery and military train. It was next proposed to purchase horses in Spain, and even mules have been suggested, but we believe that General Gresley will in the end purchase his 3,000 quadrupeds in France. The interminable Staff question, over which Parliamentary and other Committees have been wrangling for the last seven or eight years, will also be brought forward at an early date. The first Bill on this subject was laid on the table of the National Assembly in January, 1872, and was due to the Duc d'Harcourt, who demanded "urgency," and that it should be submitted to the General Committee on the Army. The Chamber pronounced "urgency," but the Bill is still unvoted. In 1874, General de Cissey, then Minister of War, laid another staff Bill on the table in the name of the Government, adding that his measure, after ripe deliberation, had been adopted by the superior Council of War. This Bill was also referred to the Committee on the Army. A year afterwards General Loysel brought forward a counter-proposition, and General Billot was about to report on the three rival measures, when the National Assembly was dissolved. In March, 1876, the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, which replaced the National Assembly, held their first sitting, and a fortnight later General de Cissey, in the name of the Government, laid on the table a new Bill, and a special Committee was at once appointed to examine it. General Ladmirault was the president of the Committee, and General Pourcet drew up the report, which, amidst the applause of the assembled Senators, was laid before the Upper House in February, 1877. On May 3 the discussion of this Bill was demanded, out General Pourcet had to demand a delay, as a difference had arisen between the War Minister and the Committee. Another demand for discussion was made on May 14, and at last, on June 18, General Loysel demanded the adjournment of the debate. On November 8, General Berthaut, the new War Minister, proposed a counter project, which was duly referred to the Committee, and on the 14th, 17th, 20th, and 22nd of the same mouth a first deliberation took place, and then the matter was postponed till 1878, at the commencement of which year some very sharp skirmishing occurred, and in fact was carried on at intervals until the dark and dreary November once more came round, and General Pourcet demanded a further adjournment. On the 7th February, however, General Loysel produced another counter project, and on the 21st, the discussion being called on, General Pourcet declared that in presence of the criticisms of Marshal Canrobert and a number of Generals, the Committee thought it prudent to make some modifications. On the 26th, General de Ladmirault defended the project of the Committee, and rejected that of General Loysel, while the new War Minister, General Borel, objected to both. On the 1st March a debate took place, and it was decided that the Staff should be an open service, and the measure of the Committee having thus been rejected, the War Minister asked for an adjournment. After a series of discussions the Bill proposed by General Loysel, and amended by General Billot, was voted, and on the 27th May was sent to the Chamber of Deputies, which only made its report this year, a report unfavourable to the Bill voted by the Senate! It is now proposed that a joint Committee of Senators and Deputies should endeavour to settle this vexed question as to the composition and duties of the Staff.

A correspondent in the Khyber gives a description of a regiment which lately left Ali Musjid for a frontier station. We are told that "those on the march numbered about 70, with the European officers of the regiment; the remainder followed,—in carts." Rather a curious condition for a regiment going on service.

The complaints of officers with respect to Wellington College may be summarised as follows:—1. That although, on the opening of the College, Jan. 29, 1859, the Governors had deemed it expedient to admit civilians, they averred publicly that they hoped to see, "at no distant day, 200 orphans established there," whereas none have been added to the original number of foundationers; that, on the contrary, owing to the stringency of rules made subsequent to the establishment of the College, even the full number of the nominees of the Patriotic Fund have been more or less excluded from the benefits of this so-called charitable institution. 2. That, although the primary object for which officers subscribed to the funds was the education of orphans exclusively, it was considered desirable to extend the intention of the donors, so as to embrace the education of sons of living officers, at unremunerative rates, the admission of the sons of civilians being regarded merely as an auxiliary motive. In 1860 there were only 25 civilians' sons amongst the 200 boys at that time on the strength of the establishment; now, there are 210 civilians' sons, or sons of officers, obliged to pay the higher civilian rate. Thus the civilian element has been introduced in such strength as practically to exclude those for whom the College was built, in commemoration of the great Duke, and this notwithstanding the following recorded declaration of the Governors that "such a measure [i. e., the formation of this mixed class], if successful, might be made the means of providing a subsidiary to the primary object of the institution, a public school to which, according to fixed, moderate rates of payments, the sons of officers might be admitted." And again,—"We trust that the College may speedily afford such evidence of its usefulness as may substantiate its claims to yet further liberality on the part of the public, and that the Governors may thus be enabled to extend more widely than is in their power at present, to those classes for whom it is especially intended, the benefits of this noble charity." Moreover, that her gracious Majesty was pleased to refer to the College as one "destined to furnish the means of a religious, moral, and intellectual education of the best description to the children of many deserving officers, which they could not otherwise obtain." From all which it is clear and certain that the original and frequently expressed intention of erecting the College for the sons of deceased officers, and also for living officers, amounted to a formal and solemn obligation. 3. That notwithstanding Wellington College has received in profits upwards of £60,000 since it was opened, in addition to the original £165,000 subscribed, the number of foundationers has not been increased, and that, the cost of entering a boy on the non-foundation list has increased, and is increasing in this way:—Up to 1874, all officers' sons had the right of entry at the £80 rate, whereas now they have to pass a stiff preliminary examination to compete for even this slight benefit, and the majority of officers' sons have thus to be entered at the civilian rate of £110 a year; yet, if after the loss of more or less length of time, any such boy fails in the competitive examination for the lower rate (and it may here be noted that forty and fifty boys sometimes compete for four or five vacancies,) he must remain in the college at the civilian rate of payment. Moreover, it often happens that, should officers' sons (whose early education is frequently rather defective, consequent on foreign service) fail to pass from the lower to the middle school before the age of 14 years, or from the middle to the upper school before the age of 16, they, in either such event, become superannuated, or, in other words, they are turned out of the College. 4. That the boarding-house system, introduced in 1866 and following years, notwithstanding the condemnatory resort of the School Inquiry Commission was an afterthought of disastrous effect on the general intention and management of the College. The assistant-masters receive pupils on terms varying from £120 to £140 a year, with £20 or £30 extras, and in these boarding-houses a perniciously luxurious style of living is sanctioned in contradistinction to the treatment of the foundationers and others in the College. Also, it is considered that the extra charges for all boys is disproportionately large, amounting on the average to £27 a year. Then, also, the furnishing of rooms is too expensive an item (from £16 to £20) when the scanty means of the parents of the majority of the foundationers and other military students are considered, and it is contended that whereas the Schools Inquiry Commission stated that the best education in England (where the buildings are free) can be given for £60 a year, with possibly £10 or £12 extras, here it cannot be had by the sons of living officers for less than £110, or at the £110 rate (with extras) for less than £146. This may be explained as follows:—Furnishing room, £18; entrance fee, £6; £24,—divide by average number of years in college (four), £6. College charges, £110, extras, £30; brought forward, £6; total, £146. 5. That there are no special classes for boys destined for the Army; and it is also thought that out of twelve scholarships obtainable at the school, some, if not all, of these premiums should be granted to officers' sons only, as at Marlborough School, where such rewards are specially assigned to sons of clergymen. 6. That the accounts have not been made public for many years, while, as stated in the public debate in the House of Commons, the broad fact remains, that upwards of £234,000 has been carried to the capital account of the College, and in return only 80 foundationers are being educated.

Major Dartnell's Report for 1878, as commandant of the Natal Volunteer Force, has the misfortune of being lamentably out of date. To hear in November, 1879, what the Volunteers of Natal did during the year 1878, is to acquire a very inadequate idea of what those men are capable in the way of achievement and self-sacrifice. It is a pity that Major Dartnell has not made up his departmental record to the latest moment. He is able, however, to report the advance of the force to the front, 336 strong in all. He simply testifies to the creditable manner in which the three corps who were with him at Helpmakaar turned out, and to the cheerfulness with which they performed their duty. Major Barrow, he says, "who was in command of the other corps expressed himself as being very much pleased with them." After the varied experiences of the war it, would be more than interesting to hear what Major Dartnell has to say concerning the whole of the forces under his command.

The early promotion of Colonel Woods, of the 8th King's, will leave eighteen Lieutenant-Colonels in the Cavalry and the Infantry of the Line who hold their appointments under the old system, which places them in undisturbed possession of full pay for an unlimited period, whilst all other officers are brought under a hard-and-fast rule, which provides for retirement after five years in the rank. The officers referred to are Colonels Nugent, Scots Greys; Moore, 4th Hussars; MccGwire, 1st Royal Scots; Roberts, 5th Foot; Waller, 7th Foot; Davis, 20th Foot; Mostyn and Prevost, 23rd Foot; Glyn, 24th Foot; Ruddell, 25th Foot; Madden, 51st Foot; Piggott, 70th Foot; Macdonnell, 71st Foot; Kent, 77th Foot; Brown, 83rd Foot; Appleyard, 85th Foot; Stevenson, 87th Foot; and Williams, 109th Foot. We have never failed to point out the disadvantages which not unfrequently result from the operation of the five years' rule, and we should be glad to find an arrangement introduced by which the Horse Guards would have it in their power to retain the services of officers of tried ability for an extra two years. At the same time, we hold that it is a serious injustice to the officers of the regiments mentioned that promotion should in their case remain almost at a stand-still, whilst in all other corps it is guaranteed after fixed periods, for it must be remembered that not only the lieutenant-colonels, but the majors also, have the option of remaining on as long as it suits them to do so, whereas in all other regiments they are got rid of on completing seven years in the rank and 27 years' service. Something ought clearly to be done to meet the difficulty, and failing this, it would be but right to accord brevet promotion in all cases where majors and captains can be shown to have suffered; or the Horse Guards might offer a few steps of unattached promotion on special terms to the seniors in those corps which are found to have been the more seriously affected. As matters stand, the chances which the senior captains have of ever succeeding to commands is remote indeed, and it is not right that such inequalities should exist, nor can the interests of the Service be promoted when all incentives to zeal are removed. The subject is really an important one, —much more important than may at first sight appear.

The 26th Cameronians from Aldershot will occupy the quarters at Chatham vacated by the 2nd Battalion 5th Regiment, which proceeded on Thursday to Portsmouth to embark for India. No decision has yet been arrived at as to what regiment will replace the 26th, and it is quite possible that for the present the lines vacated by them in the North Camp will not be filled up.

We would call the attention to those of our readers who are charitably disposed to a deserving case of real distress, headed, "A Field Officer," whose appeal appears in our advertisement columns of this week. The case is one which will bear the strictest inquiry into it. The officer in question, having been thanked by the Secretary for the Colonies for his conduct with the Ashantees in 1852, and again by Sir Garnet Wolseley in the last Ashantee war, for his valuable services, for which he received a medal.

We earnestly hope that Lord Airey's Committee on Army Reorganisation will not separate without considering the expediency of our drawing from our colonial possessions—such, for instance, as Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and the Cape—a quota of men for Army service. As a correspondent recently pointed out through our columns, Canada could be made to supply a few thousand able-bodied men of excellent physique annually, and the other Colonies would doubtless be able to do the same. It is very essential, apart from all other considerations, that the Colonies should be made to feel that they are part and parcel of the vast British Empire, and no surer means could be found to produce this feeling than by the Home Government adopting such measures as would open to their sons an opportunity, did they see fit to avail themselves of it, of feeding the regular Army, and assisting, in conjunction with those of the mother-country, to maintain the honour and dignity of the empire. The colonists would, we have reason to know, hail with the utmost satisfaction the announcement that the bonds which bind them to the mother-country were thus to be tightened, and the Government would be taking a very wise step were it to call together a Commission specially to consider the matter, and report to it as to the measures desirable to be taken with a view of carrying out the idea, which has emanated from the colonists themselves.

Another French War Minister has resigned, and if he did not use such strong language in the Chamber as was sometimes employed by Marshals Soult and Bugeaud, when badgered by civilians, General Gresley strode out of the House in a very abrupt manner. He threw up office, sooner than reopen an inquiry into the conduct of a colonel of the territorial army who had cried "Vive le Roi!" at a banquet. The colonel was not on duty, and was amenable rather to the civil than the military power. The War Minister, however, had appointed a court of inquiry, and that court had reported against the matter going further. This was not to the taste of the Republicans, hence an interpellation in the Chamber, an angry reply on the part of the War Minister, and his sudden exit. General Gresley had accepted office shortly before the fall of Marshal MacMahon. The Marshal preferred to retire from office, sooner than consent to the removal of several old comrades from their command of army corps. General Gresley, after making some show of resistance, consented to operate the desired changes, and such officers as Generals Bourbaki, Bataille, Du Barail, &c., were placed on the Retired List, in consequence of their supposed political opinions. They had none of them raised a finger against the Republic, but they were regarded as Bonapartists, who might some day be dangerous. General Gresley appears never to have quite forgiven himself for having consented to this sacrifice, which produced a coolness between himself and his old comrades, and the Carayon-Latour affair was simply the last feather which broke the camel's back. All the time he was in office, the General was pestered out of his life by Republican Deputies, demanding decorations, promotion, and employment for their friends; and at last, in a fit of irritation and disgust, he handed in his resignation to the President of the Republic. The new War Minister will be the ninth since the fall of the Empire. That office has been filled by Generals Le Flô, De Cissey, Du Barail, De Cissey (second term), Berthaud, Rochebouët, Borel, and Gresley. The only wonder is, that with all these changes, and the amount of work placed on the shoulders of a French War Minister, who is Secretary of State as well as Commander-in-Chief, or head of the Permanent Staff, the work of reorganisation should have gone on as well as it has done. We may mention that L'Armée Française, which is a Gambettist paper, severely censures M. Raynal, the Republican Deputy, "who, carried away by his readiness of speech, and the plaudits of the majority, and ignorant of military matters, did not sufficiently understand the danger of giving a public lesson to the constitutional chief of a great army."

A friend of ours has favoured us with the following simple statement of his case. He says:—"I was gazetted to an Ensigncy in the Line about sixteen years ago, and on returning from abroad, after some three years' service with my regiment, I was attracted by the inducements held out by the Commissariat Warrant of Nov., 1858, and after making the necessary inquiries on the subject, and satisfying myself as to the nature of the duties, pay, prospects of promotion, and so forth in the Department, I decided, being a poor man, to resign my regimental commission, and accept in lieu a commission as Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General, with the relative rank of Captain. I at once joined at a large station not far from London, where I was received as an honorary member of the regimental mess there established, and found my position, both socially and departmentally, all I had expected or looked for. I liked my new duties, and tried to give satisfaction in my performance of them, in which, I believe, I succeeded. As far as I could, I endeavoured to fulfil my share of the contract, and, I believe, did nothing to lower the Department or to forfeit any of the advantages which I, at that time, possessed in the Service. This state of things continued for about four years, when one day I found myself gazetted a Deputy-Commissary in the so-called Sub-Department of the Control. I had not the option of refusing this appointment, but was invited to accept it in a conciliatory style, similar to that employed upon the sheep in Hood's famous 'Ode to Rae Wilson, Esq.' I soon began to realise the fact that I was in a subordinate department, out of which I could see little or no hope of promotion; that I had the title of a Warrant Officer in the Indian Commissariat; and that I had to perform the duties of a purveyor of hospital stores and of a barrackmaster. To me, this is, I admit, a pure matter of taste (and sometimes smell). These duties were unpleasant and uncongenial, and moreover, I had never undertaken to perform any of them. In addition to this, many regimental officers—most of them Captains—were brought into the Department over my head, in positions from the dizzy height of which they affected to look down upon me as being not even entitled to recognition as a brother-officer at all. Revolving these things in my mind, I arrived—in a blundering way, perhaps—at the conclusion that I had been, to use a common expression, "sold." I then ventured to request that I might be permitted to qualify for the higher grades of the Department by passing through the Staff College, but received in reply to my application nothing either more encouraging or more considerate than a snubbing. Naturally, had I been in a position to leave the department, then I would have done so; but I was not, so I stayed on, filled with zeal and gratitude, and in five years more I received an increase of pay amounting to 1s. 6d. per diem. During these five years, made as happy as possible by the extreme urbanity and good-fellowship of the officers of the senior grades of the Department generally, I gained a perfect knowledge of the fact that, socially as well as departmentally, I had suffered a grievous injury. I found myself excluded from messes and other places where formerly I had been welcomed, and in my relations with the rest of the Service generally, I saw that, whilst the Controllers were accorded the position of gentlemen, I, as belonging to the Sub-Department, was regarded as a person not to be associated with. However, another Warrant made its appearance in 1875, and whilst it was in a state of incubation we were led to believe that in it would be found redress for all wrongs. The only thing it actually effected was the abolition of a few utterly misleading titles in the higher grades of the Department, and the separation of the Commissariat and Transport from the Ordnance Store Branch of the Control. To me, personally, the gain was so exceedingly trifling that I failed then, and have since failed, to appreciate it. Strange to say, the sufferers by control still had their grievances. What could they be? The authorities actually seemed to become aware at last that there were grumblers—people who thought they had not been well used; gentlemen who had once been officers in the Army, who held language which might lead one to believe that they considered themselves duped! So I, amongst others, was invited to submit a statement of my grievances, which I did. I never heard anything more about that respectful representation, but I have reason to believe it was considered altogether too unreasonable that my remonstrance should have taken the shape of a protest against social and professional degradation, whereas it ought to have been simply an humble petition for another 1s. 6d. a day. Only consider for a moment; I had a grievance, and it had nothing to do with money! Monstrous! At all events, apparently incurable, for I have it still. Rumours were soon afloat to the effect that another Warrant was in preparation, and Hope, which we are told "springs eternal in the human breast," resumed her flattering tales. Everything would be put straight at last, and so my almost intolerable position was rendered tolerable only by the idea that there was "a good time coming." This Warrant, which was to redress all grievances, was to be published on April 1, 1878. That eagerly-looked-for day came and passed, but brought no Warrant. Another year of hope deferred, then April 1, 1879, arrived; still no Warrant. Two years had elapsed since a step had been given in the rank of Commissary. Yet it was said that all would be well, the Warrant which was coming would do everything for us when it did come. There was to be no hurry this time. So patience, and shuffle the cards, I said. The 1st October would bring it. The 1st October passed, then November 1, and no Warrant yet. But at last, after months and years of weary waiting and hoping, we have quite lately been put in possession of the leading features of the new scheme. Alas! those well-known features! With what feelings do I recognise them? With anger? Anger is not permitted to me. Despair? Despair is a coward's emotion, I will not despair! Contempt? Am I allowed to feel contempt under the circumstances? If so, contempt is the word. The new scheme, it would appear, provides that the Commissariat is to be officered by Captains from the Line, who on joining the Department are to retain their Army rank and title, whilst the officers at present in the Department are to continue to enjoy their relative rank. So that when one of these recruits joins the Department, and is posted to a company of Army Service Corps, to learn something about Transport work, we will say, the company being commanded by a Deputy-Commissary of, perhaps, fifteen years' service, he, the junior, will be called 'Captain,' whilst his commanding officer will be plain 'Mister.' That is to say, the captain of the company will be 'Mr. Brown,' and the subaltern will be 'Captain Jones.'" After reading the above, our thoughts reverted to Dryden's lines on John Milton's picture, which may be parodied thus:—

> Three Warrants at three different periods framed,
> Our suffering Services have sadly maimed:
> The first, in gross injustice unsurpassed;
> The next, in muddling; and in both, the last.
> The force of Folly can no further go;
> To make a third, she's joined the other two!

A small, but not on that account unimportant, matter which is attracting some attention in Europe, might be, if not decided, at any rate considerably elucidated, if our artillerists would take note of the performances of the Russian Artillery during the late campaign and of our own batteries in Afghanistan. Our field artillery consists of six guns to the battery, the Russian field artillery has eight, though their horse artillery, the artillery attached to divisions, and the light batteries attached to cavalry divisions have only six guns per battery. Is eight or is six the better number for use in the field, and particularly in a rough country? The advocates of six-gun batteries say that when more than one gun is wanted, or fewer than six, a half battery of three offers every advantage. To this it is replied that there are circumstances always arising, under which a force in the field will have ready for use only one battery; that this battery may, and probably will, be required in more places than one; that even where its attention is not divided, the nature of the ground may render it advisable to proceed not by half batteries, but by two-gun detachments, as it was in Tergukasoff's retreat, where one eight-gun battery covered the retrograde movement in the Tahir Pass, working by four sets of alternate twos, where one gun would not have checked the Turks and three could not be brought to bear. In connection with this matter is the question of the proper officering of field artillery, and the advocates of eight-gun batteries seem to think there should be to each of them a major, two captains, and two subalterns. Our experience now may help us to settle this question also. The best thing, in one sense, which has yet been said by the advocates of six-gun batteries, is that the Russians have eight in their batteries, so that their fire may be equal to that of the six-gun batteries of other nations; but a joke will not decide the question, on which, till it is further elucidated, we desire to express no opinion.

There is certainly one point in which the Commission on Army Organisation in India might make some saving without loss of efficiency. The minor appointments in the Judge-Advocate's Department are in the present day unnecessary. They probably were useful, and even requisite, in the days when officers, as a rule, had no knowledge whatever of military law, and courts-martial erred in the simplest application of the letter and spirit of the law. But at the present time, all the junior officers of the Army, whether British or Indian, have had a course of instruction in military law culminating in an examination very little, if at all, inferior to that passed by the candidates for the Judge-Advocate's Department in India, while senior officers have studied military law, as a rule, and the simple errors which at one time may have been common, now comparatively seldom occur. The staff officers of a General are now also generally either Staff-College men, or have been very creditably through a garrison course, and are quite fitted to notice minor errors in the proceedings of a court-martial. This is their regular duty in England, but in India proceedings of a court have invariably to be forwarded to a Deputy-Judge-Advocate; and not alone the proceedings, but the preliminary application for a court-martial, the charge and other papers have to be so forwarded. The result of this is a considerable delay, as a rule; for Deputy-Judge-Advocates are appointed for a circle comprising several stations, of which they take the most important as a residence; the consequence is that, previous to a court-martial, all the papers have to be forwarded by post, however correct they may be. They are then, in the course of a few days, returned by the Deputy Judge-Advocate with a few remarks, generally instructions for the prosecutor, such as "Prove by first witness that the prisoner's kit was complete on the 31st ult., and deficient of etcæteras on the 1st inst. Prove by second witness the same, and that the prisoner was drunk at such a place and such a time, and so on." Then come instructions for the court; such as, if the prisoner be found guilty of making away with articles of his kit, he must be acquitted of the charge of losing by neglect the articles, and so on. As a general rule, both the prosecutor and the court are treated to some elaborate twaddle, pointing out, at as great length as is practicable, some of the simplest and best known principles of military law. After the court is closed, the proceedings are sent direct by the president to the Deputy-Judge-Advocate, and a similarly lengthy series of sententious remarks accompanies them on their return. The whole transaction is looked upon with a kind of good-humoured scorn by the regimental officers of the Army, and the Staff no doubt feel the absurdity of the thing, but have no objection, as they are powerless to mend it, to having a certain amount of trouble taken off their hands. But it is rather hard on the prisoner, who has so many extra days' detention, while the little farce of making work for a Judge-Advocate's department is being gone through; and there seems no reason why the custom that prevails in England, where minor courts are at once examined by the staff officer, and confirmed or otherwise by the General on the spot, should not also prevail in India. Of this, however, there is not much chance without considerable obstruction. If similar occurred in the cases of United Kingdom, for instance, that on a commanding officer in the district sending in an application for a district court-martial to the General at Cork, the application had to be referred to a Deputy-Judge-Advocate living in Dublin, however simple the case might be then returned by him with remarks, and that after the proceedings had closed, the papers had again to go backwards and forwards between Cork and Dublin, some day or other, a Guardsman—supposing, for the argument, Guards quartered at Cork—would be detained from going on leave by the court-martial not being dissolved; there would then be a question put in Parliament, and public attention called for the time to the subject. But nothing of this kind can occur in India, and therefore, unless taken in hand by an Army Commission, things just go on in the old routine style, and that which was serviceable and even requisite fifty years ago, is kept up for no better reason than that "whatever is, is right."

The War Office has decided to set apart a sum of £11,000 for the purpose of providing the new Government House, in course of erection at Portsmouth, as quarters for the General officer commanding the troops in the Southern District. The original estimate was for £7,000, but this sum has now been found insufficient, and £4,000 has been added to allow for the the building of stables and the preparation of the necessary grounds.

We have always maintained that the highly prized and much-coveted decoration of the Victoria Cross should be raised from its present position of a simple decoration to that of an Order, having several grades, the higher ones carrying with them the honour of knighthood; and although this suggestion of ours has not as yet been carried out to its full extent, a step in the right direction has, we are glad to find, at last been taken, which, to a great extent, admits the justice of the claim of those distinguished men who have won the Cross to some adequate recognition of their heroic deeds. This year, for the first time since the institution of the Victoria Cross in 1856 as a decoration for distinguished bravery in the face of the enemy, the roll of those gallant men who wear the Cross is inserted in "Burke's Peerage." This simple act adds the names of our heroes to the long roll of the hereditary nobility of the land, to be handed down to posterity side by side with those of its most ancient families, and it now only remains to effectually place this decoration on a proper footing, for her Majesty to be graciously pleased to convert it into a truly Noble Order, by establishing various grades to the same, the higher ones carrying with them the honour of knighthood, and an adequate pension in the event of seamen or privates attaining to the higher grades. The Iron Cross of Prussia has numerous grades. Why not the Victoria Cross?

Since the institution of the Victoria Cross, as a decoration for distinguished bravery in the face of the enemy, in 1856, it has been bestowed on no less than 368 officers and men belonging to the Naval and Military Services. Seven who gained this decoration died before it was formally conferred upon them, and 27 have died since they received that honour. Of the 368 heroes who have won the Cross, 171 were commissioned officers, and 197 non-commissioned officers and men in both Services.

A disastrous fire took place in Wellington Street, Aldershot, on Christmas Eve, when property to the value of £16,000 was destroyed. The water arrangements were as bad as they possibly could be, and loud complaints have been made by the townspeople of the manner in which martial law was carried out in their own streets by the military authorities, who came down and took entire possession of them. The military fire-brigade, under the command of Quartermaster G. Douglas, was present, and would have rendered valuable assistance but for the fact that the orders given by the superintendent were generally countermanded by the very active General and other officers who were upon the spot. It is but fair, however, to the military to acknowledge that from their point of view, they consider they saved the entire quarter of the town from a general conflagration.

The news of the recent attempt on the lives of their Majesties the King and Queen of Spain caused a thrill of horror to reverberate through the length and breadth, not only of England, but of the whole world. This regicidal attempt has, however, enabled his Majesty the King of Spain to prove himself worthy to lead a brave people. He has also done justice to the early training he received in this country, in suddenly exhibiting that indomitable courage for which Englishmen have long been famed, and for which Spaniards have the highest esteem and regard, considering it to be one of the best attributes of man. The afternoon following the dastardly attempt, the King drove the Queen out in the same phaeton with the same pair of horses and the same servants as he had used the day previously. He drove slowly through the principal streets of Madrid, on his way from the Palace to the Atocha Church, where a thanksgiving service was held, as if inviting those of his subjects who might sympathise with the would-be regicide to repeat the cowardly attack, his Majesty having declined the protection of an escort, preferring to show that he appealed to the love of his people, and not to military force, for the maintenance of his position as their king, and for his life, which he thus showed he trusted freely in their hands. Both going and returning, the large crowds who thronged the streets and the people in the windows of the houses cheered their Majesties enthusiastically and waved their handkerchiefs, some pressing against the carriage, which, as we have stated, had no escort. We heartily congratulate their Majesties both on their narrow escape and on that indomitable courage which must surely endear them to their subjects, and while so doing we wish them both a happy and a prosperous new year, and many of them, a sentiment in which we hope all Spaniards will loyally join.

5th Lancers. Lieut. Morland arrived home from the Cape on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria.

10th Hussars. 2nd Lieut. Saunders sailed for India yesterday, in H.M.S. Crocodile.

15th Hussars. The head-quarters and service troops are to be conveyed home from India in H.M.S. Malabar, on the arrival of the King's Dragoon Guards from the Cape, and telegraphic instructions have been sent out accordingly.

17th Lancers. The depôt has proceeded from Colchester to Canterbury, and joined the cavalry depôt. Qrmr. Berryman, V.C., arrived home from the Cape, on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria.

19th Hussars. The following address was handed to Brevet Major Barrow, C.M.G., prior to his leaving Natal for England :—"Durban, Natal, Oct. 6, 1879.—To Major Barrow, commanding Mounted Volunteers, No. 1 Column, Zululand.—Sir,—Hearing that you are shortly to leave Natal, at the termination of your prolonged, arduous, and distinguished services among us, those of the local volunteers who became aware of it expressed a wish to have conveyed to you, however hurriedly and imperfectly, their regret at your sudden departure, and their warmest and best wishes for your safe voyage, and your future advancement in your profession. Arriving, as you have done, unexpectedly at our port, and your stay in Durban being so short, it prevents us from at this time carrying out our intention of waiting upon you by a representative committee, and personally conveying to you a more substantial evidence of our admiration for and high appreciation of your many excellent qualities as a soldier and a commanding officer, and of expressing, on behalf of the Natal Volunteers who served under you in the recent campaign, the esteem in which you were held by all ranks of the Service. We intend still carrying out part of our original programme by sending after you, for your acceptance, a trifling souvenir of your share in the campaign, and of those who served under you in Zululand. We shall, you may be sure, follow with the greatest interest your future career in your profession, and wishing you every prosperity, we remain, Sir, very faithfully yours (signed by the officers of different mounted volunteer corps)."

'To Capt. Shepstone, D.M. Rifles, Capt. Arbuthnot, A.M. Rifles; Capt. Saner, V.M. Rifles; Capt. Norton, Natal Hussars; Capt. Stainbank, I.M. Rifles; Capt. Addison, S.M. Rifles.—Sirs,—I am very grateful for the kind wishes expressed in your address on my leaving Natal, and I hope that you will express to all the officers, non-commissioned officers, and troopers of your respective corps my sincere thanks for the same. I have no hesitation in saying that I never wish to have under my command a force better mounted, organised, equipped, or better adapted for the work in front of them than the corps of Natal Volunteers which were under my command during the commencement of the Zulu campaign. It has been a continual source of regret to me that by the circumstances of the campaign I was unavoidably deprived of their services in Zululand, within a month after the commencement of active operations. The good service performed by all the corps during that month, and the invaluable service rendered by the Natal Guides throughout the campaign assure me of the value of the force which I had the honour to command. I shall always preserve with pride the souvenir that you propose sending to England, and shall ever have pleasant reminiscences of my connection with the Natal Volunteers. Wishing you one and all every success in the future, I remain, Sirs, very faithfully yours, P. H. Barrow, captain, 19th Hussars."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

A despatch from Major-Gen. Sir F. Roberts, K.C.B., V.C., commanding the Cabul Field Force, to the Chief of the Staff, Army Head-quarters, dated Oct. 30, runs as follows :—"I have the honour to request that you will add to the list of officers enclosed with my No. 625 of Oct. 23 the names of Capt. G. Swinley, No. 2 Mountain Baty., and Capt. H. R. L. Morgan, No. 1 Mountain Baty. Capt. Swinley originally raised the battery which he commands, and its present efficiency and the excellent service he has performed with it during our recent operations and in the expedition to the Khost Valley last winter are mainly ascribed to the unremitting attention he has devoted to its equipment and to the training of his men. Capt. Morgan has commanded No. 1 Baty. to my entire satisfaction since joining his appointment in December, 1878. His services at the Shutargardan on Oct. 14 and 19 have been particularly brought to my notice by Lieut.-Col. Money ; and I am informed that the defeat of the enemy on both occasions was in a large measure due to his effective working of his guns and the extraordinary precision of their fire. I have much pleasure in bringing the names of both these officers to the favourable consideration of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief."

We insert the following letter with the utmost satisfaction, and we only hope that the subject may be fully gone into by Col. Stanley before the publication of the forthcoming Estimates :—"In your paper of the 27th ult., you remark on the "disorganised and unfortunate" Royal Artillery Office in Pall Mall, and while I do not wish in any way to combat the truth of your remarks, yet perhaps you will allow me space to point out that the staff allowed is quite inadequate for carrying on the work of this vast regiment, as at present administered; indeed, the three preceding deputy adjutant-generals may be said to have succumbed to the conscientious discharge of their arduous duties. The promotion, appointment, transfer, and exchange of the officers alone require the sole attention of a confidential officer, and it has been long felt in the regiment that this duty should be confided to an officer taken from their own ranks, and not entrusted, as now, to one from the Coast Brigade, who can scarcely be considered qualified to enter into all the niceties of the position, much as he may desire to do his work properly. Two deputy assistant-adjutant-generals at least are required; one for the records at Woolwich, which at present receive only three-days-a-week attention, and the other to keep a register of the officers' casualties as they take place."

The Morning Post says :—"Speaking the other day at a meeting of the West of Scotland Association, Dr. Cameron, M.P., said he understood the Government had in contemplation the establishment of a school of artillery in Scotland, and if they did so, the ground selected would probably be that of the association at Irvine."

"Lintstock" writes :—"As it has now been decided that all acting-bombardiers and lance-corporals, with pay, are bonâ fide non-commissioned officers, and as such are responsible for the due performance of the duties devolving upon them; their removal from Class 6 to Class 5 of 'Classification for Purposes of Pension' (Art. 1,273 of Revised Army Regulations, vol. 1), would appear to have been overlooked. Otherwise, they are receiving but a scant measure of justice. In a great many cases they have to hold that rank for a long period, more especially in the Royal Artillery, where it is not at all unusual for an acting-bombardier to remain so for two years or more before he gets the next step."

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Capt. J. Dundas, V.C. (late Bengal), and Lieut. C. Nugent were killed by the explosion of a mine, and nine men were wounded, among them Lieut. J. Burn-Murdoch, in the action before Sherpur on the 23rd ult. Capt. Dundas obtained his commission as first lieutenant in June, 1860, and served in the Bhootan expedition of 1865, and, in company with Capt. W. S. Trevor, was awarded the Victoria Cross for gallant conduct at the attack on the blockhouse at Dewan Gui on April 30, of that year. Major-Gen. Tombs, C.B., V.C., the officer in command at the time, in recording the act of gallantry, remarked that a part of the enemy, from 180 to 200 in number had barricaded themselves in the blockhouse in question, which they continued to defend after the rest of the position had been carried and the main body was in retreat. The blockhouse, which was loopholed, forced the key of the enemy's position. Seeing no officer of the storming party near, and being anxious that the place should be taken immediately, as any protracted resistance might have caused the main body of the Bhooteas to rally, the British force having been fighting in a broiling sun on very steep and difficult ground for upwards of three hours, the General in command ordered these two officers to show the way into the blockhouse. They had to climb up a wall which was 14 ft. high, and then to enter a house occupied by some 200 desperate men, head foremost, through an opening not more than 2 ft. wide between the top of the wall and the roof of the blockhouse. Major-Gen. Tombs states that on speaking to the Sikh soldiers around him, and telling them in Hindustani to swarm up the wall, none of them responded to the call until these two officers had shown them the way, when they followed with the greatest alacrity. They were both wounded. Lieut. Nugent was a son of Major-Gen. Nugent, and entered the Service, Aug. 2, 1871.

Capt. W. Broadfoot, R.E., writes to the Times from 94 Piccadilly under date Dec. 29 :—"The telegram in this morning's paper brings the sad news of the death of Capt. James Dundas, R.E., V.C., while destroying village forts in the neighbourhood of Cabul. In Capt. Dundas the Service has lost one of its most gallant members. You have in another column briefly narrated how he won his Victoria Cross. The following incident, known only to those who were resident in Simla in 1878, will show that his bravery did not require the stimulus of active service with its possible rewards in order to show itself :—A house near the bazaar was burning, and the roof had partly given way, when the cries of a native, on whom the débris had fallen, and who was thus shut in to be burnt to death or suffocated, arrested passers-by, and a crowd collected. Pushing his way through the people, he went straight in, but was driven out by falling rubbish and by smoke. He called for a volunteer to help him, when a gallant officer of the Royal Artillery responded, and again he went in, this time succeeding, at the expense of some pretty severe burns, in getting hold of the native and restoring him to his friends. Capt. Dundas was for many years in the Public Works Department, and latterly was associated with Gen. Sir Alexander Taylor, K.C.B., in charge of one of the principal branches of that department. His success in civil work gave promise of high future advancement, which his undeniable talent would have fully justified."

We regret to observe that Major Thackeray, V.C., R.E., has been severely wounded in an attack, on Dec. 24, on Jagdalak, where Col. Norman has been repeatedly assailed. Now that the main body of the levies—the result of the recent rising in Afghanistan—has been defeated, it is probable that we shall hear less of the harassing attacks upon our lines of communication, which have recently been incessant.

A Daily News' telegram from Alexandria states that Gordon Pasha has arrived at Suez by the steamer Senaar.

Col. J. Y. Moggridge, at present commanding R.E. at Edinburgh, has been appointed commanding R.E. in the eastern district, vice Col. F. M. H. Somerset, removed to Aldershot. Col. Moggridge does not assume his duties in his new command until the first week in February.

Col. W. W. Goodfellow, C.B. (late Bombay), has been granted special leave from India to England for two years, from Sept. 3, 1879.

Brevet Major W. H. Collins, lately employed on special committee duty at Simla, rejoins the home establishment, and returns shortly to England from India.

Lieut. F. W. Watkins and Vet.-Surg. W. B. Walters arrived home from the Cape on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria.

Lieut.-Col. G. E. Watson, Capt. on the Retired Full-pay List (late Bengal), died at Eton Villa, the Park, Cheltenham, on the 28th ult., aged 51 years. The deceased served with Havelock's Force during the first advance on Lucknow, and as brigade-major of Engineers at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde; afterwards present at the siege and capture of Lucknow (medal with two clasps and brevet of major). He entered the Army Dec. 11, 1846, and retired with the rank of Lieut.-Col., March 4, 1868.

5th Fusiliers. The 2nd Batn. left Chatham on Thursday morning, en route to Portsmouth, to embark in H.M.S. Crocodile. The battalion consists of Col. Bigge, Brevet Lieut.-Col. Pocklington; Brevet Majors FitzRoy and Oldfield; Capts. Robinson, Græme, Carleton, Hackett, and Hargreave; Lieuts. Cherry (adjt.), Heathcote, Biddulph, Williamson, Lambton, Orred, and Armstrong; 2nd Lieuts. Sturges, Carter, Hill, Hore, Stewart, Pilcher, Etheridge, Dashwood, Colvin, and Braithwaite; Pymr. (Capt.) Wade, and Qrmr. Downey; 50 serjeants, 17 drummers, 675 men, 61 women, and 60 children. A correspondent writes from Chatham :—"I think the editor of the principal Service journal ought to he kept au courant with the movements of the military, therefore, I send you a few lines anent the departure of 2nd Batn. 5th. The regiment fell in on its parade at a quarter to 7 o'clock punctually this morning (Thursday), and at 10 minutes past 7, headed by the band of the 86th Regt., it marched off, and as the railway station is within ten minutes walk of the barracks, it was not long before the regiment arrived. However, with the usual punctuality of the L.C.D.R. authorities, there was no train ready, and the light baggage, which had preceded the regiment half-an-hour, was still at the station doors unloaded. Every arrangement had long since been perfectly made by the military authorities, but somehow or other the railway official did not come up to time, the consequence being the detention of the regiment in a dirty small space outside the station for at least half an hour before the first company could get on to the platform. During this detention the troops were surrounded by the scum of Chatham, including in its composition numbers of low prostitutes, whose language was anything but parliamentary. The soldiers on certain occasions have many friends, and on this these so-called friends were busy plying Tommy Atkins with pots of beer, and, in several instances, with bottles of brandy or whisky, thereby doing everything in their power to aid in making the poor fellows drunk. The men themselves were generally very quiet and orderly. It was not until 9 o'clock that the last train started with the Northumberland Fusiliers, on their way to Portsmouth. Now, it is a notorious fact that the Chatham station of the L.C.D.R. is a disgrace to the directors. It is small, dirty, and inconvenient, and seeing that it is generally the station from which troops leave and at which they arrive to this command, the Government ought to take measures accordingly, and force the directors to make proper provision for the Service. At all important stations near which large bodies of troops are stationed, there should be a Government platform, spacious enough to accommodate a strong battalion when drawn up in line. This platform might, when not required for military purposes, be used by the general public. By some such arrangement a regiment could be at once marched into the station, and await its train in peace and some comfort, instead of, as in this instance, having to wait outside in mud and rain, and being subject to the demoralising element of a low, disgusting, and disreputable crowd. Most elaborate instructions have been drawn up for the guidance of commanding officers and others with reference to the proper method of embarking in and disembarking from railway trains; but until the Government take the matter in hand, as already suggested, these instructions, as a rule, are simply rendered null and void. The regiment marched in great-coats and forage-caps, each man carrying his bag containing sea-kit, &c. Why the regiment should have been compelled to parade in the dark, making it almost impossible for the officer to see whether the men were sober or not or whether they were properly dressed, it is impossible to say. The 23 volunteers from the 24th were certainly not the best specimens of British soldiers. We are all exceedingly sorry to part with the 5th, and the 86th gave the officers a farewell dinner last night."

11th Regiment. A destructive fire broke out at Higher Barracks, Exeter, occupied by the 34th Brigade Depôt, on Sunday morning last. It occurred in the block of buildings opposite the entrance, used as the officers' quarters, and the whole of the block was reduced to a shell in three or four hours. The fire was first observed in a bedroom in the quartermaster's apartments, the inmates of which awoke betwen 4 and 5 o'clock to find flames coming up through the floor from the room below. An alarm was at once raised, and the whole of the men in barracks turned out very promptly. Col. Drewe, the officer in command, at once took the direction of affairs in his hands, and worked thoughout the morning with praiseworthy zeal. By his orders the safety of the inmates of the quartermaster's apartments was first seen to. The quartermaster, who was confined to his bed by an attack of pleurisy, had to be removed in the bedding, it being impossible to dress him; and the members of his family had only time to put on a garment or two, and make a hurried exit. They saved very little beyond what they wore, and so far as individuals are concerned, they are the heaviest sufferers. It is calculated that the damage done to the buildings amounts to at least £2,000, to say nothing of the furniture and clothing destroyed. Nothing is known as to the cause of the fire.

14th Regiment. Capt. Morris, 1st Batn., sailed for India yesterday, in H.M.S. Crocodile.

21st Fusiliers. The 2nd Batn., under Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hazlerigg, was moving up to Fort Olifant from Fort Weeber on Nov. 21, to prepare for the attack on Secocoeni. A correspondent from Wakkerstroom writes to complain, "in the name of a quiet neighbourhood, of bugles on the brain on the part of the commanding officer. Between bagpipes and bugles there is no peace," he says, "within miles of the regiment. There is too much of a good thing, and perhaps Major Hazlerigg will get a hint from Sir Garnet Wolseley, when he is in his vicinity, that there is such a thing as trop de zele in bugling, piping, and drilling." Brevet Major Jackson, 1st Batn., left England for India yesterday, in H.M.S. Crocodile. A correspondent, writing from Pagwana Hill, Transvaal, on Nov. 10, says :—"The head-quarters and four companies of the 94th Regt. leave this camp to-morrow, their destination being Fort Oliphant. Major Hazlerigg remains with the 21st Fusiliers at this camp; but it is probable the gallant Scots will have another opportunity of adding additional laurels to their colours, which have floated victoriously in many a hard and well-contested battle-field. The regiment is being kept well intact, and will probably bear the brunt of the Secocoeni campaign."

24th Regiment. The 2nd Batn. is timed to reach Gibraltar about the 25th inst., in the s.s. Ontario, from Natal.

25th Regiment. 2nd Lieut. Corfield sailed for India yesterday, in H.M.S. Crocodile.

29th Regiment. Capt. Claremont sailed for India yesterday in H.M.S. Crocodile.

34th Regiment. Lieut. Martin is a candidate for the Indian S.C., and has been appointed to the 1st Goorkhas, on probation.

35th Regiment. Capt. and Pymr. Dowdall, Pay Department, having arrived at Malta on the 14th ult., was taken on the strength of the garrison from that date, and appointed to his old regiment for duty.

39th Regiment. Capts. Bradford and Malet sailed yesterday for India in H.M.S. Crocodile.

54th Regiment. Head-quarters and four companies are now stationed at Delhi, having moved there from Fort William, the other four companies being in Rangoon, British Burmah. The distribution of the officers is as follows:—In East Indies, at Delhi—Lieut.-Col. Shiffner, Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hughes, Capts. Wilkinson and Wingfield, Lieut. and Adjt. Ruddach, Lieuts. Broughton and Bowring, 2nd Lieuts. Hall, Haines, Rowcroft, Prior, Pollard, and Lushington; Paymr. and Hon. Major Hewson, and Qrmr. Nettles. The remainder of the officers who are on foreign service are with the wing at Rangoon.

57th Regiment. The Cape Times says:—"We announced some days ago that Gen. Wood had, after consultation with the War Office, declined the commandantship of the Colonial Forces in South Africa. Col. Clarke, of the 57th Regiment, has since been offered it, and has accepted it conditionally on the approval of the War Office. Col. Clarke was in command of the column which was formed for the second advance on Ulundi, the capture of Cetewayo, the pacification of Zululand, and the subjugation of the Zulu tribes near the middle drift of the Tugela River. Col. Clarke was a passenger by the Arab, which left last week for England." Capt. Weigall is a candidate for appointment to the Army Pay Department, and has been attached to the pay office of the 82nd Regiment at Dublin, during the period of his probationary duty. Three hundred men were transferred on Saturday evening to the 77th Regiment, the linked battalion, and were sent from the Royal to Beggar's Bush Barracks, Dublin. Two officers and 200 men rejoined at the Royal Barracks on Saturday evening from Ship Street Barracks.

66th Regiment. 2nd Lieut. Honywood sailed for India yesterday in H.M.S. Crocodile.

67th Regiment. In the engagement with the Safis in which Capt. Poole was wounded, the following men of the regiment were killed, viz. :—Ptes. Palmes, Kearl, and Burton, of B Compy. The following were wounded :—Lance-Serjt. Edwards, Pte. Hearsey, and Corpls. Wooley and Heath, the last dangerously. Capt. White left Cabul on Nov. 17 to join the depôt companies. Major Cardew has been invalided. The latter officer was most unfortunate in losing his tent and all its contents at the explosion of the Bala Hissar. Capt. Blundell has joined head-quarters. Capt. Dunlop is about to retire from the Service.

68th Light Infantry. Lieut. Goad is a candidate for the Indian S. C. and has been appointed to the 12th Bengal Cavalry, in probation.

70th Regiment. Lieut. Delamain is a candidate for the Indian S. C., and has been appointed to the 4th Bengal Cavalry, on probation.

71st Highland Light Infantry. The head-quarters and service companies will embark at Gibraltar for Scotland about the 26th inst., it is believed, proceeding home in the steamship Ontario, now en route from Natal with the 2nd Batn. 24th.

72nd Highlanders. The following correspondence appears in the Lahore paper :—"From Lieut.-Col. Clarke, commanding 72nd Highlanders, to the Editor of the Civil and Military Gazette, Lahore. Camp, Sherpur, Cabul, Nov. 19, 1879.—Sir,—In the Civil and Military Gazette of Oct. 28, 1879, there appears a letter headed 'The march to Cabul, from our special correspondent, dated Camp, near Cabul, Oct. 13, 1879,' the latter part o which, in my opinion, has but one interpretation, viz., that the regiment referred to, as having committed cruelties, &c., on wounded Afghans at the action of Charasiab, on Oct. 6 last, is the 72nd Highlanders, the regiment I had the honour to command on that date. In contradiction of this, I now enclose a copy of a letter from Surg.-Major Bourke, A.M.D., the special correspondent, denying that he alluded to the 72nd Highlanders, and have the honour to request you will be good enough to give publication to the same in your newspaper, and also to this my letter at the same time. I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, W. H. J. Clarke, Major and Brevet Lieut.-Col., commanding 72nd Highlanders. Copy of a letter from Surg.-Major Bourke, A.M.D., to Col. Clarke, commanding 72nd Highlanders, dated Cabul, Nov. 14, 1879 :—Sir,—Having been called on to state that it was not your regiment who were concerned in cruelties to the wounded, I have much pleasure in doing so, as already stated by me a fortnight ago, to the Chief of the Staff. I have already telegrammed to all the newspapers for which I correspond, stating that your regiment was not the one concerned.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, Isodore Bourke, M.B., Surg.-Major. To the Deputy-Surg.-Gen. R. H. Murray, Lieut. and Adjt. 72nd Highlanders, Camp Sherpur, Cabul, Nov. 19, 1879." Capt. F. G. Sherlock, late of the regiment, died at Wick Lodge, West Brighton, on the 27th ult., aged 41 years.

73rd Regiment. Sub-Lieut. Inglis, a probationer, officiating wing officer 25th Bombay N.I., is about to be admitted to the Bombay S.C. from July 3, 1877.

74th Highlanders. The Straits Times has the following :—"The band of the 74th Highlanders has been taxed rather severely lately. On Wednesday afternoon it played on the Esplanade, at the Gardens by moonlight last night, and to-morrow night it will chime out its public farewell to Singaporeans on the Esplanade. The officers of the 74th have been the most obliging to the public that we have yet had the good fortune to meet here. The Orontes, which will take the regiment home, is expected on Dec. 1, but it is likely the embarkation will not take place for a few days after, and, it is hoped so, for all are anxious that the Pipers' pibroch will be heard at St. Andrew's Ball, which takes place on Dec. 2."

77th Regiment. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Colquhoun has applied for permission to retire from the Service, receiving the value of his commission.

78th Highlanders. The Bombay Gazette has the following :—"What do the Ross-shire Buffs at Poona say to the following, taken from the Madras Mail?—'Was there not a beautiful picture painted, when the memories of Cawnpore and Lucknow were yet green in every mind, of a "puir lassie" on the walls (?) of the latter city, with an angelic, semi-inspired expression of countenance, holding up her hand, and exclaiming to her companion, a Highland soldier,—"Do ye na hear them ?—the pibrochs! They come! they come!" And was there a man, woman, or child in all Scotland who did not firmly believe the artist's lovely idyl, and that the "Relief of Lucknow" was entirely accomplished by Highlanders? The truth being ("hoot man!") that there was neither a pibroch nor a Scottish corps among the warriors who followed Havelock.' The story of Jessie Campbell is, of course, an exaggeration, but it is a fact that the Highlanders of the 78th were the first of Havelock's troops to enter the besieged Residency. Our benighted contemporary commits a few more blunders like the above in the leading article from which we quote. He says :—'During the Crimean war, a vast deal of honour was laid at the feet of Caledonia. Although the brunt of the battle of Alma and the greater portion of the loss fell upon the 33rd and 23rd Welsh Fusiliers, Colin Campbell's apocryphal "thin red line" figured most prominently in the tale of the fight, and in the pictures of it.' Of course, everybody, except the Madras Mail, knows that the famous 'thin, red line' was an incident of the battle of Balaclava, not of the Alma. To prevent another such exhibition of ignorance, it would be advisable for the Madras Mail, before attempting to criticise the military history of English, Scotch, or Irish regiments, to read up the subject." The late Sir Alexander W. Grierson, Bart., who died suddenly on Saturday last at Southsea, was formerly in the Ross-shire Highlanders.

80th Regiment. Lieut. Chamberlain arrived home from the Cape on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria. When we heard from the Transvaal, Major Creagh was superintending the movement of the companies at Lydenburg and Fort Burgers, for the attack on Secocoeni, and doing really excellent work.

82nd Regiment. Christmas Day was observed with due solemnity in the regiment, and nothing was left undone which could promote feelings of good-fellowship and esprit de corps. Lieut.-Col. Walters offered to the companies his annual prizes for the most tastefully decorated barrack-room, and the result showed that his idea was thoroughly appreciated. In fact, so close was the competition, that the committee, composed of Major Briggs, Qrmr. Slade, and Serjt.-Major McCoy, who were appointed to decide the knotty question, found it most difficult to know to whom to award the prize. Eventually, "G" (Capt. Capel's) Compy. received the first prize, the band was second; and the prize for the detachment at Ship Street was carried off by "B" (Capt. Nicholson's) Compy.

83rd Regiment. Capt. Wyndham has leave from India to Ceylon from Nov. 27 last to Feb. 26, on med. certificate.

87th Fusiliers. The Irish Times says:—A splendid golden eagle, which has been named 'Young Barossa,' has been presented to the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers, stationed at Limerick, by Gen. Sir C. H. Doyle, K.C.M.G., colonel of the regiment, in commemoration of the glorious 15th of March, 1811, when the 'Faughs' captured the 'eagle' of the French Infantry Regiment at the battle of Barossa. This beautiful bird measures eight feet from the tip of one wing to the end of the other, and is confined in a large iron-wire house in the barrack square, which bears an inscription to the above effect on a brass plate.

90th Light Infantry. 2nd Lieuts. Lysons and Custance left England yesterday in H.M.S. Crocodile for India.

94th Regiment. Head-quarters were at Lydenburg when we heard from the Cape, and the regiment had been informed that it would remain in South Africa, probably in the Transvaal, for the next two years. The companies at Fort Olifant, under Major Anstruther, have had very hard work,—fatigues, waggon loading and unloading, convoys, casting bullets, &c. Major Anstruther has lost a valuable horse from the sickness. Capt. Froom and Mr. Cowper are stationed there, and the constant arrival and passage of officers inflict a heavy tax, most cheerfully borne, on the hospitality of the little mess, where every article is of fabulous cost, and there is the greatest scarcity of the most ordinary necessaries of life. The regiment, we are told, is "in fine spirits and health, in spite of bad weather and worse clothing." A correspondent writes :—"I wish 'the Duke' could see the men of the 94th at Fort Olifant. They would scarcely be taken for British soldiers. Many of them wear trousers of coarse, burnt sienna-coloured fustian. Their tunics are in rags, patched and stained, and their battered helmets, without spikes or badges, look like dirty conical nightcaps. The sentries carry cowtail flappers to keep off the flies, which concentrate round them in clouds, and the presence of our native allies has rendered us familiar with strange bedfellows. Millipedes, a foot long and as thick as one's finger, wander about the tents, the insides of which are black with flies."

95th Regiment. Capt. St. John joins the Brigade Depôt at Derby, vice Capt. Shaw.

97th Regiment. Capt. P. L. Melvill died at the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. W. H. Knocker, Dunmow, on the 22nd ult., aged 29 years. He entered the Army, Sept. 16, 1868; became Lieut., Sept. 3, 1870; and Capt., June 12, 1878. Lieut. Bevan will, most probably, obtain the vacant company.

99th Regiment. Capt. Story arrived home from the Cape on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria.

Rifle Brigade. Consequent on Gen. Watson's resignation of the Kurum command, the military control of this important valley has fallen to Gen. Tytler; and Col. Newdigate, C.B., 4th Batn., will command a brigade under him with the rank of brigadier-general.

2nd West India Regiment. Lieut. Kerans, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed to the 14th Bengal Infantry, on probation.

Commissariat and Transport Department. Deputy-Comy.-Gen. E. Morris, C.B., arrived home from the Cape on Sunday last in the steamer Pretoria. At a parade of the Army Service Corps at Maritzburg last month, Corpl. F. Attwood, Army Service Corps, was presented by Assist.-Comy.-Gen. Healy, in the presence of the officers and men of the Corps, with a medal for distinguished conduct and gallantry in the defence of Rorke's Drift.

Ordnance Store Department. Deputy-Comy.-Gen. G. Munro has arrived home from Malta, on leave of absence.

Medical Department. Surg.-Gen. T. Crawford, M.D., who has been ordered to India, proceeds in the first place to Madras to relieve Surg.-Gen. Gordon, M.D., C.B., and will at some later period be transferred to Bengal, to take over the duties of P.M.O., British troops in India. Surg.-Gen. Ker Innes, C.B., has obtained an extension of time in his present appointment. Depty.-Surg.-Gen. J. E. Moffatt has been appointed P.M.O. of the Dublin District, in succession to Depty.-Surg.-Gen. E. Gilborne. The Civil and Military Gazette says :—"We apprehend that some dissatisfaction is felt among the officers of the Army Medical Department on the subject of the reliefs to be carried out this season. We are informed that some medical officers who have not completed their tour of Indian service, are under orders to return to England by the early troopships, while others who have been already detained in the country beyond their time are to continue serving in India, and have not yet been informed when they are to be relieved. That service in Afghanistan may have been taken into account in causing some alterations in the roster, we can understand, but it would seem that there are cases which cannot be explained by this hypothesis, and we have heard complaints which might be readily removed by a stricter attention to the understood routine of reliefs."

Army Hospital Corps. The death is announced as having occurred at Bath Road, Hounslow, of pensioned Serjt.-Major A. Cunningham. Deceased was one of the very few survivors of Sale's "illustrious garrison" of Jellalabad, and of those who marched through the Bolan and Khyber Passes. He served in the 13th Light Infantry during the campaign in Afghanistan in 1841-2, and was present at the storming of Khoord Cabul Pass, Oct. 12, 1841; affair of Tezun, Oct. 22; forcing of the Jugdullack Pass, Oct. 29; reduction of Fort Mamoo Khail, Nov. 5; defence of Jellalabad and the sorties of Nov. 14 and Dec. 1, 1841 (gunshot wound through wrist), and March 11, March 24, and April 1, 1842; general action and defeat of Sirdar Mahomet Akbhar Khan before Jellalabad, April 7, 1842 (wounded); storming the heights of Jugdullack, Sept. 8; general action of Tezun, Sept. 13; recapture of Cabul, Sept. 15; proceeded to Bamian Sept. 18, under Sir R. Sale, for the purpose of bringing in the Cabul captives (Lady Sale, &c.). Also served throughout the Crimean war, 1854-5, and the China war of 1857-8.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

SOUTHPORT.—Certainly, if there are vacancies.

E. W. M. (Montreal).—English, 130,446; Scotch, 15,020; Irish, 39,507, according to last returns.

AN UNFORTUNATE R.V.—Your letter is a most ungentlemanly one, and we must refuse to give it insertion. The head of the Department certainly is not acting unfairly in requiring all to take their share of Foreign Service, and it is others who should complain, not you.

SERGEANT-MAJOR.—The explanation is highly creditable to you.

NORTHFLEET.—(1.) Only those who are entering the Army have to undergo this examination. (2.) The regiment referred to must be an exceptional one.

CAPTAIN BY PURCHASE, Dublin.—You may rest assured we will not lose sight of the case, which we consider a shamefully hard one.

C. P.—Many thanks. We are waiting an opportunity to bring the matter forward, which we shall do, most certainly.

SHORNCLIFFE.—We make it a rule not to notice such matters, for our space is too valuable. Thanks all the same for your friendly letter, which is much appreciated.

Army and Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 3, 1880.

A MOST curious fact has been brought to light by the correspondence, to which we have opened our columns on the subject of Military Rank, viz., that many Militia officers consider that they have a perfect right to assume their military titles in private life, but at the same time question the equal right of their brethren of the Volunteers. Now, we should like to know on what authority our Militia correspondents assert this superiority. All are officers of the Auxiliary Forces, civilians, that is to say, called upon occasionally to bear arms; all are in possession of the same commissions; and, though—we regret to have to say it—there is, in some cases, a marked difference between the social status of the two Services, this in itself makes no difference between the relative positions of the two Services, which are both, and ever must be, auxiliary to the first Line, made up of those who are soldiers by profession. The very fact of this jealousy existing between the Militiamen and the Volunteers is the strongest argument which could possibly be put forward in support of the Regular officer's grievance. No Militiaman would, of course, have the audacity to argue that he is by profession, a soldier, any more than a Volunteer is a soldier. But so far as we understand it, the protest entered by the Regular Army is that their rank—which, be it remembered, they fight for, and sacrifice their health in obtaining—is lowered, owing to the vast number of colonels, majors, and captains met in society—and out of it—who have never seen a shot fired in anger, and who have been enjoying comfortable ease on their country estates, or following commercial pursuits and accumulating fortunes, whilst their younger brothers in the Line have been bearing the heat and burden of the day in tropical climes on a miserable pittance which goes by the humble designation of "pay,"—it would scarcely be in keeping to call it a salary. Far be it from us to attempt to depreciate the very praiseworthy exertions which are made by all ranks of officers in the Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers to render service to the State. We hold that it is most creditable to the country at large that men should be found to come forward, as they do, and devote a vast amount of time and, in the case of the Yeomanry and Volunteers, large sums of money, too, with the view of augmenting the Regular forces, in case of national emergency. At the same time, we consider it our duty to point out, as friends of those Services, that very serious injury is being done them by those officers who assume titles which they ought to—indeed, they must see—belong wholly and solely to the profession of arms, and which, though given to them by the Sovereign, were conferred for parade purposes, and parade purposes only. No man of gentlemanly feeling, knowing a friend to hold a commission, would fail to give him the benefit of his rank in writing to or introducing him, unless he was aware that the conferring of the military title occasioned annoyance to the hearer. We ask our friends of the Militia and Volunteers, would it not be "better form" for them to discontinue calling themselves Colonels, Majors, and Captains, and leave it to the good sense of the Army to accord them those titles voluntarily, than to make use of their rank, and even advertise it on their visiting-cards, and thus lay themselves open to sneers and jeers, not among soldiers alone, but at the hands of that ever large section of society made up of what, for the want of a better term, we will call civilians pure and simple? Unfortunately, the men who assume the rank are not those who hear the observations of society on the subject. Could they do so, how few would continue the practice! Our remarks are penned in all friendliness, and with their publication we think it desirable to close a correspondence on a question which we have allowed to be fully discussed on both sides, and which certainly has done much, as we say, to strengthen the case of those who first brought the matter forward. There are some, professedly friends of the Militia and Volunteers, who doubtless will continue to say that those Services have not only a claim, but an absolute right to their rank. We do hope and trust that in their own interests, and in the interests of the valuable forces of which they are members, our readers of the Militia and Volunteers will—at any rate, the more right-minded among them—see the propriety of so modifying their views in future as to allow their friends to designate them "Captains" if they will, but not be guilty of such bad taste as to take their rank of their own accord, when they have laid aside their uniforms and resumed their civilian garb.

H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief will hold a Levée at one o'clock, on Thursday next, at the Horse Guards, Whitehall, the number being limited to 150. Applications to attend should be addressed to the Military Secretary.

We understand that the Horse Guards have menaced Colonel Baker Russell, 13th Hussars, with the penalty of "seconding" him, if he does not at once rejoin his regiment, from which he has been absent, we should be sorry to say how long. Colonel Russell can scarcely complain of being unfairly treated, for the wording of the Warrant on the subject is plain enough, and his case is being quoted everywhere, in support of the argument that one set of regulations are made to affect the members of a certain clique, whilst the general body of officers are governed by another, and are brought under a hard-and-fast rule, which in their case is allowed on no account to be set aside.

Brevet Major E. R. P. Woodgate, 4th Regiment, lately employed on the staff of Brigadier-General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., in Zululand, has been offered, and has accepted, the brigade-majorship at Jamaica, which fell vacant some time ago, by the death of Captain N. Y. Lloyd, 82nd Regiment.

We understand that the following officers have had their names noted for employment on the Staff in India, if they care to accept it, in recognition of their services recently in Afghanistan, viz.:—Brevet Lieutenant-Colonels A. H. A. Gordon, 65th Regiment; G. U. Prior, 100th Regiment; W. Galbraith, 85th Regiment; G. B. Wolseley, 65th Regiment; and Brevet Majors H. J. Faircloth, 81st Regiment; G. W. Smith, 85th Regiment; F. S. S. Brind, 17th Regiment; A. S. Wynne, 51st Regiment; H. R. Abadie, 9th Lancers, and G. de C. Morton, 6th Regiment. Several of these officers are now employed with the army operating against the native tribes, whilst others have been invalided to England.

Major-General E. G. Bulwer, C.B., from the command of the Chatham District, took up the duties of Inspector-General of Recruiting at the Horse Guards on Thursday, vice Lieutenant-General E. A. Whitmore, C.B., whose period of Staff service has expired.

Can it really be true, as reported, that the War Office has decided to reward the devotion and great ability shown by Commissary-General Sir Edward Strickland, K.C.B., whilst in charge of the Commissariat and Transport arrangements at the Cape, by shelving him when the new system comes in. In more senses than one would Sir Edward Strickland be a loss to the Commissariat; and we can only hope that a contradiction will be given to a statement which has naturally create considerable dissatisfaction not alone in the ranks of the Commissariat Department, but throughout the country. It is to be feared that there is more than meets the eye in this decision of the War Office, if decision it is, for Sir Edward Strickland's character is well known among the officers of his department, and we can quite understand some in office regarding him with feelings of anxiety, more especially after his recent achievements.

The distinguished-service reward vacant by the death of Lieutenant-General A. C. Goodenough, C.B., has been conferred upon Colonel W. Bellairs, C.B., half-pay unattached, Deputy Adjutant and Quartermaster-General at the Cape of Good Hope. Colonel Bellairs was present with the 2nd Division throughout the Eastern campaign of 1854-56, from the landing in Turkey to the evacuation of the Crimea, including the battle of Alma (as adjutant, 49th Regiment) and Inkerman (where he led into action a detached wing of his regiment), siege and fall of Sebastopol, and affair of October 26; attack of the Quarries on June 7, and of the Redan on June 18 and September 8 (mentioned in despatches "for distinguished conduct"); appointed deputy-assistant-quartermaster-general in December, 1854, and assistant-quartermaster-general to the 2nd Division at the close of the campaign (medal with three clasps, brevet of major, Knight of the Legion of Honour, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). Served also in both campaigns at the Cape, under Lord Chelmsford, as deputy-adjutant and quartermaster-general (mentioned in despatches, C.B.). He entered the Army, May 8, 1846, and became colonel, August 22, 1873.

Captain H. M. E. Brunker, 26th Cameronians, lately returned from active service at the Cape, and previously on the Staff at Dublin, has been appointed Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General of the Southern District, vice Captain H. L. Dundas, 15th Regiment, whose period of Staff service has expired from the 1st inst.

The Government of Canada having lately been petitioned by the citizens of Montreal to provide a permanent garrison for their city, in the shape of a British regiment, has had the subject of defence brought before it in a definite form, and is rather perplexed as to the best course to pursue in order to meet the demands of the Dominion. The Marquis of Lorne is himself strongly wedded to the idea of an armed military police, but the proposal does not find favour with the public, who seem to prefer the scheme lately submitted by General Sir Edward Selby Smyth, K.C.M.G., commanding the Dominion Militia, according to which five Infantry battalions would be permanently maintained. The subject is one that is likely to occasion considerable discussion shortly, the upper and middle classes having apparently become convinced that some more reliable means should be found for securing the protection of property than that offered by the present local Militia, which, good though it is in its way, is wanting in mobility, and could not fail to be tainted were political differences to arise to occasion an uprising of the populace.

As we stated some months ago was probable, Major-General C. C. Fraser, V.C., C.B., has been appointed Brigadier-General commanding at the Curragh Camp and Inspector-General of Cavalry in Ireland, from the 1st inst., vice Major-General W. H. Seymour, C.B., whose period of Staff service has expired.

Captain F. W. Graham, 103rd Fusiliers, Garrison Instructor at Devonport, has been transferred to Shorncliffe, vice Captain E. M. Roe, 23rd Fusiliers, who reverts to regimental duty, on the expiration of his period of appointment.

Captain L. V. Swaine, Rifle Brigade, has been transferred from St. Petersburg to Constantinople, as Military Attaché.

A portion of a paper called the Herald of Peace, of whose existence we have hitherto been unaware, has been sent us, with certain passages marked. These passages occur in an article entitled "The Mania of Militarism," in which the writer rebukes the nation for its admiration of the champions of its honour and interests, depreciates the exploits of our soldiers, and impertinently takes her Majesty to task for showing sympathy for "these fighting-men." It is difficult to conceive anything more silly than this precious production. Neither the Queen nor her brave soldiers would, we imagine, be moved to anything but contemptuous laughter, were they to read the twaddle to which we allude. It is not likely, however, to come in the way of either, and we may, therefore, without further comment, dismiss the Herald of Peace to its suitable destination.

Colonel Collingwood and his friends are really entitled to information as to the cause of the marked slight passed upon that officer by excluding him from the list of Zulu honours. It was, judging from precedent, almost a matter of course that he should have been created a C.B., yet he has not even received a prize in the consolation stakes,—the Order of St. Michael and St. George. If Colonel Collingwood has been guilty of any offence, or displayed incapacity, why was he allowed to retain high command throughout the campaign? In the interests of the Service, of the public, and of justice, we ask for information.

Almost as bad as Colonel Collingwood's case is that of Captain Harvey, of the 71st Highlanders, who, though he performed very important Staff duties during the South African operations, has been superseded by twenty captains junior to him, and who never left Durban. This sort of treatment is scarcely the way to stimulate zeal, or to induce good officers to remain in the Service.

The recent publication of a number of alterations in the establishments of certain regiments attracts attention to our establishments generally. The difficulty that there was in the spring of last year, when reinforcements had suddenly to be dispatched to Africa, and the expedients that were found necessary to fill the ranks of the regiments destined for that service, are still fresh in the memory of our readers. As is well known, the regiments next on the roster for foreign service are maintained at a nominal establishment of over 800 men, but as was apparent last year, this is a very different thing from 800 soldiers available for active service. The fact is, the first six or seven regiments for foreign service should consist entirely of fighting men. The invalids and men about to take their discharge should be sent to the depôt, together with all the recruits not yet fit to take the field. The regiment would then be what it really pretends to be, and there would no longer be any reason for the miserable system of drafting men in large numbers from several different battalions to make up —we cannot say a regiment—but a numerical medley, some 800 strong.

The capture of Moirosi's mountain appears to have been a thorough and decisive success, and Colonel Bayly may be congratulated upon the well-timed vigour of his operations. Mr. Sprigg's opponents will lament the loss of a favourite and effective taunt; but the Cape Premier has been as good as his word. He said that the mountain should be taken, and taken by colonial forces only, and so it has happened.

The Standard states that Brigadier-General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., has been transferred from the command of the Belfast to that of the Chatham District, and that by the Queen's desire he will accompany the Empress Eugénie to South Africa, next month.

The question of the special auxiliary sights for the Martini-Henry rifle, tested with such excellent results at Enfield and Dungeness some time ago, is still under the consideration of the War-Office Committee on the subject. When is the report of that body to be published, we should like to know? Musketry men are anxious on the subject, and consider this invention too valuable to be lost sight of entirely.

The steamer Ontario, which left England for Natal on November 28, has been detailed to convey the 2nd Battalion 24th Regiment from the Cape to Gibraltar; and after landing the regiment at that station, will, we understand, embark the 71st Highland Light Infantry, some time since placed under orders of readiness, and convey them to Scotland.

A correspondent asks us the very pertinent question, Why are the retired officers of the old East India Company's regiments alone refused the privilege of commuting their pensions? It is very certain that no commutation causes the State any loss, therefore there can be no question of expense, neither can there be one of principle. We, therefore, echo our correspondent's question, and ask—why?

The unfortunate 2nd Lieutenants of the Brigade of Guards are still left in a state of uncomfortable and irritating expectancy with regard to the regulations which it was promised some years ago would "shortly be published." These delays, which so constantly occur in the issue of necessary documents, speak badly indeed for the organisation of our Army, or that branch of it which is charged with the direction of affairs, and must necessarily have the effect of producing a disgust for the Service, and an utter want of reliance in those who hold the reins at the War Office.

The Austrian Minister of War has ordered classes to be formed at Vienna for the study of the Russian language. In a circular referring to this measure, the Minister urges upon the officers of the General Staff to avail themselves of the opportunity placed before them.

The new pattern peak to the forage-cap may, as far as appearance is concerned, be a decided improvement upon the old one, but the Authorities, so far from simplifying this article of officer's uniform, have considerably added to the difficulty of carrying it. It is hard to conceive why the officer's dress for parade and field services is not more nearly assimilated to that of the soldier. The Glengarry is comfortable and portable, and the generality of officers are favourable to its adoption.

The order to discontinue the ornamenting of mounted infantry officers' sabre-taches has not come out a bit to soon. Some officers have not been content to wear the simple regimental badge, but have added their own crests. This is swagger, indeed, in fact it merits a harsher name. The practice of adopting badges and devices has of late years greatly crept into the Service. In one regiment, the officers sport upon the collar of their blue patrol a huge pair of gold grenades, and where the commanding officer is a colonel, the collar presents a highly ornamental appearance. Add to this a high white shirt collar, and we have the dress complete. His Royal Highness is always ready to sanction the wearing of any device or distinctive badge, provided it can be shown that it really belongs, or has belonged, to the dress of the regiment; but for officers to adopt any fancy ornament without proper sanction, is a direct breach of her Majesty's Regulations.

ACHILLES, Capt. A. C. Heneage, left Malta and the Mediterranean command on Dec. 27, to rejoin the Channel Squadron at Lisbon. Before quitting the Mediterranean, the officers and crew entertained the Téméraire's ship's company en masse. Never did better feeling exist between two ships.

AGINCOURT, Capt. A. Buller, flagship of Rear-Admiral Waddilove. The Rear-Admiral returned from leave of absence on December 26, and rehoisted his flag on the day following, when the ship steamed into the Sound, took in her ammunition, and was to have sailed with the lee-division of the Channel Squadron on Dec. 29 to join the Commander-in-Chief at Portland, whence the squadron was to have sailed for Lisbon. The recent gale delayed this programme being carried out until New Year's Day.

AVON, Com. L. C. Keppel, was at Monte Video on Nov. 29. She was preparing to go to sea for a cruise, and return to Monte Video, after visiting Maldonado.

BOADICEA, Comdre. Richards, was at Simon's Bay on Dec. 8, and was to leave on Dec. 15 for St. Helena, Ascension, and Sierra Leone.

COMUS, Capt. East, left Plymouth Sound on Wednesday, Dec. 24, bound to China, viâ the Cape, calling at the island of Tristan d'Acunha and the Crozet Islands en route.

COQUETTE, Lieut.-Com. Festing, was at the Piræus on Jan. 1, 1880.

CROCODILE, Capt. F. Proby Doughty, having embarked the 2nd Batn. 5th Regt., sailed for Bombay on Jan. 2.

DIDO, Capt. Compton E. Domville, was at Bonny on Nov. 15. The recent serious disputes between the chiefs Will Braid and Yellow and the King of New Calabar—during the continuance of which trade at the latter place was entirely stopped—have now been satisfactorily settled. An interview between the two chiefs and the King and his followers took place on board in presence of Capt. Domville and the Consul, and, after a long discussion, a treaty was drawn up signed by the respective parties. Under this agreement Will Braid is to be allowed to live in the district, but to be under the control of the King; and, in the event of the treaty being broken, the offending party is to be fined 400 puncheons of palm oil—the English Government to have 100 puncheons, and the remainder to be divided between the arbitrators who may be called in to adjust the matter.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, Capt. M. Culme-Seymour, A.D.C., flagship of Admiral Fanshawe, Commander-in-Chief, Portsmouth. Three courts-martial, under the presidency of Capt. Doughty, of the Crocodile, were held on board this flagship on Saturday last. The first was for the trial of George Burdekin, a private in the Royal Marines, serving on board the Active, who was charged with having, on July 30, improperly left the ship, with fraudulently appropriating to his own use the sum of £6 entrusted to his charge by Thomas Smith, also a private in the Royal Marines, of the same ship, and with fraudulently appropriating to his own use the sum of £5 entrusted to his charge by Stephen Iggolden, a private in the Royal Marines. The court found him guilty of the three charges, and as he had been previously convicted by court-martial he was now sentenced to 21 months' imprisonment and dismissal from the Service. The second court was for the trial of James Bevan, ordinary seaman of the Minotaur, who was charged with disobeying the lawful command of Michael Sullivan, gunner's mate of the ship, when ordered by him to clean the eighth gun, for disobeying the same man on other occasions, and for disobeying the lawful command of Lieut. Milne. The prisoner was found guilty of all the charges, and he was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The third court was for the trial of Henry Archbold, an able seaman on board the Asia, who was charged with being absent without leave on Dec. 4, with resisting the patrol, with striking James Weeks, leading stoker of the Northampton, who was one of the patrol, and with attempting to strike William Cumberbole, captain of the maintop, also one of the patrol. The prisoner pleaded guilty to the first two charges, and after hearing the evidence, the court convicted him of the other two, and he was sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

DUNCAN, Capt. T. B. M. Sulivan, flagship of Sir Reginald J. Macdonald, K.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore. The body of William Robertson, an able seaman, belonging to the flagship, who was drowned during a storm at night nearly three weeks since, has not yet been recovered. His shipmates have raised a fund for the purpose of erecting a monument to his memory in the Isle of Sheppey Cemetery. A court-martial was held on board this flagship on Tuesday, for the trial of Acting Sub-Lieut. Messum, belonging to her Majesty's ship Opal, for, on May 26, 1879, negligently performing his duty, by being found asleep in the chart-house while the ship was at sea, from San Francisco to Valparaiso; secondly, for behaving with contempt to Lieut. John H. Henderson, in that when ordered, on June 17, 1879, to his duty, he argued as to what his duties were; thirdly, by neglecting his duty in not attending to the chain cable, when ordered to do so by Lieut. John Henderson, on June 17, 1879. Mr. Hind, paymaster, her Majesty's ship Duncan, acted as the prisoner's "friend." Capt. C. R. Robinson, of the Opal, prosecuted. Four witnesses were called for the prosecution, and the prisoner, in his defence, expressed his regret at what he had done. So far as arguing with Lieut. Henderson, he said he was only asking for information. He was not aware that he had to attend to the chain cable, as he had only just been promoted from midshipman. He threw himself upon the mercy of the court. The court found the prisoner "guilty" of the second and third charges, for which he was sentenced to be dismissed his ship, and lose six months' seniority. They acquitted him on the first charge.

DWARF, Com. W. St. Clair, had left Quettah for Danoe, and 100 Houssas had also been sent down by royal mail steamer Ethiopia. Governor Ussher and his staff were at Quettah on Nov. 24, having come from Accra to endeavour to settle amicably a difficulty of a rather awkward character. For some time past the natives and others have been carrying on extensive smuggling operations at Danoe. This is a small place, situated between Addafia and Bagadah, and, it is understood, does not belong to the British Government. Seeing, however, the extent to which the smuggling had been carried on, the authorities determined to put a stop to it, and when the advices left Quettah they had given all persons concerned two days' notice to leave Danoe, adding that if this demand was not complied with a war-vessel would open fire on the place and destroy everything.

EMERALD, Capt. W. H. Maxwell, arrived at Sydney on Oct. 15 from Auckland, and sailed on Oct 25 for Levuka, to convey the High Commissioner to Samoa, Tonga, &c. She would afterwards join the broad pendant at Hobart Town.

HECLA, Capt. Morgan Singer, torpedo depôt screw vessel, steamed into harbour on Wednesday, from Spithead, and was taken into the tidal basin.

HIMALAYA, Capt. H. W. Brent, arrived in Simon's Bay, Cape of Good Hope, on Dec. 18, and left for Natal on Dec. 24. She will be at Gibraltar about Feb. 21.

HUMBER, Com. J. L. Way, left Gibraltar on her return journey to England on Dec. 27.

JUMNA, Capt. George Parsons, passed Gibraltar on Dec. 25, on her way to the eastward, arriving at Malta on the 29th, where she remained in quarantine, owing to fever having broken out on board, until Dec. 30, when she proceeded for Port Saïd and Bombay.

LORD WARDEN, Capt. Lindesay Brine, Coastguard service, Queensferry, N.B. The Lords of the Admiralty have ordered Capt. Brine to attend the operations for the recovery of the railway train recently lost in the Firth of Tay, and to render all possible assistance.

MALABAR, Capt. John F. G. Grant, which was timed to arrive at Bombay on the 11th inst. with artillery and drafts, instead of again leaving for Portsmouth on the 18th, according to programme, has been ordered to proceed to Natal to embark the 1st Dragoon Guards for passage to Bombay. It was intended that the Dragoon Guards should be stationed at Meerut, and that the 15th Hussars should return to England on being relieved; but these arrangements will greatly depend upon the necessities of the war. The Malabar will make two voyages between Portsmouth and Bombay, instead of three as proposed.

MALLARD, Lieut.-Com. Lang, was at Cape Frio by last advices, waiting for the arrival of the Forward, to enable her to return home.

MINOTAUR, Capt. Rawson, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Hood, commanding the Channel Squadron, was to have left Spithead on Tuesday morning, Dec. 30, for Portland, to pick up Admiral Waddilove and remainder of the squadron off Portland, and thence proceed to Lisbon, where the Achilles will rejoin the squadron. The recent gale delayed these arrangements being carried out until New Year's Day.

MONARCH, Capt. George Tryon, C.B., left Malta on Dec. 29 for Cyprus.

MOSQUITO, Lieut.-Com. G. A. Grey, has relieved the Hart at Tient-sin.

NEWCASTLE, Capt. Edward Kelly, was at Gibraltar on Dec. 26.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Capt. H. R. Wratislaw, was to have left Plymouth Sound on Tuesday, in company of the Agincourt, to join the Commander-in-Chief at Portland, and should have sailed with the Channel Fleet for Lisbon next day. The gale delayed her starting until New Year's Day.

ORONTES, Capt. R. G. Kinahan, left Aden on Dec. 26.

PELICAN, Com. H. Boys, arrived off Lima from the seat of war as the mail left. The position of affairs in the South when she left, is briefly described as follows:—Prado, with Peruvian troops and disaffected Bolivians, who have rifles, but no cartridges, in Arica; in Tacna another body of Bolivian troops, also mutinous, and a stronger force of Peruvians; Arica expecting to be attacked by the fleet, and with ten guns in position; Buendia's army still missing, himself in Tarapaca, and so far not attempting to explain the cause of his defeat; several Chilian vessels in Pisagua, and their troops on shore and all along the railroad up to San Francisco. The port of Iquique is again blockaded by two Chilian vessels, the Cochrane and Covadonga, while their movements are watched by the United States Alaska, the French Degres, and the English Shannon. All the troops, 1,200 in number, were retired from the town by the Prefect and sent to the interior, while he himself departed for Arica, where on arrival he was arrested for deserting his post. The gunboat Pilcomayo has fallen into Chilian hands. She was pursued and captured off Arica by the ironclad Blanco Encalada, and conveyed to Autofagasta.

RALEIGH, Capt. C. T. Jago, will be ready to leave with reliefs for Australia about Feb. 10.

SHANNON, Capt. John D'Arcy, was off Iquique on Nov. 15 watching the movements of the Chilian blockading squadron, composed of the Almirante Cochrane and the Covadonga.

TAMAR, Capt. W. H. Liddell, left Jamaica for Barbadoes on Dec. 22, where she would arrive about Dec. 27. She is expected to leave Barbadoes on Jan. 3, arriving at St. Vincent (Cape de Verdes) on or about Jan. 13, which port she would leave the following day for the West Coast, returning to St. Vincent about the middle of February, thus reaching Barbadoes a month later than was originally proposed.

TÉMÉRAIRE, Capt. George W. Watson. The result of a "full-speed trial" of twelve hours undertaken by this ironclad on her passage to Tunis has been to demonstrate her mean speed to be between thirteen and fourteen knots, but exceeding fourteen knots in perfectly smooth water. On Dec. 1 the usual course of exercise and drill with the 25-ton and 18-ton guns was gone through without a hitch. While anchored in the Gulf of Tunis the city was visited, and its most interesting parts and environs, such as Carthage, were inspected. The ship's company were the guests of the Achilles in Malta Harbour on Dec. 1. "In order to complete the usual courtesies, the return invitation of the Téméraire to the Achilles came off on Dec. 17 on board the Téméraire in Malta Harbour, when it was estimated that more than one thousand blue-jackets were congregated on the main deck at 7 p.m. The officers were invited to inspect the arrangements before the feast began. The tables were laid out on the most liberal scale; all kinds of meat and poultry, rich plum-puddings of divers kinds, a splendid dessert of fruits and no end of niceties—in fact, it is very questionable if the most fastidious John Bull could by any possibility have found the least fault with the spread. The messes were highly decorated, whilst flags threw gay colours on the scene; there were also Chinese lanterns displaying a profusion of light, and evergreens and flowers arranged in wreaths and varied designs, &c. A pint and a half of beer was allowed to each man. After the banquet there was plenty of music and singing, the special song of the evening being 'Should old acquaintance,' &c. A similar interchange of complimentary invitations took place between the ward-room and gun-room officers on board their respective ships. The one on board the Téméraire took place last week, and on Dec. 18 on board the Achilles.—Western Morning News.

Tenedos, Capt. E. S. Adeane, left Plymouth Sound on Wednesday, Dec. 17, for Bermuda, to relieve the Sirius, and arrived at Madeira on Dec. 26, where she remained waiting arrival of mail, due Dec. 30.

Terror, Capt. John Moresby. Bermuda Dockyard Naval Establishment and Hospital were inspected on Dec. 2 by the Commander-in-Chief, Vice-Admiral Sir Edward A. Inglefield. After the inspection, the Commander-in-Chief and staff, together with the heads of departments of the various establishments, were entertained by Capt. Moresby.

Tyne, Com. John E. Stokes, arrived at Limasol, Cyprus, on Dec. 28, and was to leave, after landing stores.

Unicorn, Com. Orford S. Cameron. The officer commanding has proceeded from Dundee to the Firth of Tay, to assist in the operations there set on foot to recover the railway train recently lost by the collapse of the Tay railway bridge.

Urgent, Comdre. Hon. J. Ward, A.D.C., depôt-ship, Jamaica. The Comdre. and officers of this ship and of the Naval Hospital and Dockyard at Port Royal, entertained some 300 guests on board, at a ball on Thursday, Dec. 12.

Vestal, Com. Dashwood G. Tandy, has been called upon by the Governor-General of Mozambique to co-operate with the Portuguese authorities in an expedition against slave-traders. A Portuguese gun-boat, conveying black troops, and towing three armed boats of the Vestal, left Mozambique for Mocambo Bay, where troops were landed, with orders to march round and attack the enemy in the rear, while the boats proceeded to Mfusi, to make a descent from the sea. Mfusi is at the mouth of several large and intricate lagoons, winding amongst dense mangrove swamps, which form capital hiding-places for slave dhows. An extensive shipment of slaves used to be made from the place, but now the traffic is principally carried on overland. The expedition against the slavers was under Portuguese management, and completely failed, stormy weather preventing the boats from getting over the bar at Mfusi, and the troops breaking down the third day of the march, from defective commissariat arrangements. Two white soldiers died of fever shortly after their return. The hot season has commenced, and boils, blains, fevers, &c., are plentiful among ships' crews.

RUSSIAN CRUISERS.

American naval yards and small-arm factories are, at the present time, kept at full work executing orders for the Russian Government. The New York Nautical Gazette learns, on good authority, that in Russian circles a war with England is looked upon not only as imminent, but as an absolute necessity, and as a means of furthering the development of Russian progress. The merchants of Russia also look upon the British Mercantile Marine, it appears, as a glorious harvest of tonnage, specially raised for their future enrichment, in the shape of prize-money. The question to be solved was merely as to the manner in which they could appropriate this enormous wealth. The answer came to them in the shape of the fast steamers purchased last year by the Moscow Committee to act as privateers. These are now being added to in very considerable numbers, and are to form the nucleus of a grand scheme of Government privateering. The vessels are constructed or purchased by private funds, but are manned by officers and men belonging to the Imperial Russian Navy. The prize-money is to be shared by the shareholders in the vessels. To guard against loss, no steamer is to be employed whose speed does not exceed that of the fastest cruiser on the list of the British Navy, and as some of these exceed a speed of 15 knots, while most of them cannot steam over 12 knots, it is no difficult task to find merchant steamers capable of easily maintaining a speed of from 14 to 16 knots. The Russian privateers are now being constructed, armed, and equipped in the various ports of the United States, and will probably be sent to various stations in the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, to commence operations on receipt of a preconcerted telegraphic signal. In this manner, it is said, the Russians hope to take the Mercantile Marine of England by surprise, and to be able to capture many of its best and fastest Australian and American, Indian and China regular trading-vessels and mail steamers before it is known that war has been declared. The best of the captured vessels it is proposed to convert into privateers, and thus augment the number of the Russian cruisers. These will draw their supplies of coal from the island of Saghalien, from whence it is asserted that numerous cargoes have already been shipped to various ports to wait orders. On this subject, a correspondent of the Nautical Gazette, after commenting on the extraordinary number of vessels being fitted out in America for this fleet of cruisers, remarks:—"The grain fleets of the Pacific, the wool-laden ships of Australia, and the valuable vessels in the Transatlantic trade, as well as the costly-laden ships from the East Indies, are looked upon to furnish a very rich return for the subscriptions which have been, and are now being, collected in all parts of Russia. The torpedo system is also destined to play a very important part in the proposed programme. A new design of this class of destructive engine has been perfected in this country, and months ago the drawings and working plans were sent abroad, and scores of little handy torpedo craft, operated by two men, have been built in the most secret manner, both here and abroad. These craft are to be carried at the davits like an ordinary boat, and can enter a port and deal out destruction with amazing precision and rapidity. British ports can be invaded as if by magic, and whole fleets destroyed in a few hours. Already some of them have been sent out to the Pacific, both north and south, and even in China these little 'marine devils' can be found, waiting the signal to work havoc among the enemy's shipping. They can be used at sea with perfect safety. It is surmised that each cruiser will be provided with from four to six of these 'devils' with which to supply her prizes. So it can readily be seen that in 60 days Russia could be working millions of mischief upon English merchantmen. It is a well-known fact that Russian agents have full knowledge of the speed, capacity, and qualities of every steamer at all suited to their purpose in this country, and probably the price at which each could be purchased, if there be need of further increasing the number of cruisers, and in all probability their present owners would sell almost any of them to a cash customer, without even asking for what purpose they were intended. There are other matters connected with Russia's preparations for a naval warfare, which is intended to be short, sharp, and decisive, so far as it is possible to do so, which for the present is left to circumstances which may transpire within the next few weeks, and in the meantime, I must leave the subject just here, having shown the general outline of the present plans of operations. It is by no means improbable that English agents are in some degree informed upon the general plan, and many are of opinion when it comes to the last extremity Great Britain will back down, fearing a wholesale destruction of her fleets, the pride and power of her people. Russia may be poor, but she is a bold, aggressive nation, and will ever strive to carry out the dying testament of Peter the Great." It is to be hoped the above is true in every respect, except England's backing down. It is an old saying that "two can play at the same game." In 1854, no Russian ship dared show itself on any sea. Should we be forced to go to war again with that nation, it is at any rate consoling to know that our seamen will stand a chance this time of capturing some valuable prizes, and of thus earning a good round sum in prize-money. Indeed, we can imagine the glee with which the whole of the above will be read by many a seaman, and the delight that will creep into his heart when he discovers that there is at least a possibility of the next war with Russia not proving altogether barren of prize-money. Nor should we be surprised to hear that many an "old salt" had exclaimed, "Go it, ye cripples; fit 'em out! But mind an ye come out this time, and not skulk behind cuss'd stone walls!"

The Chatham correspondent of the Daily News makes the following comments on the mal-administration of our dockyards by the Admiralty:—"The spasmodic activity which is now observable in most of the departments at Chatham Dockyard is more apparent than real, the near approach of the meeting of Parliament and the introduction of the Navy Estimates, which, it is understood, will take place at a much earlier period than usual, having, for well-understood reasons, much to do with the bustle and energy now to be witnessed throughout the various establishments in the dockyard. A considerable amount of needless suffering was a month or two since entailed on a large number of workmen by their sudden dismissal from the dockyard on the ostensible ground that the amount for wages granted by the Treasury had been so far exhausted that it would be impossible to make both ends meet before March 31, when the financial year ends. After the dismissal of workmen had been carried on weekly for several weeks, a sudden order was received at the dockyard directing all discharges to cease, while in some of the workshops the hands who were placed upon short time were directed to resume their full work. With the stoppage of the discharge of hands all the departments more or less immediately connected with the construction of the armoured ships now in hand, are in full operation, while in some instances the hands are working extra time. The real or imaginary fears entertained some weeks since as to the probable exhaustion of the vote for wages would now appear to be without foundation, and there is now every probability of the amount expended for wages in Chatham Dockyard being increased rather than diminished for some weeks to come."

The Admiralty have directed that, as it appears Marine prisoners awaiting court-martial for desertion, or other offences, have reported themselves sick, and have, in consequence, been taken into the infirmary, and transferred therefrom to a naval hospital, and have been brought before a board of survey and invalided, thereby obtaining their discharge from the Service and escaping the punishment merited, prisoners awaiting court-martial or disposal who may require treatment in a naval hospital or marine infirmary are not to be brought forward before a board for survey until their cases have been specially reported for the consideration and direction of their Lordships.

On Tuesday evening, about ten p.m., as one of the newly-constructed torpedo boats was coming up the river Medway, it had an narrow escape from an accident of a most serious nature. There was a very dense fog on the river, and the Hood, torpedo-ship, which was lying in Gillingham Reach, was not seen until the small torpedo-boat was close upon it, when by a sharp movement of the officer in charge, the boat was only turned aside just in time to save it from a collision. As it was, two of the iron stanchions on board the boat were broken, but no accident occurred to any person on board.

Masquerading at Sheerness was carried on to a far greater extent on Christmas Eve this year than ever. About five o'clock over 60 dockyard labourers, attired in naval and military uniforms and "masque" costumes, commenced to parade the town headed by a band. Not long afterwards a second party, consisting of about a similar number of shipwright and other apprentices, also started upon a tour of the district. The dresses of those composing what is known as the "line" were exceedingly superb, nearly every rank of both branches of the Service being represented. A large concourse of people followed these parties round the town.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Under the authority vested in them by the Queen's Regulations, the Admiralty have intimated that the undermentioned ships are to be classed as follows, viz.:—1st class—Duke of Wellington, Royal Adelaide, Duncan, Indus, Asia, Cambridge, Excellent, Vernon, Minotaur, St. Vincent, Impregnable, Boscawen, Victoria and Albert, Osborne; 2nd class—Northampton, Raleigh; 3rd class—Assistance, Orontes, and the Indian troopships.

THE ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—Surely it is about time the Government gave the United Service Institution some aid to enable it to get a building more suitable in every way to its requirements. Year after year beautiful models, to further the cause of science in our Army and Navy, and trophies, &c., some presented by officers who had refused large sums of money for them, are packed together, and in a great measure lost, from want of a suitable museum. I have known numbers of members unable to gain admittance to the lecture-room, from want of space, on the occasion of a popular lecture, and the heat and discomfort caused by the great crowd in a small lecture-room are great. I am frequently told the Government do mean to do something in the matter. But when?—I am, &c., J. H. Culme-Seymour, Lieut.-Col.

THE COMMISSARIAT WARRANT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—Having grown tired of expecting to see the new Commissariat Warrant promulgated, I had come to the conclusion of not thinking further about it; but seeing by your issue of Dec. 20 that it is now indefinitely postponed, the hard position which such postponement forces upon the class to which I belong, obliges me to demand of you a thorough exposition of our grievances in the columns of the Army and Navy Gazette. I use the word "demand" advisedly, as from the perusal of your influential journal since its first appearance, I participate in the prevalent feeling amongst all classes of the Army and Navy, that its real mission is two-fold, i.e., the benefit of the public Service, and the redressing of the hardships and grievances under which the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Army and Navy may happen to be suffering. Yes, the Army and Navy Gazette has, since it first started into existence, been the assiduous guardian of the public Service, and more especially in matters connected with the various branches of the Army and Navy, and the details of the resources connected therewith, and the manipulation thereof. You have not, sir, swerved from your duty in bringing to light the shortcomings, incompetency, and neglect on the part of individuals, as well as similar faults if committed by departments, and, especially, I could mention that you did not fail in laying bare the faults of the late Control Department, of which, I must admit, there were a few, and it is on this account that the Commissariat Department looks to you as the defender of its first and legitimate rights. The Department has been twice remodelled since the Crimean war, the time of its blundering and failure; but at no time of its existence or history has it proved itself more equal to its onerous task or the duties required of it, than during the recent South African campaign. Yes, it has been admitted on all sides, by newspaper correspondents and by private individuals, as well as by official public testimony, that the Commissariat has, under remarkably trying circumstances, given every satisfaction in Zululand; and this being so, and all the circumstances considered, now is the auspicious time selected by (let me use the phrase of "hoping against hope") the "War-Office hatching hens" to put it through another process of remodelling, by assimilating it to Indian Commissariat, which has on more than one occasion broken down during the present Afghan campaign. Yes, sir, this new scheme, half-hatched during a very short visit of an individual to India, will, if carried into effect, cost the country between five hundred and seven hundred thousand pounds, and at a time when every nerve is strained to meet current requirements. The aforesaid amount is arrived at by pensions and commutation of pension, to officers already retired and to those likely to retire under the proposed system. The question is,—Will the country stand it? Will not Members of Parliament, who have their country's interest and the interest of their constituents (the British taxpayers) at heart, be up in their places, and demand an explanation? Of course, there are places required for regimental officers who have passed the Staff College, to meet which the higher branch of the new Commissariat would answer remarkably well—never minding the taxpayer, nor the Departmental officers, who were not eligible to enter the Staff College. Now, sir, what should be done, and what can be done without any extra expense to the public, is to fill up at once each cadre of the Department to its proper strength, and thereby give promotion to a large number of officers who should have been promoted long since. Further, let it be assimilated to the Pay Department, by taking away that incompatible double nature of "Mr. and Colonel," or "Mr. and Major," &c., and this done with, but a few other trifling modifications as to allowances, &c., I am certain you will have a working and healthy Department.—I am, &c., An Old Soldier.

The Agamemnon, which was recently launched at Chatham, is now to have her turrets protected with Wilson's patent compound steel-faced armour, of 14 and 16 in. in thickness. These plates, although formed of steel and iron, are in one thickness only, to make which it is necessary first to manufacture an iron plate with a rim along each side, after which the molten steel is poured upon it, and the operation of beating and rolling is performed several times, according to the thickness of the plate, until it anneals and otherwise obtains the required degree of finish. The cost for each of these plates up to 20 tons in weight, including bending to shape, planing ends and edges, and tapping bolt-holes, is £80 per ton for the 14 in. and £84 per ton for the 16-in. plates. The contract of Messrs. Charles Cammell and Co., of Sheffield, has been accepted for the work on the vessel. The ship is now lying in dock, for the completion of her armour-plate turrets with this patent steel-faced armour.—Portsmouth Times.

INDIA.

The situation has entirely changed in Afghanistan. The Cabul forces have been defeated. The telegrams report that on Dec. 22 numbers of Afghans were seen to occupy the more distant villages on the Sherpur side of Cabul, and as the evening became dark large bodies of them were observed getting into position. Early on Tuesday, Dec. 23, the signal was given for the commencement of the assault. Gen. Roberts had discovered what the signal would be, and was prepared. The enemy made their attack on three sides of the cantonment. On the south and west they merely made a pretence, but on the north-east corner they collected in full force. It does not appear that the Afghans ever got within reach of the Sherpur walls. Gen. Hugh Gough and Col. Jenkins held them in check, while Gen. Roberts developed a counter-movement in the rear of their attacking columns with cavalry and artillery. The cavalry and the Horse Artillery emerged from the gorge in that part of the Behmaroo heights which were enclosed within the encampment. The artillery operated on the enemy's flank, and immediately the assailants were dislodged the cavalry swept down upon them. The Afghans beat a retreat from all points and took refuge in the city. During the night the Kohistanees and the Logarees fled to their villages. Mohammed Jan and the Mollah Mushk-i-Alim, the two principal leaders, were the first to leave the field. Mohammed Yahir Khan, who was also one of the heads of the movement, is said to have escaped towards Wardak, in the upper regions of the Logar Valley, taking with him Musa Khan, the eldest boy of the late Ameer. Some British cavalry were at once sent in pursuit, as Mohammed Jan had declared this lad to be the new ruler of Afghanistan. While the fight, which resulted in the loss of four killed and thirty-three wounded to the British, was going on, Gen. C. Gough's column was seen, six miles distant, and immediately after the re-occupation of Cabul the junction of the forces with Roberts and Gough was effected.

The Pioneer says:—"One cannot read the story of the defence of Kohima without feeling that British endurance in the face of great danger, has been displayed conspicuously; that the actors deserve the same kind of sympathy and honour as was paid the other day throughout England to the defenders of Rorke's Drift. They have only done their duty, perhaps, 'as a man is bound to do;' but the duty has been glorious, and its performance worthy of all praise. The defence lasted thirteen days, and was conducted by Mr. Hinde, of the Assam Commission, and Mr. Cawley, of the Police. There was, at first, in Kohima a detachment of the 43rd Assam Light Infantry, numbering 78 men, and 40 of the Frontier Police. On the 19th, Mr. Hinde, with 60 men of the 43rd and Frontier Police arrived from Wokha. There were also native followers and two English ladies and two children. In all, the native soldiers and followers numbered some 550 men. The enemy was reckoned at between 5,000 and 6,000; 500 being armed with guns. Provisions ran short, and there was a terrible scarcity of water. To those who took part in the defence it seemed nothing short of a miracle that Kohima should have held out so long."

A Bombay contemporary raises a question whether it is true or not that Gen. John Watson, V.C., C.B., has resigned the command of the Kurum Field Service.

Contradictory rumours exist regarding the future administration of Central India. A correspondent of the Statesman states that nothing certain is known as to the person selected to succeed Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Daly, whose early retirement from office is settled.

Concerning Gen. Sir F. P. Haines we read:—"The Commander-in-Chief, having shaken off his indisposition, left Simla on Dec. 5, and is expected to reach Calcutta on the 14th or 15th. He is accompanied by Gen. Greaves, Col. Johnson, and Col. Preston."

The Maharajah of Cashmere has appointed his second son, Mian Ram Singh, commander-in-chief of his armies.

It has been decided by the Government of India that the recovery of the whole of the advance of pay made to an officer in England, to enable him to return to duty in India, should always be at the rate of exchange fixed for transactions with the Imperial Government at the time the advance was made.

On a question having been raised by a local administration as to what pay a military officer, holding the post of a fort adjutant and cantonment magistrate, may be entitled to while on furlough, the Government of India is said to have decided that the officer alluded to is entitled to have his furlough allowances calculated under the civil furlough rules upon his civil pay as cantonment magistrate.

Col. Watson's tenure of the Koorum command has been even shorter than his command of the native contingent in the last campaign, short enough as that was. It was only in the last Gazette of India that the new appointment of his predecessor—Col. Gordon—was notified, and now we see that Gen. Watson resigns in favour of Col. J. A. Tytler, V.C., C.B., Bengal S.C. What has induced him to give up his new post so abruptly? Is he returning to India to take Sir Henry Daly's place as Governor-General's Agent in Central India, for which, according to local report, he has been designated?

The following temporary appointments are made in the Quartermaster-General's Department, Bengal, from Sept. 29, viz.:—Major G. E. L. S. Sanford, R.E., A.Q.M.G., to officiate as D.Q.M.G. during the absence of Col. C. M. MacGregor, C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., on field service; Capt. R. McG. Stewart, R.A., D.A.Q.M.G., to officiate as A.Q.M.G., vice Major Sanford; Major L. Wavell, Bengal S.C., to officiate as D.A.Q.M.G., from Oct. 24, 1879, vice Major H. Collett, A.Q.M.G., proceeded on field service.

A telegram from Lahore, dated the 30th ult., states that "the Nagas have surrendered twelve guns. The Konoma men are strongly stockaded in the Burrail Hills, but are starving."

The following officers are about to retire from the Service, viz.:—Col. R. Davidson, Bengal S.C., on an ordinary pension of £456 5s., and special annuity of £529 14s.; Col. G. C. Evezard, Bombay S.C., on an ordinary pension of £456 5s., capitalised value of special annuity of £5,680; Col. E. N. Sandilands, Bengal S.C., on an ordinary pension of £456 5s., and special annuity of £668 12s., from Nov. 22, 1879, to be paid in England; Col. J. Bates, Bombay S.C., on an ordinary pension of £456 5s., and capitalised value of special annuity of £6,742.

MILITARY RANK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have read with a good deal of interest the recent letters in your paper upon the question of "Military Rank," which seems just now to be a vexed one, and open to much discussion from various causes. I quite agree with the suggestion that every officer in our Military Services should put upon his card the regiment or corps to which he is or has belonged. This, I think, would practically close the whole question, and place all on their own proper footing, socially and militarily. There is a point, however, stated in your last issue by a "Linesman," which strikes me as being calculating to mislead. This writer evidently has forgotten one of the points in connection with this subject. He says (alluding to the "Regular"), "the one is a professional soldier, and is, as it were, always on duty; the other [the Militiaman] in the strict sense of the word, is not a soldier at all, and directly his regiment is disbanded, officers and men retire to their civil occupation." "Linesman" seems altogether to ignore the fact that there are now a very large number of "Regulars" on half-pay or sold out, who are actually shopkeepers on a large scale, being employed at the Army and Navy Stores and at other kindred establishments in various capacities. I mean no slur upon such officers, it is to their credit that they take remunerative civil employ, for times are hard, and they have as much right as any one else to any kind of employment, without any one casting a slur at them; but, sir, do they drop their military title? I say from personal knowledge that they do not; it is colonel, major, or captain all over the shop, wherever they are they cling to their former military title with wonderful tenacity, and would feel properly insulted if any one persistently called them "mister." Again, there are just now an enormous number of officers "sold out" altogether, not having, or ever will have, any connection with the Army. In society and upon their cards these former officers are General, colonel, major, or captain, and so long as they live will persist in retaining their late military title. Have these late officers any more right to a military title than a Militia or a Volunteer officer, who is in actual possession of her Majesty's commission, such as it may be? I think the whole subject is so mixed up that it had better be dropped, and further discussion would only lead to nothing but bickering. The simple printing on the card of each officer the exact regiment or corps, or "late of," would settle the whole matter.—I am, &c.,

A LATE MAJOR, RESERVE FORCES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As it is not impossible you may be disposed to resume in an editorial notice the correspondence on the subject of "Military Titles," I venture to complete my first letter by a few remarks, not necessarily, therefore, for publication. "Another Militiaman" and "Linesman" have stated both views of the matter; but given certain premisses, which "Linesman" does not deny, "Another Militiaman's" conclusions are the sounder. "Linesman" has made one or two mistakes:—(1.) Militia officers are simply "on leave" when not up for training. This was stated by Col. Stanley in the House of Commons, when introducing the Mutiny Act of 1876. The non-commissioned officers and men are not; therefore "Linesman's" analogy and reductio ad absurdum does not apply. (2.) "Linesman's" officer of the Regular Army states his grievances badly. I doubt if, apart from some Militia regiments in the great centres of industry, whether many officers have any business or trade, lucrative or otherwise, but I hope they have comfortable homes, and if, in addition, they have "luxuries," so much the better; but I fail to see what bearing this has upon the question at issue. (3.) So far from Militia officers never having served one day abroad, I see that, exclusive of adjutants, medical officers, and quartermasters, 530 of the field-officers and captains have Line service, and about 150 have recorded war service. They have probably done as much grilling of souls, chanced dying in genial and uncongenial climates, and being killed in action as "Linesman's" friend, who is apparently a disappointed man, and doubtless with very good reason. What he proves, however, is, that he and others like him should have something more, not that Militiamen should have nothing. If the authorities will but say plainly that Militia titles are not permanent military titles, no one will with less regret than myself erase from their visiting cards, and consign to oblivion, the rank and regiment of

A CONFUSED MILITIAMAN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—When you look at my signature you will think me a bold man for venturing to address you, and indeed I think I am, for I know that owners of two commissions, "stink in your nostrils;" however, as a member of the Auxiliary Forces, who, for fifteen years, has steadily refused to take, and often, at the risk of being misunderstood to accept, a military title except where actually engaged in military work. I trust you will allow me to offer an excuse for such officers of the Volunteers, as the "boot maker," whose assistant so wounded the feelings of one of your correspondents, by saying he would "fetch the Captain." It is a matter of every-day occurrence to meet gentlemen who, having left the regular Army with junior rank to that they have taken in the Auxiliary Forces, place the senior rank on their cards, leaving out the name of their regiment. I say nothing about the right or wrong of it, but I do say this, that the bootmaker who commands a Volunteer company has exactly the same right to call himself "Captain" as the retired lieutenant of the Army, who commands the next company to him; and in default of some absolute order to the contrary, he is sure to follow what he considers a good and pleasant example. The matter of rank and title seems to me to be a social one, and not one of Service. There are hundreds of gentlemen in this country who have a perfect right to a military title, who have only been for a very few years in the regular Army, and have never served out of England, while not only Militia officers, but officers of both Yeomanry and Volunteers, have repeatedly offered their services out of England, when there has been a chance of their being required. If a person puts the name of his regiment on his card, and thus declares himself a colonel of volunteers, or a captain of militia, no one is injured by it; but I regret to think that, as a rule, Militia officers are not sufficiently proud of the glorious Service to which they belong to do this, and I don't think I have ever seen it done by a Volunteer.—I am, &c.,

THE CANADIAN MILITIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Another hallucination held in England is that the Canadian Wimbledon team is representative, more or less, of the general efficiency of the Militia. There never was a greater mistake. The team is an institution per se, made up principally of officers and of the very few men of the rank and file who have time and money to devote to rifle-shooting. Even then, the choice is but limited, as you may see yourself by the same men figuring in the team two or three years in succession. Your concluding remarks in your issue of July 5, on the Aldershot Rifle-Meeting, exactly describes the situation in Canada, only, instead of having the thousands who make rifle-shooting a profession, we have, all told, the Wimbledon team. The two great drawbacks of the Canadian Militia are the lack of knowledge of the requirements of the Service, and the total want of encouragement on the part of the Government, and the utter ignorance and open exhibition of indifference in the welfare of the Service, on the part of the Members of Parliament. Just try and realise the fact, that less than two hours' legislation last session regulated the whole arrangement for the whole year's service of the Canadian Militia,—outside advice is wholly disregarded, outside opinion wholly ignored. What would be said in England, if the oversight and control of the entire defensive force of the country was placed in the hands of the man who had no military experience whatever, and who regulated his duties by his party considerations only? Yet that is exactly the situation in Canada, for while every other country on the face of the earth has been changing and improving its military organisation, Canada, instead of advancing with the spirit of the age, has been steadily retrograding, and the condition of its Militia is worse by far than it was ten years ago. Mr. Gladstone's anti-Canadian and anti-colonial policy and Lord Cardwell's policy of concentration, combined with the removal of the troops, together with the causes already mentioned as existing with us at home, has killed the Canadian Militia, and every man who knows anything at all about the subject will endorse the verdict. Here is now the actual situation and condition of the force. It only numbers 20,000, instead of 40,000, as reported. The regiments will ~~not average 300 men each~~, for they are only allowed 42 men per company, and the majority of the battalions only contain six companies. Next, there is no system whatever for recruiting, no means held out for inducing men to join, nor any reward in any shape or form for long service or good conduct. Then there is no reserve, nor the first attempt yet made to organise one. We have, to be sure, what is called the Reserve Militia, with its colonels and captains, but nobody ever saw it. It is neither armed, nor clothed, nor drilled. And if you take every able-bodied man you meet in London, and call ten or a dozen of the lot officers, you have just as effective and just as well-organised a force as the Reserve Militia of Canada. The system of drill observed in the Dominion is the next bad feature, being not only useless, but demoralising. What can be accomplished in six days, and that, too, only every second year? The great majority of the men are recruits who never before had uniform on their backs, nor rifle in their hands; and though, as a rule, both willing and well-behaved, nothing can be done for want of instructors, and there is no means now of obtaining them. There is neither preliminary drill nor training in any shape or form, nor is there now, in the Dominion of Canada, a military school at which officers of the Line regiments, or cavalry officers, can obtain either instruction or a certificate of efficiency. With your permission, I will continue the subject in another letter.—I am, &c.,

CANADIAN RIFLEMAN.

POSITION IN SHOOTING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Assuming that the main object of all drill and military training is to render each soldier, with his rifle, &c., a perfect shooting machine, not to blaze away as much ammunition as possible on the chance of some shots taking effect, but to plant each bullet in the body of the enemy; assuming also, that the first duty of a soldier is to inflict as much damage as he can upon the enemy, with as little exposure as possible to the enemy's fire, I apprehend that if a battalion should be under fire in line, the commanding officer would not allow his men to stand up to be shot at, but would order them to lie down. If the space of ground did not admit of the front being extended to rank entire, and two ranks should be necessary, it seems to me impossible to use the prone position, as the front rank would be deafened and demoralised by the explosion of the rear rank's rifles within a few feet of their heads; but if the front rank are put on their backs, this is not the case. I submit, therefore, that the normal formation of a battalion in line while under fire should be, front rank on their backs, rear rank on the knee. The advantages of this formation are, the greatest possible accuracy of fire, with the least possible degree of exposure; and where a battalion is in square or échelon of company squares, an extra line of fire can be obtained, by putting the front rank on to their backs, and one or more ranks on to the knee, and possibly one or more ranks standing. I have been surprised to find how readily a man on his back can spring up to the "ready" to receive cavalry. I believe that a soldier in heavy-marching order finds it easier to shoot on his back than in the prone position. In the latter position, with the two immovable ball-bags pressing against the pit of his stomach, and his great-coat rendering it almost impossible to raise his head to take aim, the soldier is shooting under difficulties; but by slipping the valise under the small of his back, and with his shoulders resting on his coat, the soldier is comparatively comfortable, and his accoutrements serve to keep him out of the mud. In skirmishing, whenever he can get cover and a rest for his rifle, the soldier will naturally use the prone position; but in exceptional cases, when he is panting and palpitating after a rush, when firing down-hill, or taking a shot at a distant object, the back position appears to afford the best means of sending the bullets to the proper billets. In standing corn, the soldier, of course, must shoot from the shoulder. I find that the men of the Rifle Brigade were trained to shoot in all four military positions. In the first manual upon rifle-shooting, by Ezekiel Baker, in 1803, there are four coloured plates, showing the rifleman in the standing, kneeling, prone, and back positions. In the prone position the shako is placed on the ground, and forms a rest for the rifle. In the fourth plate the soldier is lying on his back, with the legs at full length, the left foot over the right, the sling caught over the left foot to take the recoil, the butt kept well away from the shoulder, and, grasped by the left hand, brought over the breast, right elbow on the ground, right hand grasping the small of the butt, and forefinger on the trigger. In Sir W. Cope's History of the Rifle Brigade, it is related that at a fight in Spain, in 1809, a noted shot, named Tom Plunkett, "crept out to the front, and throwing himself on his back on the snow-covered ground, he caught the sling of his rifle over his foot, fired with deliberate aim, and shot Gen. Colbert dead. His orderly trumpeter rode up to assist him; but Tom Plunkett had reloaded, and he also fell before his unerring aim." I am also told that many soldiers in the Black Watch habitually used the back position at Balaclava and also at Lucknow, but I am not aware that they have a butcher's bill to show. This, of course, was when each soldier had to rise to reload. How much more effective is the position under modern conditions with breech-loaders. I therefore respectfully submit that in addition to the three positions now recognised as "military," every soldier should also be trained to shoot on his back, as the men of the Rifle Brigade were trained 80 years ago, and I invite the attention of all officers in the Army to this subject.—I am, &c.,

IMPROVED GUN-CARRIAGES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—Many of your readers have not only a familiar acquaintance, but also what is very different, viz., an accurate knowledge of the simple principle of the graceful gliding motion of the North Shields double-pivot movement, and therefore will be glad to learn that, by the same principle, there has been a recent improvement in handling of guns, by the same movement being applied to the ordinary gun-carriages themselves, instead of the traversing platforms, so that where these gun-carriages are now used without their traversing platforms, or guide lines of racers being required, they are made to attain all the easy movements of the slide or traversing platform in the gun-carriage alone, where, in place of two ordinary truck-wheels at each end of the gun-carriage, four wheels on a revolving framework are introduced, to turn in any direction, without any danger of instability. Hence the carriage travels more easily, and with less friction, on four wheels than on two, and these turn-table frameworks turn in any direction (as a pivot). The gun-carriage can be moved also in any direction promptly, easily, and in a small space, and as the wheels in both of these turn-tables at each end can be thrown out of gear by means of eccentric axles, turned by compressor levers, the weight of the gun and carriage can be thrown totally flat on the platform or deck, to give increased resistance of friction and to absorb the shock of the recoil. —I am, &c.,

The reorganisation scheme for the Naval establishments abroad, based upon the changes recently introduced in those at home, has been approved by the Treasury, and will be immediately carried into effect. Under these new regulations, retired assistant-paymasters are to be appointed as storekeepers and cashiers in the naval hospitals at Bermuda, Jamaica, the Cape, and Hong Kong. They will be paid a salary of £100 a year, in addition to their naval retired pay, and they will also have colonial allowances of £75 a year at Bermuda and the Cape, and £100 a year at Jamaica and Hong Kong. Houses furnished on the usual terms will also be given, except at Hong Kong, where a house allowance of £150 will be given instead. Officers who have commuted are not eligible for these appointments.

Obituary.

Gen. F. W. Burroughs, who died in London recently, entered the Bengal Army, Jan. 8, 1825, and was posted to the 17th Bengal N.I., of which he was adjt. for some 12 years. He was aide-de-camp to Major-Gen. Sir J. H. Littler, G.C.B., in the Sutlej campaign, and during the Punjab campaign served as depty.-assist.-adjt.-gen. under Lord Clyde, G.C.B., Sir H. M. Wheeler, K.C.B., Sir W. R. Gilbert, Bart., G.C.B., the Hon. T. Ashburnham, C.B., and others. The troops of the line in the Punjab at that time were never less than 25,000 men (12,000 being European), and under Sir W. R. Gilbert amounted to 57,000. Major Burroughs was in command of the 17th Bengal N.I. when it mutinied at Azimghur on June 3, 1857. The older soldiers of the regiment, however, rallied round him and the other officers, and conducting them and their families in safety to Gorruckpore, the next military station, afterwards marched off to join the King of Delhi. Gen. Burroughs was placed on the Retired List of General officers in July, 1879. His commissions bear the following dates:—Ensign, Jan. 8, 1825; lieut., Oct. 19, 1827; capt., by brevet, Jan. 8, 1840; capt., Oct. 1, 1841; brevet major, Nov. 11, 1851; major, Sept. 9, 1856; brevet lieut.-col., Feb. 4, 1859; lieut.-col., Dec. 27, 1859; major-gen., April 20, 1868; lieut.-gen., May, 24, 1877; gen., July 18, 1879. He died aged 73 years.

Major-Gen. J. D. MacDonald, Lieut.-Col. on the Retired List, late Bengal S.C., and formerly of the 39th Bengal N.I., died at 8 Douro Place, Kensington, on Christmas Day. He obtained his commission as Ensign, Dec. 31, 1840, served in the Gwalior campaign, and was present at the battle of Maharajpore, Dec. 29, 1843, for which he received the bronze star. He became Lieut. in 1845, and Capt. in 1855. He subsequently served in the campaign of 1857 and 1858 in Rajpootana, and was present at the siege and capture of Kota, for which he received the medal with clasp. He became Major in 1861; Lieut.-Col., 1866; Col., 1871; and Major-Gen., on retirement, 1875.

Lieut.-Col. Douglas Jones, captain on half-pay, died at Horsham on the 23rd ult., aged 62 years. The deceased entered the Army, Dec. 20, 1836; became lieut., Nov. 20, 1841; capt., Jan. 28, 1848; major, May 10, 1859: and lieut.-col., June 20, 1870. He retired upon half-pay, Jan. 7, 1853.

Admiral Horatio Beauman Young, on the reserved list who died at the Avenue, Beckenham, on the 17th ult., in his 74th year, was brother of the late Capt. Sir George Young, Bart., R.N. He entered the Navy in February, 1819, and served as midshipman in the Burmese war of 1826. He subsequently served as Lieutenant in the Shannon, 46, Capt. Benjamin Clement, in the West Indies, from December, 1829, until the close of 1831; in the Edinburgh, 74, Capt. James Richard Dacres, at Portsmouth, from October, 1833, until January, 1834, when he was appointed to the Caledonia, 120; in which ship he became, in March following, flag-lieutenant to Sir Josias Rowley, Commander-in-Chief, in the Mediterranean, and on the paying-off of the Caledonia was promoted, August 30, 1837, to the rank of Commander. He afterwards served and commanded, with great activity and success, the Hydra sloop, on the coast of Africa, from August, 1843, until posted, Nov. 9, 1846. He became Rear-Admiral on the reserved list in 1864; Vice-Admiral, 1871; and Admiral, 1877.

The votes of the governors and subscribers to the United Kingdom Beneficent Association, 4 Berners Street, Oxford Street, for granting annuities of from £20 to £25 to persons in the upper and middle-classes, is earnestly requested for Mrs. Grace Burrowes (the widow of an officer). She has no pension, as her husband did not serve ten years. She has for some time made a brave struggle to support herself by needlework and other means; but, as she is now 56, and suffering from rheumatism in her hands, she is reduced to the last extremity of poverty. Her sad case is known to the following ladies and gentlemen, who will gladly receive contributions or votes on her behalf:—The Hon. Mrs. Oliphant, 66 Addison Road, Kensington; the Dowager Lady Wilson, Little Coombe, Old Charlton; John Balfour, Esq., 24 St. Stephen's Road, London, W.; Capt. Orde Browne, Downham, Shooter's Hill; Rev. Robert King, Kilmore Rectory, Roscommon; Rev. A. Robertson, St. Saviour's, Brixton; J. Tuffnell, Esq., P.R.C.P., Dublin.

The Secretary of the United States' Navy, in his annual report on the condition and operations of the Navy Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1879, says:—"The condition of the Navy has greatly improved during the last year. There are now in commission 35 vessels, consisting of cruisers, monitors, and torpedo boats. Of the different classes, 16 can be put in condition for sea service in a few months, and 20 could be made ready in an emergency. With this done, the fighting force of the Navy which might be made available in a very short time would consist of 81 vessels of all classes. And if to this number be added the four monitors, Terror, Puritan, Amphitrite, and Monadnock, and eight powerful tugs, which can be fitted for either cruisers or torpedo boats, our whole effective fighting force would consist of 93 vessels. The monitors could be completed, with the necessary appropriations, without much delay. Of the vessels now used as receiving ships, seven are unfitted for any other service. There are 27 vessels unfitted for naval purposes of any kind whatever, but which are a positive expense, as it is necessary to keep in employment a force of shipkeepers to preserve them from entire destruction. Some of them might be profitably converted into merchant vessels, and it would be economy to sell the whole."

In the Battle of this Life, Eno's Fruit Salt is an important Hygienic Need, or necessary adjunct. It keeps the blood pure, prevents fevers and acute inflammatory diseases, removes the injurious effects of Stimulants and Narcotics, such as alcohol, tobacco, tea, coffee, by natural means, thus restoring the nervous system to its normal condition by preventing the great danger of poisoned blood and over cerebal activity, sleeplessness, irritability, worry, &c. Caution.—Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it, you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists. Price 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d.

Reviews.

A Year in Peshawur, and a Lady's Ride into the Khyber Pass. By L. R. Trevelyan. (London: Chapman and Hall.)—In the preface the authoress tells us that the story is written to give some idea of life in Peshawur, and that only to enliven the scenes has she peopled them with typical characters. The idea is not a bad one, and is well carried out, for the plot is slight, and not elaborated in a wearisome manner. Peshawur and the adjoining frontier constitute a centre of interest at the present time. This slight but lively sketch of the ways and habits of the British garrison and their savage neighbours is, consequently, very acceptable. There is no attempt to bore the reader with frontier politics, Mrs. Trevelyan confining herself to depicting life at Peshawur, as it appears to an intelligent person spending a year at it. There is no lack of adventures, but they all bear the stamp of possibility, if not of probability. We are bound, however, as honest critics, to point out that the authoress would have done well to have submitted her pages to the revision of some soldier acquainted with the Indian Army, for a lady's ignorance has betrayed her into several blunders. She is somewhat careless, too, for in one part of the book a certain European corps is spoken of as the 39th Regiment, whereas towards the end it is mentioned as the 139th. It is objectionable to introduce real regiments into her story, as she thus lays herself open to the accusation of personality, which is evidently contrary to her intention. Yet she not only brings the 39th, but also the 58th Regiment on to the scene. Among the other slight blunders which strike us, are the introduction of a batch of very stale Anglo-Indian stories, and the making one of the heroines commit the vulgarism of saying, "Whatever do you mean?" The book, nevertheless, is well worth reading, being amusing as well as instructive.

The Great Artists.—The recently-published volumes of this series contain interesting sketches of "Rubens" and "Hogarth," the first contributed by Charles W. Kett, M.A., the latter by Austin Dobson. Each is excellent in every respect.

The Christian Year. (Cassell and Co.)—The second part of this carefully-illustrated work well deserves a favourable reception.

Amusements.

Managers, more lavish in expenditure than ever, have this season filled their holiday entertainments with every variety of spectacular attraction. Provincial theatres now rival in this respect those of the metropolis, and the magnitude of the aggregate sum expended in the production of pantomimes this last Christmas must be beyond all precedent. Should the competition go on increasing, it must soon arrive at a point when the cost of bringing out one of these annual show-pieces will exceed the possibility of obtaining an adequate remunerative return. There is, however, good reason for believing that the juvenile community, for whose delectation pantomimes are supposed to be provided, would not be altogether unwilling to exchange much of this meaningless splendour for a little more intelligible fun. The prominent features of the holiday productions may be thus indicated:—

At DRURY LANE, in "Bluebeard," Mr. Henry Emden has contrived an admirable scenic change from an Albanian village to the open sea, with an enormous sea-serpent rising from the waters. Very effective too, is the Ottoman pavilion, where the grand ballet takes place, and Mr. Telbin's tasteful and elaborate transformation scene, illustrating the change from winter to summer. The Vokes Family and their associates are full of activity and pantomimic drollery, and there is a young elephant so humourously embodied by two invisible performers, that it is only justice to say nothing can equal the artistic impersonation of the fore-legs by Mr. Ridley, but the equally truthful embodiment of the hind-legs by Mr. Ben Fielding. Altogether, there can be no doubt "Old Drury" has achieved a decided success this year, and that Mr. Augustus Harris, the lessee and producer of this elaborate spectacle, may be heartily congratulated on the first triumph of his first season.

COVENT GARDEN, in "Sindbad the Sailor," chiefly depends on the mechanical effect of the flight of the Roc and the gorgeous splendour of the Diamond Valley, in which a magnificent procession of jewels takes place. The transformation scene, by Mr. Julian Hicks, is here also a very brilliant affair, and the pains bestowed by Mr. Charles Harris on the stage management may be recognised in the smoothness of the general performance. The humour of the opening mainly depends on the clever feats executed by Master Charles Lauri as a monkey, and the fun of the harlequinade is entirely due to the exertions of Mr. Harry Payne, who does his best to preserve the old traditions attached to the name of clown.

The GAIETY "Gulliver" has an amusing scene on board a ship, conceived in the truest spirit of burlesque. The chief reliance has, however, been placed on the effect of the Land of Lilliput, where all the characters are represented by children, who go through some imitative military evolutions with remarkable precision. The fourth act of this elaborate extravaganza is occupied by a ballet, and the flying dance of Mdlle. Ænea, who attracted so much attention last year. Miss E. Farren acts and sings as the youthful Lemuel Gulliver with unflagging vivacity, and Mr. William Beverly has contributed for the finish an allegorical tableau of the Orchid Grove and the Golden Age, showing that the hand of the veteran scenic artist has lost none of its artistic cunning.

The IMPERIAL pantomime is light and lively, and the story of Little Red Riding Hood has been intelligibly told by the author, Mr. W. R. Younge. With Miss Ada Blanche as the heroine, Mr. Lionel Brough as Johnny Stout, Mr. Bannister as Granny Grin, and Mr. Charles Steyne as the Wolf, an excellent cast is provided, and the scenes, cleverly painted by Mr. Perkins, show a singular skill in making a comparatively small stage appear a large one.

"Rothomago," at the ALHAMBRA, is the most brilliant spectacle hitherto brought out at this establishment, so renowned for gorgeousness of display. The original French piece has been adroitly rearranged by Mr. H. B. Farnie, and the four acts, in which there are as many scenes, are richly filled with crowds of coryphées, in all the variety of fanciful and tasteful costumes that the bright imagination of the clever artist and designer, M. Wilhelm, could possibly invent as appropriate to the several occasions. The story of a magic watch, which, being lost, takes everybody into the most unlikely places to find it, is illustrated with lovely music, pleasant acting, effective scenery, and unstinted expenditure.

The Surrey, Sanger's, Standard, Sadler's Wells, Park, Victoria, Marylebone, Grecian, Britannia, Pavilion, and the Crystal and Alexandra Palaces have all produced pantomimes, which are well reported of, and promise to be productive to the treasuries of the several establishments.

H.R.H. the Princess Louise, Marchioness of Lorne, has fixed the 13th inst. (Tuesday), for the evening concert to be given by Mrs. Gould, at the Steinway Hall, on behalf of the Victoria Hospital for Children, Queen's Road, Chelsea, when her Royal Highness has graciously intimated her intention to honour the concert with her presence.

Saturday, Jan. 10, has been fixed for the commencement of the operatic performances in English by the Carl Rosa Company at HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE. A number of artistes, amongst whom several familiar names will be recognised, have been engaged, including Miss Minnie Hauk and Herr Schott. The repertoire includes almost every opera of distinguished merit, while the season will be marked by the following novelties:—"Aida," "Lohengrin," and "Mignon," in English, and above all, Goetz's master-piece, "The Taming of the Shrew," which will at length succeed in being heard. Every arrangement conducive to the comfort of the audiences has been liberally provided for by the management.

For the first time this season the lake in the Buckingham Palace grounds was opened on Saturday last for skating. The Duke of Edinburgh having received her Majesty's permission to skate on this ice, orders were at once given for a iceman from the Royal Humane Society to attend upon the Prince, who, with the Princess, arrived about 12 o'clock. The ice had been thoroughly swept, and was in splendid condition. Both their Royal Highnesses skated with wonderful ease and agility, but the Duchess was evidently more at home in the exercise, and her graceful evolutions would have evoked great applause had it been on the Serpentine or other public water, but none were permitted within the precincts of Buckingham Palace beyond the Prince and Princess, their attendants, and a favoured few. For two hours their Royal Highnesses skated over this splendid ice. The remarkable faculty of recognition peculiar to the Royal family was specially observable with the Duke of Edinburgh on Saturday. Coming up to the iceman, his Royal Highness asked, "Have I not seen before somewhere?" "Yes, your Royal Highness," replied the man; "I was an able seaman aboard the Galatea." "Yes, yes," responded the Prince, "I remember you; your name is Wickens." "That's right, your Royal Highness," returned the man. "Where are you stationed now?" asked the Prince. "At the Royal Humane Society's receiving-house for the present," was the response. And then the Duchess came and examined the corks, and put questions to the man, the Duke telling her he was an old shipmate.

ON BEHALF OF THE DAUGHTERS OF THE LATE

MAJOR BROWNELL who are at present in circumstances requiring pecuniary assistance, the following facts are submitted for your consideration:—

It is with much regret that the friends of the daughters of the late Major Brownell solicit consideration of the following painful circumstances:—The late Major Brownell, District Commissioner on the West Coast of Africa, left the Gold Coast in July last to retire from Government Service on full pay, and died off the Canaries, on August 5, on board the steamship Biafra, on his passage home. He had for years allowed his daughters about £150 per annum, which he remitted to them by monthly instalments. For the six months prior to his death the remittances were not sent as usual, and his reasons, as stated in his letters, were that as he was shortly coming home he intended bringing the money with him. Immediately before leaving the Gold Coast he drew his pay full up to date, and also drew a bill for £105, of which he had the proceeds in his possession. The presumption is that he had therefore with him about £200 in specie or gold-dust. Mr. Courtnay one of the passengers, states that three days before he died he complained to the Captain publicly at the dinner-table that he had been robbed. No report was made of his death. either to the Colonial Office or to his relatives by the Agents of the Steamship Company, and it was nearly three months after his death before his daughters could find out what had become of him, and they have only recently received his property from the Steamship Company. On opening his boxes, neither money, bills, nor gold dust were found in them, and his daughters are consequently, after a suspense of many months, left in much distress It is proposed to raise a small fund to enable them to tide over their immediate necessities, and after Christmas to open a School, for the success of which there seems every probability, as they are well known in Cliftonville, and much sympathy has been shown and assistance promised them towards procuring pupils.

The Misses Brownell are kindly permitted to refer to:—The Rev. — Calvert, the Parsonage, Kentish Town; General Ross, of Eton Grove, Lee, Kent; Colonel J. M'Court, Eltham; — Taylor, Esq., Hove Villas, Cliftonville.

Contributions towards this object may be sent to the Capital and Counties Bank, Aldershot Branch, Aldershot, and will be thankfully acknowledged by Mr. Thomas Walker, of Camberley, Surrey.

December, 1879.

PROSPECTUS.

In order to secure the completion of the Grand National Opera House on the Victoria Embankment, a number of gentlemen have entered into a provisional arrangement with those who commenced the undertaking for an assignment of their interests in the site and in the building, so far as it has gone.

Under this arrangement, the property is to be acquired for £44,100 (of which the vendors take £25,000 in shares), subject only to the granting of a sub-lease of one grand-tier box, and six stalls for 70 years, at a peppercorn rent.

The site is held under an agreement from the Metropolitan Board of Works, dated the 14th January, 1875, for a term of 80 years, from the 29th September, 1874, at a ground-rent of £3,000 per annum.

The Opera House will have all the advantages which it is desirable a building of the kind should possess, and is designed to accommodate 3,000 persons. It will be surrounded by an ample carriage way, and have numerous entrances and exits, thereby avoiding danger from fire and other accidents, and the annoyance of having to wait for carriages.

A provisional contract has been entered into for the purchase of four freehold houses adjoining the site for £13,000. A small part only of the yards belonging to these houses will be required for the Opera building.

It is estimated, as detailed below, that £160,000 will be sufficient to acquire the existing property, purchase these freehold houses, complete the building in accordance with the agreements with the Metropolitan Board of Works and the lessee, and discharge all liabilities.

This Company has, therefore, been formed with a capital of £160,000 to be raised by way of Tontine, in 1,600 shares of £100 each, the payment to be as follows, viz.:—£5 per share on application (to be returned without deduction in case of no allotment); £20 per share on allotment; and the remaining £75 per share in three equal instalments, at intervals of three, six, and nine months from the time of allotment.

A provisional agreement has been entered into with Mr. Mapleson for letting to him, on lease for thirty years, the Opera House, freehold houses and premises, exclusive of one grand-tier box and six stalls, at an annual rent of £11,500, the lessee paying all rates, taxes, and insurance, and doing repairs, and allowing the Directors to select and retain during the lease 100 stalls for the use of the shareholders.

Very extensive cellarage has been provided under a portion of the Opera House, which, with the four houses, will yield a considerable income, which the lessee will receive during his lease.

The hundred stalls will be taken in rotation by the shareholders (each share conferring the right to one stall), priority being determined by ballot in January in every year. Each allottee will hold his stall for one year, and will be at liberty to transfer his right of admission—a valuable privilege for the shareholders.

The result of the application of the principle of "Tontine" to the proposed undertaking will be, that so long as all the lives nominated by the Shareholders last, the annual income will be divided rateably amongst all the shareholders; but that as the lives drop, those Shareholders only whose nominees survive will continue to divide rateably the annual income, until eventually the Shareholder whose nominee survives all the other nominees will become entitled to the whole of the property of the Company.

Each Shareholder, on paying the full amount of his share, will have to name a male life in respect of each of his Shares.

In order that the Tontine may be determined within a reasonable time, no nominated life shall be under the age of 60.

By the agreement with the lessee, the building is to be completed by the 1st March, 1881.

The following statement shows the estimated expenditure on the capital account, and the estimated revenue of the Company.

The following are the agreements which have been entered into on behalf of the Company:—

1. The provisional agreement, dated 24th September, 1879, between James Henry Mapleson of the one part, and Robert William Staniland on behalf of the Company of the other part, for the assignment of all his (Mr. Mapleson's) interest in the agreement from the Metropolitan Board of Works, and for the grant of the sub-lease to Mr. Mapleson, and for the grant of the sub-lease of the box and six stalls, as before mentioned.

2. Provisional agreement, dated the 30th August, 1879, purporting to be made between the several persons whose names are specified in the Schedule thereto, being Michael Lewis Brown and others of the first part, Lord Alfred Paget and others of the second part, Gilbert McLeod Stewart of the third part, and Robert William Staniland, on behalf of the Company, of the fourth part, taken in conjunction with two letters, dated the 14th of August and the 29th October, 1879, and respectively annexed thereto, being an agreement for acquiring certain interests in the site and building.

3. Provisional agreement, dated the 30th August, 1879, made between William Webster of the one part, and Robert William Staniland, on behalf of the Company, of the other part, for the purchase of the four houses.

A copy of the Articles of Association and copies of the above agreements can be inspected at the Offices of the Company.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

" Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—" The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT & PILLS.—OUTWARD INFIRMITIES.—Before the discovery of these remedies, many cases of sores, ulcers, &c., were pronounced to be hopelessly incurable, because the treatment pursued tended to destroy the strength it was incompetent to preserve, and to exasperate the symptoms it was inadequate to remove. Holloway's Pills exert the most wholesome powers over the unhealthy flesh or skin, without debarring the patient from fresh air and exercise, and thus the constitutional vigour is husbanded, while the most malignant ulcers, abscesses, and skin diseases are in process of cure. Both Ointment and Pills make the blood richer and purer, instead of permitting it to fall into that poor and watery state so fatal to many labouring under chronic ulcerations.

Extract.—"It is a true record of a life spent in 'roughing it,' among many men in many lands……Very varied and interesting……His blunt, homely style, extenuating nothing and setting down naught that he cannot vouch for, lends an additional charm to a narrative from every page of which the truth speaks out. SCREW PROPULSION.—EFFICIENCY WITH ECONOMY.

The art of propelling vessels through the water by means of the screw has become a science in itself. In the past, it was not thought necessary to determine what diameter should be assigned to the propeller, the general practice being, up to the present time, to fit to each vessel a screw of the greatest diameter possible, the ratio of pitch and surface area to that diameter being in each case computed from the results obtained in vessels of a similar type. This has led to many failures previously. But the recurrence of such failures can be avoided, by paying attention to the following rule:—

The Diameter of the Screw Propeller should be such as to enable it to form, during its revolutions in the water, a cylinder whose cubic contents, per length equal to that of the vessel, shall be of a weight sufficient to equilibriate (not equal) that of the water displaced by the ship. Be the displacement in any case what it may, the labour of the Engines is to make the vessel displace, per mile, a weight of water equal to her displacement multiplied by the number of times her length is contained in the mile This labour will be in proportion to the speed of the ship; and the power to perform that labour being transmitted from the engines to the propeller, it is evident that unless the relative dimensions of the screw, namely, its diameter, pitch, and surface area, are accurately computed, absolute efficiency cannot be secured in any single instance.

Screw Propellers, to fulfil all requirements, free from vibration, and guaranteed to secure absolute efficiency with economy in consumption of fuel, and also screw apertures in the case of vessels building or to be constructed, are designed on reasonable terms, and all necessary particulars are supplied by SHIPS captured or sunk by an enemy are ships lost and destroyed,—dead, so far as the country to which they appertained is concerned. But they can be replaced. Not so the gallant seamen who may have lost their lives while defending them. These cannot be replaced. The dead cannot be called to life to tell the tale of their defeat; but should that defeat be proved in any way attributable to the neglect of those whose duty it was to provide the gallant defenders of their country with trustworthy weapons, both offensive and defensive, then, in that case, the dead will not go long unavenged, be it in this or in any other country. The history of the past teaches us this much. In France, the Commune followed on her defeat. In Peru, chaos reigns. In all countries, both democratic and socialistic principles are gaining ground, and are spreading rapidly with the increase of population and of pauperism. In most countries these disturbing elements only bide the signal of a national disaster to burst forth like a volcano. Cosmos at such times becomes chaos. The oil of the malcontent is soon poured upon the flames, lighting the revolutionary elements let loose. Petroleum, fire, and sword within, have before now materially assisted the enemy without. History only repeats itself at such times. The Peruvians staked their all upon the Huascar. Has England no Huascars? The Peruvian ironclad is said to have had a crew of 216 officers and men. Of these, 130 were killed by three Chilian shell piercing her armour. Many of the 86 survivors were seriously wounded. Of 24 officers, the five seniors were killed and seven others were dangerously wounded. The Huascar was bravely defended and gallantly fought by her mixed Peruvian and British crew. Of the latter we need not be ashamed, for could we expect British seamen to do better under similar adverse circumstances, even should they be fighting under their own flag? If not, and should it ever come to pass that a British fleet of thinly-armoured and lightly-armed ironclads, such as, for the most part, constitute our Royal Navy, were to encounter the fleet of an enemy off our shores, what other result could we expect from such a combat? A "gallant action" it would certainly be, but most assuredly a hopeless one for the modern types of English ships, when we compare them with those of foreign Powers. These, ship for ship, type for type, and class for class, exceed British vessels in the thickness of the armour protecting their batteries, where these are protected by plates, and in the penetrating power of the guns they each carry. And yet, it is on these, and on these alone, that the fate of a modern naval combat depends. Proof of this fact is no longer wanting. Look to the Huascar, and remembering her fate and its cause, let us ascertain at once whether our thinly-plated and lightly armed obsolete ironclads can be made to carry heavier guns. If they can, then let such be supplied to them without further delay, for their only chance of victory in the future will lie, not in the number, but in the calibre of the guns they shall carry into action, and bring to bear upon the sides of their adversaries; for, should the British shot rebound from off the armour of the enemy's vessels when the guns of the foreigner are sending bursting shell and jagged iron splinters among our crews, what other result can we look forward to than a defeat similar to the Huascar's in the Pacific, which, like her's, would soon be followed by a great national disaster on land? That some means should long ago have been taken by the Admiralty to strengthen the offensive power of existing ironclads, there can be no denying. Even without the experience gained from the tale of the Huascar's defeat, the Admiralty have long since had in their possession sufficient evidence to enable them to form a correct appreciation of the inefficient state of those ships for whose efficiency they are responsible to the country. If any proof were wanting that the Admiralty have paid little or no attention to such evidence, it is to be found in the fact that the very ironclads which stood condemned nine years ago, on the testimony of the most competent men in the kingdom to form an opinion on the subject of their efficiency or otherwise, are still to be found classed as efficient ships of the Royal Navy, and are still employed performing the duties of efficient ships on distant stations; although, were war to be declared to-morrow, even against so small a power as Chili, not one of those ironclads could successfully engage either the Almirante Cochrane or the Blanco Encalada, carrying, as they do, 6-in. to 8-in. plates and 12-ton guns. The war vessels of France, Russia, Turkey, Germany, and Italy could sweep our obsolete ironclads from off the face of the sea. Not one of our ships could even hope to successfully attack the small Chinese gunboats recently dispatched from this country, provided they kept in shallow water and fairly well trained their heavy guns. Had these diminutive craft but a higher rate of speed, they would be a fine match on the high seas for the huge Inflexible, and would most probably sink her before she could seriously disable them, or reduce their numbers. And even supposing the Inflexible did succeed in sinking a couple of these small craft before she was herself disabled or sunk, what an enormous difference would there not be in the pecuniary loss on either side? For how many heavily-armed gunboats can there not be constructed for the same money that the Inflexible costs the nation? Besides, smaller vessels can be built far stronger than is possible with such huge monsters. These, with all their apparent strength, are extremely weak. This is no secret. Mr. Pearce, a member of the well-known firm of John Elder and Co., of Glasgow, stated in evidence before Lord Dufferin's Committee that, placed under circumstances where a merchant steamer would come off uninjured, these ironclads would be totally lost from sheer structural weakness. The plates in the bottom of the Inflexible are in some parts only three-eighths, and in others seven-sixteenths, of an inch thick. Her frames are but quarter-inch plates, to which the bottom is rivetted by weak angle-iron. The testimony of Mr. Pearce before the Committee concerning the Invincible class was conclusive. He said, "In fitting the machinery, if we had any doubt of the vessel grounding, we boomed her off from the quay into mid-stream to prevent it, knowing that if she touched the bottom, even with the water only leaving her 10 in., something would break, either a frame or a bracket plate." Regarding the Hydra class, the same authority stated that, should they attempt to ram, "the stem would be completely knocked away, and the plating would collapse." While in the event of their taking the ground, he felt satisfied "the bottom would go up." In this manner, taking the evidence given before Lord Dufferin's Committee as trustworthy, the whole of the ships designed for the Navy by Mr. E. J. Reed, C.B., stand condemned, owing to their structural weakness and other serious defects; while the result of the Huascar's fight still further condemns them as being utterly unfit for the purposes of modern Naval warfare. It is no excuse to say that since Mr. Reed left the Admiralty he has designed and constructed better ships for the navies of foreign nations. It is one of our complaints that he should ever have been placed in a position to do so; and it is more than probable that, but for the experience he gained, while trying his 'prentice hand on the British Navy, when turning out costly experimental ships now, useless, he never would have become the managing director of Earl's Shipbuilding Company, nor would he have been called upon to design ships any oftener than he was prior to his being placed at the head of the Constructor's Department of the Admiralty. Experientia docet. This is apparent in the estimate Mr. Reed has, from time to time, formed concerning the value of his own designs for the British Navy. The honourable Member for Pembroke, in his book on "Our Ironclad Ships," wrote, in 1869, as follows:—"I cannot but believe that, if the English ironclad fleet were now to be engaged in a gallant action with an enemy's fleet, the very variety of our ships—those very improvements which have occasioned that variety—would be at once the cause of the greatest possible embarrassment to the enemy, and the means of the most vigorous and diversified attack upon the hostile fleet." This constitutes Mr. Reed's clear and distinct opinion as to the value of his own designs, prior to the appointment of Lord Dufferin's Committee to inquire into their efficiency and Mr. Reed's subsequent resignation of his post at the Admiralty. Then followed a few years of quiet meditation, untrammelled by the cares of office, in the course of which Mr. Reed brought the experience he had gained at the Admiralty to bear upon the work he took in hand for foreign nations. What was easier for Mr. Reed to do than to slightly increase the thickness of the armour and the weight of the ordnance in the ships he was then called upon to design? Having thus better armed foreign nations than he had his own, Mr. Reed changed his opinion as to the value of his first efforts at construction on behalf of this country; and unable, apparently, to find any rest while labouring under the burden of such a heavy secret, he eased his conscience by writing to the Times of January 19, 1877:—"Yet another source of aggravated expenditure, and of something very much worse besides, is to be found in the endless variety of our ships of war, growing directly out of defective Admiralty administration. . . . . . and, in the event of war, it would probably transform a well-planned engagement into a miserable mêlée, and might inflict a terrible defeat and disaster upon us." It will thus be seen that, however ludicrous it may seem to find Mr. Reed insinuating that the Admiralty could be guilty of any jobbery, we have far better grounds on which to base our denunciation of the present state of the Navy,—better, indeed, than at first sight might have appeared possible. Mr. Reed has not hesitated to condemn his own earlier designs! Why should we hesitate to do so? Does not Mr. Reed claim the original conception of the general design as to the location of the turrets in the Duilio, "the most formidable fighting-machine, both for offence and defence, ever set afloat in the waters of continental Europe," similar in many respects to the weaker British Inflexible, a vessel in which we find it admitted that the "double bottom is divided and subdivided into an unusual number of spaces, and that the water-tight bulkheads have been introduced to an extent not before attempted, and in fact, almost every conceivable precaution has been taken to make her secure against the ram and the torpedo?" But notwithstanding these precautions Chief Engineer J. W. King, of the United States' Navy has recorded it as his opinion, in his well-known report on "European Ships-of-War," &c., "that if, however, she could be fairly struck by several powerful fish-torpedoes, it is quite probable she would be crippled, waterlogged, or possibly sunk. The question therefore presented is whether two vessels of smaller dimensions, each carrying two 81-ton guns, instead of four, would not have been a safer and, in some respects, a better investment?" And has not Mr. Reed also denounced the Inflexible as inefficient? But Mr. Reed claims the general design of the Duilio, a vessel avowedly designed to outdo the Inflexible, although commenced to be constructed some short time before the latter. Does not this prove that, through the neglect, "and something very much worse besides," of those sitting in Whitehall, foreign nations have been enabled to keep in advance of the British Admiralty? We think it does. But beyond this, the contradictory opinions held at various times by Mr. Reed concerning the efficiency of his own designs, and of those he has claimed as his, most conclusively prove that in the earlier days of the reconstruction of our Navy, a copious use of "false science" was resorted to, both to bewilder and to dazzle the British public. In this manner dust was thrown in the eyes of the nation. Suddenly a dreadful catastrophe overtook the ill-fated Captain. This raised a suspicion in high quarters that all was not as it should be in the Constructor's Department of the Admiralty. Lord Dufferin's Committee of Inquiry was determined upon. Mr. Reed resigned his post as Chief Constructor at the Admiralty. Mr. Barnaby was appointed to succeed him; and one of his first acts was to establish a scientific "co-efficient of fighting efficiency," "and on these assumptions," says Mr. Barnaby, "we get the following measures of fighting efficiency:—Monarch, 149·8; Hercules, 113·4; and Captain, 83·3, &c." But when Mr. Barnaby constructed an equation whereby to determine the co-efficient of fighting efficiency of men-of-war, he was directly interested in demonstrating his brother-in-law's designs to be superior to all others, and he did so by means of this co-efficient. Now, applying Mr. Barnaby's own formula to the Inflexible, we find that her co-efficient of fighting efficiency is 254·6, but that the fighting efficiency of the Italian Duilio is represented by the co-efficient 354·7. Thus, by using Mr. Barnaby's own weapons, it can be clearly proved that we have allowed ourselves to be outstripped in the race for the most powerful ironclad. This we shall explain in our concluding article. We do not, however, forget that we have imposed upon ourselves an onerous task, for we are well aware of the fact that, although we have not an immense fleet of armour-clad vessels equal to withstand any guns we might have to face in the event of a general European war, we still have a Navy on which the public has been taught to look with pride, and which it has repeatedly been asked to compare with that belonging to any two foreign nations, it being admitted that some of the foreign vessels are dangerously clad and armed. But that is not sufficient. The question we are discussing and desire to see discussed is, as to whether we are on the right tack in prolonging a system which places so many eggs in the same basket at a time when guns, ram, and torpedo are made to unite in their efforts to break them. If this system is wrong, then our confidence in our Navy is gone.

Naturally, as a Service paper, we are specially interested in the recent regulations respecting War Correspondents, and the controversy to which they have given birth. We conceive also that we possess a strong claim to be considered impartial in the matter. With us, the sword and pen balance each other; we are most anxious for detailed accounts of military operations, while at the same time we are perhaps in a better position than many of our contemporaries for appreciating the necessity, in the public interest, of protecting Generals commanding in the field from the possible indiscretion, inaccuracy, ignorance, or partiality of the representatives of the Press. No one can deny that it would be impossible to allow War Correspondents unlimited freedom of speech and action. In our opinion, however, the restraint necessary should be applied according to the circumstances of the moment, and rather at the discretion of the General commanding, than according to any formulated rules. Moral pressure and instructions or remonstrances brought to bear, or given to, offending correspondents would, if mingled tact and firmness were used, do more than publishing a set of regulations which are certainly regarded as insulting by most journalists. All war correspondents are aware that in the field the will of the General must be absolute, whether as regards soldiers or civilians; but they do not fancy the assumption that they need to be kept in order by a stringent code, especially drawn up for the purpose of restraining them from unpatriotic or mischievous conduct. For our own part, we are disposed to think that such a code is unnecessary, and that parts of the code actually promulgated contain certain most objectionable clauses. Mr. Archibald Forbes, in the January number of the Nineteenth Century, takes up the question very hotly; indeed, he writes as if he had been in a violent passion from the moment he took pen in hand till be laid it down. He does not object on principle to certain regulations for War Correspondents, but protests against certain of those which are now in force. The responsibility for issuing these regulations has been in a rather cowardly manner disavowed by the Indian Government, who assert that they emanated from the Horse Guards, which means, from the Duke of Cambridge. Now, his Royal Highness, being extremely sensitive to newspaper criticism, and having a great objection to any printed comments on military matters, it is not to be surprised at that he should have seized his opportunity to try and practically muzzle war correspondents. This it is evidently the intention of the new regulations to do, and that intention has been successfully carried out, for the simple reason that the regulations were promulgated during the Recess. We foresee, however, a bad time for the Horse Guards as soon as Parliament meets. Nothing could have been more disquieting and unsatisfactory than either the official or the Press telegrams, during the recent operations in Afghanistan. The former, indeed, have on several occasions conveyed a false impression of the real state of things, while the latter have thrown but a half-light on the former. To our shame be it spoken, moreover, the regulations of England are far more restrictive and humiliating than those of Germany and Russia, and yet we pride ourselves on our outspokenness. It would really seem as if our military system were in so bad a state that we feared to speak the truth. To come to the point. As to whether the presence of war correspondents is, on the whole, more advantageous than disadvantageous to the public interests, or the contrary, it is useless to discuss the question. The public has decided that it will have war news other than official, and no resistance of the authorities would be successful. It is therefore unnecessary to follow Mr. Archibald Forbes in his discussion of the matter. We will therefore, accepting the continued existence of war correspondents as a fact, proceed to examine the regulations by which the authorities are seeking to prevent any evil consequences from the institution. Mr. Archibald Forbes examines and criticises each of them, arriving at the conclusion that they are all justifiable, save numbers 9, 10, 13, and 14. No. 9 lays it down that a Staff officer is to be appointed Press Censor, with power to supervise the intelligence despatched by correspondents. No. 10 gives him authority to oblige correspondents to send all their communications through him, and allows him to stop or alter anything which, in his opinion, may be dangerous to the good of the Army. We agree with Mr. Forbes in thinking these clauses most objectionable. The censor may not always be able to examine at once all correspondence by letter or telegram which, after an important battle, the representatives of the Press may wish to send off. Thus some papers would get news earlier than others. Indeed, a letter may, in the case of a distant war, be delayed a whole week. Far worse, however, is the authority to alter a letter or telegram. To use Mr. Forbes's own words, "It is in his power, if the correspondent perversely declines to lie, nevertheless to make a liar of him!" The censor who altered a telegram would, moreover, simply be guilty of forgery. Anything more dishonest than the regulation in question we cannot conceive. One effect of it will be to promote the dissemination of false rumours, to arouse suspicion as to the actual state of affairs, and to make the public disbelieve everything not contained in a private letter. It is very probable that newspaper proprietors will, in order to check the accuracy of communications tampered with and garbled by the censor, and to increase their information, arrange for secret correspondents. According to Nos. 13 and 14 of the regulations, no telegrams or letters are to be sent through telegraph offices or post offices outside the radius of military jurisdiction. By these regulations, the active, enterprising correspondent is placed on precisely the same footing as his lazy, unenterprising colleague. Still, they constitute a natural supplement to Nos. 9 and 10, and all four regulations deserve condemnation in the lump. There would be some excuse for them if we were engaged in a European war, but considering that even if a telegram to London were re-telegraphed to the Russian telegraph station nearest to the Afghan frontier, namely, Charqui, and forwarded thence by courier, the intelligence would not reach the enemy for a fortnight after its original transmission. In much less time, spies from our lines would be able to communicate far more voluminous and useful information. There is, however, one thing to be said, which is that everything will depend upon the manner in which these regulations—four of which are so offensive and stupid—are actually applied. No doubt, they have been at first interpreted with some strictness, but when the novelty has worn off, we suspect that much indulgence and a good deal of liberal interpretation will take place, for no General or Press Censor who cared for the approbation of his fellow-countrymen, and was not an absolute idiot, would like to make enemies of newspaper Correspondents. Indeed, the regulations have, as regards the Afghan campaign, just been cancelled. Still, it is desirable by an expression of public opinion to prevent any future attempt to muzzle the Press to an extent not needed on military considerations.

The good intentions of the Admiralty towards Sub-Lieutenants, which we had good reason to fear had been abandoned, under pressure brought to bear by the Treasury, have actually been carried out, and it was on the strength of having received her Majesty's assent in Council that their Lordships made the recent promotion of the deserving sub-lieutenants of 1874. By this Order in Council, the Admiralty is empowered to gradually increase the Lieutenants' List to 1,000, of whom 800 are to be for executive duties, and 200 for navigating duties. The increase will be made as gradually as circumstances will admit; but as authority has been given for seventy-five sub-lieutenants to be promoted, with seniority of 1879, and as in each succeeding year, so long as the list is under 1,000, sub-lieutenants are to be promoted in number not exceeding the number of sub-lieutenants added to that List during the previous year; it will not take long to fill up the 800 executives. According to our calculation, there are at the present moment 850 lieutenants, of whom less than sixty are for navigating duties; and thus it would appear that if the new Order in Council is acted up to literally, there now exist but ten vacancies for Executive Lieutenants. But as the 1880 promotions from the Sub-Lieutenants' List should equal, but not exceed, the number that came on the Sub-Lieutenants' List in 1879, some forty officers of the junior grade will look for promotion this year. By this it may be assumed that the Admiralty does not intend to keep the vacancies for lieutenants for navigating duties open, but will look to those promoted to qualify up to the number of 200, as the numbers on the Navigating list fall short. This helping hand to the Sub-Lieutenants, who were beginning to look a trifle too old for their rank, and called to mind the days of the "Old Mate," is most welcome, although it does not require much foresight to perceive that the lift is but a temporary one, and cannot have a lasting effect. Unless something be done to hasten the lieutenants off their List, the rush of juniors on being promoted at the rate laid down, viz., promoting lieutenants equal to the number of sub-lieutenants that came on last year, will soon create a very serious block. Still, as promotion from the Lieutenants' List seems hopeless to the majority, it is something to get on that List as soon as possible, instead of becoming an old sub-lieutenant before beginning the labour of plodding up an endless list, of which the goal, for the majority, is nothing better than retirement with the rank of Commander. Their Lordships will, however, be heartily thanked by many for this timely assistance, and we would ask the Board to look at one or two other lists of officers of relative rank to sub-lieutenants, and to think for a moment whether they, too, are not deserving of something to encourage them, and to help them out of that terrible block to which past Boards have committed them, by the unwise manner in which juniors have been entered with a rush.

Rear-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh and H.R.H. the Duchess of Edinburgh have arrived at Cannes on a visit to H.I.M. the Empress of Russia, whose health is improving. The Russian frigate Pojarski, flying the British flag, has arrived off Cannes on Jan. 2, with Admiral Kremer and two officers of the general staff on board. Immediately upon landing they paid a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, and afterwards dined with the Empress of Russia.

We are given to understand that the sketch of the Huascar after her fight, which appeared in the American Army and Navy Journal, and which was reproduced in this country by the Engineer, was drawn only as a rough sketch by Captain Luce, U.S.N., commanding the training-ship Minesota, at New York, to illustrate the state and condition of the Huascar after the action, as represented by the New York Press; and that Captain Luce, one of the most able and efficient officers in the American Navy, never represented this sketch to have been taken from the vessel after the action.

The practical value of the depositing dock system appears to be so much appreciated by the Russian Government, that they have just contracted with Messrs. Clark, Standfield, and Co., its inventors, for the construction of four more pontoons. This dock has several times docked the two Popoffka, the Novgorod and the Vice-Admiral Popoff, but by the addition of these four pontoons, it will be enabled to lift ironclads or other vessels of 6,000 tons dead weight. It is the only dock in the world capable of docking the new Imperial yacht now being built on the Clyde by Messrs. Elder and Co., which has a beam of no less than 150 feet.

The Admiralty have issued a circular directing that captains in command of ships being no longer pecuniarily responsible for the deficiency of gunner's stores, unless it arises through their own action or orders, and as the certificate from the War Office, referred to at page 778 of the Queen's Regulations and Admiralty Instructions is no longer necessary, the clause and note on the subject at page 778 of the said Instructions are to be considered as cancelled; and for a similar reason, paragraph 5, page 777, relating to admirals and commodores of the first class, is also to be considered as cancelled.

Few would believe the depths of ignorance regarding naval matters in which this seafaring nation is plunged. Only last week a society journal assured its readers that Prince George of Wales is to go to the Naval College to become a "Practical Duty Officer" of the Navy. As a matter of course, he must, like every one else, go to college after he has served his time as a midshipman, but he is already a "Practical Duty Officer," whatever that new-fangled term may mean, as he does his duty as a midshipman every day of his life. At his age, we have often seen his royal uncle with a marling-spike slung round his neck, a fid of grease in one hand and the other in the tar-pot, turning in dead-eyes in the main chains.

The Russian ironclad Minin, now on passage to the China station, was originally constructed as a rigged turret-ship on the Coles system. She is 298 ft. long, has a beam of 49 ft., and a displacement of 5,650 tons. But in consequence of the catastrophe to the Captain, the Minin was altered to Mr. Reed's central-battery system. She has now a central citadel 98 ft. long and 10 ft. above the water line, protected by 12-in. plates, worked on to 24 in. of teak backing. The armament consists of four guns of 28 tons each, mounted in pairs on two turn-tables on the main-deck, and fired en barbette over the top of the battery. She is a most formidable ship, far superior to the Iron Duke, the only British ironclad on the China station. Wherever we may chance to turn our eyes we find foreign vessels of war carrying heavier guns, even where they do not carry heavier armour, than the English ships on the same station. This is certainly not as it should be.

Lieutenant H. J. Stockton, United States' Navy, visited Chatham Dockyard last week, by permission of the Admiralty, and inspected both the Agamemnon and Polyphemus very minutely. Lieutenant Stockton is honourably known in his Service as an officer of great and varied scientific attainments, whose reports have at all times been considered of value by the Washington Navy Department. He is a lineal descendant of a very old English family, and is at present on a visit to his brother-in-law, Sir William Onslow, Bart., whose family descends from the gallant Admiral Onslow, who so nobly bore himself at the battle of Camperdown, breaking the enemy's line in such fine style, as to elicit the admiration of the whole Fleet, and not only received the thanks of his Commander-in-Chief, under the stern of whose ship he was signalled to pass after the action to receive them, but also that of his Sovereign, who conferred a baronetcy on the gallant sailor. When being thanked by the King for his repeated gallant services to the country, Admiral Onslow remarked:—"Please your Majesty, I am always on service, for I am no sooner out of your Majesty's Fleet than I am, worse luck, stationed in the Fleet!" Sir Richard Onslow, however, did not revisit that Fleet which had previously so often claimed his presence when not on active employment, and which has now been abolished. He founded that honourable family of which the present Sir William Onslow is the most worthy representative, and it is rumoured that the Admiralty have it in contemplation to name one of her Majesty's ships after the gallant Admiral Onslow, of Camperdown renown. Lieutenant Stockton, U.S.N., has been elected an honorary member of the Army and Navy Club. We sincerely hope that the good-feeling which at present exists between the English and American peoples will be lasting, and the cause of much good to both countries, forming, as they do, an English-speaking race, which, in case of need, could, by joining hands, ensure future peace to the whole world. L'Union fait la force. We are one in speech and race, we should be so at heart, and in true and manly fashion shake hands after our now-adjusted family quarrels, forget the past, and look forward to a joint happy, prosperous, and brilliant future.

Mails for Channel Squadron will be dispatched from Plymouth by Salamis on Tuesday, the 13th inst. Letters should be posted in London not later than Monday afternoon.

We regret to learn that the promotion to the rank of Lieutenant of Sub-Lieutenant Duncan Macpherson, serving on board the Foxhound, on the China station, has been cancelled by the Admiralty, owing, it is said, to the unsatisfactory nature of the reports received by their Lordships from Lieutenant Nowell, commanding the Foxhound, concerning his senior executive officer's conduct. Sub-Lieutenant Duncan Macpherson attained his present rank on the 1st of October, 1874, and his name appeared in the Gazette of December 12th, 1879, on promotion, now cancelled.

It is announced that M. Sheveleff, a Russian merchant in the China trade, has been provisionally entrusted by the Russian Government with the execution of a plan for the establishment of regular steam communication between the ports of China, Japan, and Eastern Siberia. By the terms of the proposed contract, M. Sheveleff will receive from the Government a mileage subsidy of three paper roubles per Italian mile, and will commence operations next year. And at the same time, in order to multiply and strengthen relations with Egypt, the Russian Steam Company intends starting a regular weekly steamer from Odessa to Alexandria, which will always touch at Constantinople, and alternately call at Syra and Smyrna. The same company has made an arrangement with the South Russian railway lines and some foreign ones concerning direct communication with the ports of India and the Far East. These traffic arrangements do not look much as if Russia could only reach British possessions in the East after passing over several thousand miles of desert, as is so often asserted. It should never be forgotten, when discussing this subject, that the Russian policy is to work abroad by means of intrigues set on foot among her neighbour's subjects, and not to make any direct attack upon a neighbouring power until diplomacy has either failed or succeeded in securing the support or connivance of a considerable section of the people whose rulers she intends to depose and supersede.

There are in this world men of action, men of words, and men of thought. The thinkers generally get the best of the day to themselves. That this is the case has recently been demonstrated within the Admiralty. Great, indeed, must have been the amount of thought devoted to the recent Admiralty reorganisation scheme, but it was scarcely to be thought their Lordships would have allowed so many able and efficient men to resign their appointments, and leave the Service on handsome pensions, merely to make room for an ambitious junior.

In addition to the six senior clerks who retire from the Admiralty, no fewer than five first-class clerks have been induced to leave the Service, on handsome pensions of course, so as to enable the reorganisation scheme of the men of thought, or "schemers," to be carried out. To induce these first-class clerks to resign when they had five principal clerkships waiting for their acceptance, very tempting terms must have been offered. But why get rid of so many able and efficient men, whose experience was so useful in the office, merely to hoist favoured juniors into well-paid billets, with prospects of a capital retiring allowance whenever they wish to go and lead an idle life?

Mr. Edwin Swainson springs from his position as the junior of the principal clerks to the post of Assistant-Secretary of the Admiralty, the result of his reorganisation being to place him at the head of all the Admiralty clerks. It is to him that this scheme is mainly due, he having devoted much time to the committee which considered the matter; and while others go, he seems inclined to stick all the faster, apparently intending to "go on for ever." Mr. Swainson's well-thought-out reorganisation scheme, under the patronage of Sir Massey Lopes, has certainly met with its reward. He, no doubt, spent a merry Christmas.

The question the country has to ask itself, however, is, what will all this scheming cost the taxpayer? The retirements and resignations of so many efficient men, long before there was any need of their withdrawal from their desks, is not only a costly matter, but also detracts materially from the efficiency and smooth working of the office, and for some months to come the loss of the old hands, and the introduction of new ones will cause a very fair amount of disorganisation to spring from the new reorganisation scheme.

We have had cause to complain of the jobbery which has been imported into the reorganisation of the clerical staff at the Admiralty, and of the consequent waste in the money of the British tax-payer. So far as we can see, there is but one efficacious remedy for the disease which lies at the root of Admiralty maladministration. The Service is at present the shuttlecock tossed about between those two battledores, the shifting, political, semi-professional Board of Admiralty and the permanent Civilian element, which "rolls on for ever" at the Admiralty, while "my Lords" come and go with every change of Ministry. Now, the Civilian element can be proved to have at all times placed its own immediate interests before the interests of the Service, and this state of things will always obtain at the Admiralty so long as the clerical staff remains in the hands of civilians. If the Government was really honest in its professed desire to retrench, without affecting the efficiency of the Service, it should supersede the civilian clerical staff at the Admiralty by the Paymaster Branch of the Navy, employing clerks, assistant-clerks, and assistant-paymasters to do the work of the present civilian writers, clerks, and senior clerks, and paymasters in all the higher appointments now held by civilians in each department. The affairs of the Navy would then be managed by a clerical staff directly interested in the efficiency of the Service,—a staff which, from the junior clerk's assistant to the senior paymaster, would have to serve afloat periodically. Such a reorganisation scheme, if carried out in its entirety, would indeed be worthy of the name of "Reform."

The grand total of the tonnage of the armoured ships of European nations, exclusive of floating batteries, has been computed by Chief Engineer J. W. King, United States' Navy, to be 1,014,500 tons. The British Navy amounts in the aggregate to 317,000 tons of armoured vessels, which cost the nation eighteen millions pounds sterling. England possesses 55 ironclads built and building, exclusive of 10 vessels condemned. France comes next, with 53 effective vessels, having an aggregate tonnage of 184,000, including those now building. Russia is possessed of 29 ships. Turkey can show a fleet of 24 fighting-ships as good as any afloat. Italy can muster 16 ironclads, "and when the Duilio and Dandolo are completed, will possess the two most powerful fighting-ships in the continental waters of Europe." The German empire has 13 vessels, 8 of them efficient sea-going ironclads; Holland possesses 17 ships; Austria, 14; Spain, 7; Denmark, 6; Sweden and Norway, 8; Greece, 3; and Portugal, 1. The grand total of European armoured ships, including those building, may thus be set down as numbering 246. Crossing the Atlantic, Brazil owns 17; Peru 4 monitors, having lost her seagoing ironclads; Chili, 3; the Argentine Republic, 2; while in Asia, Japan now musters a fleet of four ironclads and China has four heavily armed gunboats. We have already demonstrated that 28 of the English ironclads are useless for any of the purposes of modern naval warfare, unless their armaments are changed, and heavier ordnance is placed in their batteries. Mr. G. Rendel, of Sir W. Armstrong's Elswick firm, has for many years maintained that the gun should be the predominant feature in war ships, and in 1874 he submitted to the Admiralty a design for an improved gunboat, capable of carrying a 38-ton gun, and yet be a good vessel both under steam and canvas. We believe we are right in saying that six of these craft could have been built to steam 14 knots, and could have been equipped for less money than has been expended on the Inflexible, an ironclad which would be no match for four of the gunboats, but absolutely certain to succumb to the whole six. Nevertheless, "financial considerations" caused the Admiralty to decline Mr. Rendel's offer with thanks. The Chinese have consequently had the benefit of Mr. Rendel's design. Each of the four Chinese gunboats built at Elswick carries an Armstrong 38-ton gun, which throws a projectile weighing 800lbs. No wonder Admiral Coote is of opinion that they are together a match for any ironclad afloat. Their crews, however, will not be instructed in the art of capturing British ironclads.

In accordance with official representation, the present report on the "Health of the Navy" during the year 1878 makes its appearance in an abridged form, the bulk being made up of statistical tables. The remarks are of the most meagre kind; notes on medical topography, climatology, and treatment do not obtain, and altogether, it is rather unsatisfactory reading. We find, for instance, nine cases of small-pox reported, but only in one is there any mention made as to whether the patient had been previously vaccinated or ever revaccinated. The statistics of the Naval Lunatic Asylum give no clue as to the cause of the disease, and paralysis of the insane seems to be classed as a symptom rather than a disease. These and other defects are likely to impair the value of the official report as a guide to the medical officer on service, while the obsolete charts of stations appended will give little help to the general reader in identifying localities. Why, for example, in the chart of the Pacific station, should the antiquated name of New Georgia be given to what is now known as British Columbia; and why should Valparaiso, the principal port on the station, be left out? The port of Simon's Bay and its Naval station find no place on the chart of the West Coast of Africa, while as regards Australia, independent colonies, such as Queensland, &c., are altogether ignored. Surely the Hydrographical Department might take pity, and rectify some of these errors. The health of the Service, as a whole, during the year was satisfactory, and no epidemics prevailed. The scourges of cholera and yellow-fever appear only in a few sporadic cases. The death-rate was raised, however, by the loss of the Eurydice, 311 deaths being attributable to this cause, thus giving for the whole Service a death-rate of 9·09 per 1,000, being an increase of ·66 per 1,000 compared with last year. The total force employed was 46,400, and the total number of cases of disease and injury entered on the sick list was 54,626; the average number of men sick daily was 2187·84; the total number of persons invalided was 1,662, and the total number of deaths 669. There was an increase in the number of cases of disease, compared with the preceding year, of 51·72 per 1,000, but as regards invaliding, there was a reduction in the rate of ·08 per 1,000. The Naval Report of Health is only ordered to be presented to the House of Commons, while that of the Army is presented to both Houses. Why such an anomaly should exist it is difficult to understand.

Many of our readers will learn with regret that Mr. W. R. Foster, of the Accountant-General's Department of the Admiralty, is about to retire, having accepted the terms of the recent reorganisation.

The re-arming of the Italian infantry with the Veterli rifle, which has been proceeding for several years, is progressing slowly. From a Parliamentary report issued, it appears that by the 1st of January, 1880, the Italian Army will dispose of only 440,000 rifles of the new pattern. At least 220,000 are still wanting to complete the arming also of the Landwehr troops. It is proposed, in order to accelerate the supply of the adopted arm, to apply to the Italian Chamber for a special vote of 9,600,000 lire (£384,000).

Captain W. G. Knox, Royal Artillery, commanding the Artillery in the Transvaal, is acting in the capacity of special correspondent of the Times, with Colonel Baker Russell, C.B.

Assistant-Commissary C. D. O'Connor, having been appointed principal commissariat officer in Ceylon, Commissary E. W. H. Webb, C.B., lately returned from the Cape, has been appointed second commissariat officer at Aldershot, being succeeded at the head of the Transport Department at the station by Deputy Commissary F. H. H. Bridgman, who has also been employed in Zululand.

The following officers, lately employed on active service in Zululand, have been ordered to proceed to Sandhurst, to join the Staff College, viz.:—Captains, F. G. Doyle, 2nd Dragoon Guards; J. D. Legard Royal Artillery; A. W. Morris, 58th Regiment, and E. P. D. Jeffreys, 88th Regiment, and Lieutenants H. H. Crookenden, Royal Artillery, and E. T. H. Hutton, 60th Rifles.

It is to be hoped that now the Commissariat and Ordnance Store Departments are effectually separated, the opportunity will not be missed of giving the latter, when their Warrant appears, proper distinctive titles. When they were called Ordnance Storekeepers, objectionable though that title undoubtedly was, the Service, at any rate, knew what they and their duties were; but of late years, when they have had the same titles as the Commissariat, it has, we hear from all sides, been a continual cause of delay and confusion. The same with the Army Service Corps. We would suggest that the Commissariat and Transport companies should be called Commissariat and Transport Staff Corps. As there is now the opportunity of removing these standing puzzles in the Service, it will, we hope, be taken advantage of.

We are glad to be able to state that the Warrant for the reorganised Commissariat and Transport Staff has been forwarded this week to Osborne, for her Majesty's signature, and will doubtless be published immediately. We believe that the document will be found, on the whole, to be as satisfactory as could be expected, under the circumstances. The grievances of officers date from 1870, when the Control was formed, and exist chiefly amongst the officers of the rank of Commissary downwards. By making the conditions of this Warrant retrospective, as far as service goes, to February, 1870, most of the grievances will be met. By the compulsory retirements, there must be a certain flow of promotion, and as there will be a really fair proportion of the several grades forming the total establishment of the Department, there will at once be considerable promotion throughout the Department. The Assistant-Commissaries over forty years of age, of whom there are some seven or eight, will scarcely be satisfied with the provision made for them. They will be appointed Quartermasters, on the same rates of pay as Quartermasters of the Royal Artillery. This has been decided in the interests of the Department, and if they or any of the officers are found, when they retire, to be losers by the new warrant, compared with that upon which they are now serving, they are to have an addition to their retired pay. As we have all along contended, the manifest blot in the scheme is that the officers to be hereafter appointed are to be substantive military officers, having Army titles; whilst those transferred from the existing Department, and who will be the seniors, will be allowed to have only relative rank. It is inconceivabe that the authorities should allow the new Department to be marred at starting, by what must be a source of confusion to all ranks, and much annoyance to the senior officers, who, being addressed as "Mr.," will speedily be aware of the fact that "Captain So-and-So," the last joined probationer, has a better position in the eyes of officers, soldiers, and the world at large, than they have. It is to be hoped that when transferred to the Horse Guards, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge's consideration and sense of justice will speedily remedy this palpable and, we may say, mischievous error. So far as the appointment of officers to the Commissariat Staff being in future confined to officers from the Army, it is doubtless the wisest course, though whether it is advisable that they should be seconded in their regiments for so long a period as ten years, is questionable. Five, we think, should be the limit. The Warrant will probably attract a good many combatant officers.

The experiments made this summer at Sveaborg, and later at Tavasttchus, with the novel defensive coverings for guns of General Froloff, constructed of rope, have proved those defences a failure. At Sveaborg two defects showed themselves; the defences took up too much space of the gun platform, and they formed conspicuous aims for the enemy's fire. At Tavasttchus it was found that the material of the covering does not possess sufficient power of resistance, shells penetrating both them and the gabions placed behind them. The defensive covering being joined to the gun, aiming becomes impossible as soon as the frame upon which it rests is damaged by a splinter. In consequence of this latter defect, they stand slantwise towards the breastwork, when the gun is moved sidewards, and cover then only a very small portion of the platform. Even if the coverings are parallel with the breastwork, the men serving the gun, with the exception of those employed close to the barrel, are very much exposed. As there is further this drawback, that the range of view for pointing is very much restricted by the covering, and as it is a question whether an enemy's ships would remain any length of time within easy range of the batteries, it is considered that the employment of those defensive coverings is, on the whole, not to be recommended. In Russia, at the present time, very few coast guns have a range of view up to ninety degrees, and nearly all guns fire through narrow embrasures, by which the batters stand fanlike to each other. Thus the guns, as well as the men serving them, are well protected, and no defensive covering is required. When they become really necessary, it is recommended that they should not be connected with the gun; they should be be fixed in the embrasures in such a manner that they may be opened and shut by means of a hinge.

We have received from a non-commissioned officer serving in Natal a very well-written letter on the subject of soldiers' rations in the field. Our correspondent, who served during the recent Zulu campaign in General Newdigate's division, maintains that in the field the soldier is not sufficiently well fed. He admits that the commissariat arrangements were all that could be wished, and that the troops never had to go without their rations. Nevertheless, he expresses his conviction that no man in the force would say that he any one day had enough to eat. Our corrrespondent's argument is that if a horse or dog is hardly worked, you give him the best of food, and plenty of it. A soldier in the field is not treated in this way, and, as a matter of fact, gets less to eat when on service than in quarters, for he has no canteen, from which he can obtain food with which to supplement his rations. Moreover, getting no beer, he feels the need of eating more; being almost continually in the open air, his appetite is sharpened. Frequently our correspondent has had to turn out an hour before sunrise, to accomplish, heavily laden, a twelve or fifteen miles' march, with occasional spells of hauling waggons up hills; and has commenced this hard day's work with nothing but a cup of weak coffee and a few pieces of biscuit, or worse still, some half-baked dough or parboiled rice. Flour or rice was, during the Zulu campaign, often served out, in lieu of biscuit; and sometimes, when it rained, neither flour nor rice could be cooked. Our correspondent suggests that a ration of oatmeal and sugar should be served out to troops in the field, and the idea is not a bad one. The whole question, however, deserves the earnest attention of the Authorities, for more men are sent to hospital by insufficient or unsuitable food than any other cause, and a sick soldier is a very costly and troublesome being.

We have always considered that pensions are given to officers' widows and orphans in a very offensive form, namely, that of compassionate allowances. The officers of the Army do not ask Government for charity or compassion, but only for their rights. Among the latter may be included pensions, which constitute a portion of the consideration for which officers have given their services to and risked their lives for her Majesty. To speak of "compassionate allowances" is, therefore, to be guilty of an insulting misnomer. An officer's family is as much entitled to pension as the officer during his lifetime was to pay. At all events, it is a question of moral, if not of legal, right. Poor enough also are the miserable pittances called pensions in the lower grades, and as they are given for services rendered, we cannot see what connection they have with the private income of the receipient. The Authorities take, however, a different view of the matter, and the widow of an officer has, before she can obtain a pension, to show that she does not possess a private income of more than a certain amount. On the same principle, no officer of large private means ought to receive pay. Besides, the rule about pensions must often work with great inequality. Mrs. A., for example, has a private income of just £5 less than the amount which would disqualify her for pension, yet she obtains the latter, and is in consequence better off than Mrs. B., who, having £5 a year more than the disqualifying amount, receives nothing from the State. We have been induced to make the above remarks, by a letter which informs us that an officer's widow, who has for many years been in receipt of a pension, has received from the Paymaster-General a paper calling on her to state whether she has any private means, and if so, the amount. Can it be that the Treasury is about to deprive her of that which her husband earned for her? We trust not, but we are not without our fears. Surely some friend of the widows and orphans of soldiers will, by a timely question in the House of Commons, put a stop to such unjust meanness, if it is really contemplated.

The following announcement, which appeared in Tuesday's Gazette, may be quoted as evidence of the difficulties which poor men have to contend against who adopt the military profession:—"1st West India Regiment—Lieutenant W. G. Matthews, from the 3rd Hussars, to be Lieutenant, vice F. W. N. W. Browne, who exchanges." Thus, after twelve and a half years' service, two and a half of which have been passed as adjutant, this officer has to start his career afresh as a junior subaltern in a West India Regiment, because the Indian Staff Corps is closed to him, owing to his length of service, and he finds that soldiering in England on a cavalry subaltern's pay is a luxury too great for him to aspire to.

We have all along held that the imputations which have been cast upon the character of Colonel Wellesley, Coldstream Guards, by which it was made to appear that he had been guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, were entirely unjustified by facts, and that Colonel Wellesley has been subjected to most unfair treatment, in being denied a full and searching inquiry into the circumstances of his dispute with a brother member of the Turf Club. We are glad to notice, from an announcement in Tuesday's Gazette, that others besides ourselves have been brought to take a proper view of the matter, and that Colonel Wellesley has been able so far to clear himself, as to be allowed once more to resume his former position as a duty-officer in the Brigade of Guards. We congratulate Colonel Wellesley upon this termination of an affair in which he has, of course, acted foolishly, but which certainly did not call for the insulting articles inserted, in reference to him, in the columns of certain professedly "society journals."

Considering the leniency which has been shown to Lieutenant-Colonel Baker-Russell, 13th Hussars, the treatment which Major Bushman, of the 9th Lancers, has received, must, to the casual observer, appear "quite too unaccountable." Colonel Russell obtained his majority in the 13th Hussars in July, 1878, and for more than a year past has been drawing Major's pay, without having seen his regiment since he received his step. Major Bushman, on the other hand, has been only six months a major, and is at this moment en route to India from the Cape, to rejoin; but notwithstanding these facts, he has been seconded, and will have to serve—may be, for four and a half years—on a reduced rate of pay, as a reward for having voluntarily proceeded on active service, when there seemed to be a prospect of a protracted campaign in South Africa. On what plea, we would ask, has the rule which is made binding in the case of Major Bushman, been allowed to remain a dead-letter all this time in that of Colonel Baker Russell? There is a strong feeling existing among officers that all the prizes of the service will, in course of time, be reserved for a certain number of favoured individuals, who have the good-luck to enjoy the personal friendship of a popular—with the public—General officer. Surely in addition to all other privileges they enjoy, the favoured ones are not to be permitted to serve under an entirely distinct set of rules and regulations from the remainder of the Army. As we intimated last week, the withholding of promotion to the officers of the 13th Hussars has occasioned bitter complaint, not in that regiment alone, but throughout the Service; and the feelings of enmity with which the members of what is not inaptly termed a "Mutual Admiration Society," are regarded, is not likely to be lessened by the unjust treatment to which Major Bushman has been subjected.

The 71st Highland Light Infantry, on arrival home shortly, will be stationed at Edinburgh, the 74th Highlanders at Glasgow, and the 30th Regiment in Ireland.

The Government of India has thought it advisable to apply for the services of two more battalions, in addition to the three granted some time ago, and it has therefore been decided to countermand the order for the return of the 2nd Battalion Royal Scots to England this winter; and also to move the 2nd Battalion 4th King's Own from the Cape to Bombay, instead of to Malta, as had been arranged.

The military authorities at Tchikislar, in Central Asia, where the Russians have established a permanent settlement, recently expelled the special correspondent of the Daily News from their lines. We wondered at the time what excuses that Russian organ in the British Press would make, for the treatment meted out to its representative by those whose conduct and policy the Daily News has upheld in this country through thick and thin, and we are not at all surprised to find that paper apologising for its protégés in its issue of the 6th inst., asserting that the Russian military authorities "would appear to have taken a leaf out of the book of instructions in use among our Generals in Afghanistan. They object, for the hour at least, to the presence of independent Correspondents within their lines. Our Special Correspondent was informed that he must leave that place, and betake himself somewhere else. The officers who conveyed the order would appear to have done their best to soften the rigour of its terms;" and the excuse made for issuing that order is, that it was necessitated by "reasons which recent orders issued in English camps will enable us all easily to understand." How differently the Daily News would have expressed itself, had it been British officers who had turned away its representative, is unnecessary for us even to surmise, as its past uttterances have placed us in such a position as "will enable us all easily to understand."

A telegram received at the India Office yesterday from the Viceroy, states that "five officers have had small-pox at Cabul, one is well, others nearly so."

"A straw will often show which way the wind blows." What is about to happen? Are we on the eve of a war with Russia, or is a revolution expected in our own happy land? Have our widows found difficulties in the way of procuring crape to mark their grief? The answer to these questions is simple. Tommy Atkins is no longer to be permitted to show any mark of respect towards a deceased comrade. Evidence has been so heartless as to bring to the notice of his Royal Highness the fact that non-commissioned officers and privates have been in the habit of wearing crape at funerals. To our certain knowledge, they have so worn it for the last 25 years! "Napoleon the Great" is credited with the saying, "From the sublime to the ridiculous is only one step."

The following moves of regiments are proposed to be carried out shortly, viz.:—1st Battalion 8th Foot, from Warley to Colchester; 41st Foot, from Aldershot to Chatham; 50th Foot, from Edinburgh to Warley; 77th Foot, from Ireland to Dover; 84th Foot, from Dover to Ireland; and 86th Foot, from Chatham to Dover.

It now has been finally decided to retain the King's Dragoon Guards for a year at the Cape, and the order for the return home of the 15th Hussars from India this trooping season has therefore been countermanded.

A propos to the appalling accident which has happened at the now too celebrated Tay Bridge, the reflection is almost forced upon us as to the "shaves" of imminent risk to which the railway passenger is frequently exposed. Few of the travellers by the London and North-Western Railway, in point of fact, we may presumably say not ten in ten millions, are aware that at the small station of Weedon, in Northamptonshire, there is, and has been from time immemorial, an exquisitely contrived "trap" in the line, which, were the slightest error or omission to occur in the working of it, might at any moment cause a hideous railway accident. As is well known, there are large reserve stores of war matérial at Weedon, and a powder-magazine containing occasionally some 1,000 tons of gunpowder. Now, the canal along which the powder-barges arrive at Weedon is at the same level as the railway, and in order to cross the latter en route to the magazines, it cannot go under or over, but must actually go through the line. To effect this a portion of the line has to be bodily removed, fishplates, rails, chains, and all! But of all the dangerous stations in England, Weedon is certainly one of the most dangerous, having hundreds of trains rushing through during the day without stopping, and sharp curves leading away from it in both directions. Yet many times during the week, and such times quite at uncertain intervals, the dangerous gap must be made in the line whenever a powder-barge makes its appearance. It is true that the Weedon station-master is the most careful of men, and an old and tried servant of the company; but let us suppose him for a week or two laid up by illness, and one not equally vigilant occupying his place for such period. At present it is customary for the station-master himself personally to see to the removal and replacing of the "slice" out of the line. Another, however, might think differently as to his responsibility. We could understand such an obsolete arrangement to exist in a position on some branch line, then even to be jealously guarded from unforeseen accident; but on a main artery of the principal railway in England it seems, at least, an anomaly.

Captain Hawes, of the India Office, has again proceeded to Natal, in order to inspect the equipment and adjust the transfer to the Indian strength of the 2nd Battalion 4th Regiment and detachments about to embark at Natal for Bombay.

According to the Moniteur de l'Armée, a special committee has just sent in a report to the French War Minister, recommending the formation of a corps of ambulance men. This corps is considered more necessary than ever, seeing the long range of firearms, and the distance at which ambulances must remain from the front. The committee propose that two men per battalion, as well as the bandsmen, drummers, and workmen, should be instructed each year in ambulance duty, and in this way a proper corps will be gradually formed, knowing how to carry a stretcher under various circumstances; how to approach, take hold of, and place wounded men in the stretchers. L'Armée Française, which contains a long article on this subject, entirely approves of the creation of the new corps, which, it thinks, will have a happy effect in the way of maintaining discipline during action. At present, says the writer, when a man falls, either four or more of his comrades help to carry him to the rear, or the unfortunate fellow is left where he is for hours without any help. In the first case, the line of combat is weakened, and disorder ensues; and in the second, many men are lost whose lives might be saved. With an army composed of old soldiers, this system was objectionable, but with the armies of the present day it has become simply dangerous. L'Armée Française makes one remark which is worth notice. It says that the bandsmen and drummers are able-bodied men, and ought not to be employed in an auxiliary service. It may be a desirable thing to have a regimental band, but with active service reduced to three years, bands will be almost impossible, for the musicians are drawn from the ranks, and are not, as with us, paid from an officers' fund, and a special body of men. It is argued that in doing away with bandsmen and drummers, and by increasing the number of buglers, seventy-four more combatants per regiment would be obtained. As for stretcher-men, they might be drawn from conscripts unfit for active service in the field. Some time ago, the cavalry bands were sacrificed, and now there is evidently a chance of the French infantry bands also disappearing, a blow which will be severely felt in all garrison towns accustomed during the summer months to be enlivened by strains of military music. Both Mars and Venus will feel the change.

The Bill recently submitted to the Folkething by the Danish Government, for the reorganisation of the Army and Navy of Denmark, is accompanied by a complete scheme for the defence of the country. The proposal starts from the principle that it impossible for the Danes to defend the whole of their country in case of war. It is therefore proposed that Jütland and Fünen should be abandoned to the enemy, at least a serious defence is not to be made. The principal resistance is to be concentrated in Seeland, with the capital, Copenhagen. The whole Danish land forces are to be concentrated in that island, and covered by the fleet, whose fortified point of support is to be Aggerösund, on the Great Belt. In order to be able to throw the concentrated Danish Army quickly to any point where a landing is threatened, the existing railways of Seeland are to be supplemented by several connecting lines. The capital is be fortified both towards the sea and on the land side, in the latter case by earthworks.

The Army.

1st Life Guards. Col. Keith Fraser writes to the daily papers to state that the man who was convicted at Marlborough Street on Monday of having, when drunk, committed an assault on the police, was not, as was stated, a trooper of the 1st Life Guards. Col. Fraser says that no man of the regiment under his command was even accused at any police-court of any offence at all.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards. The regiment is to remain at the Cape for another year before proceeding to India, at the suggestion of Sir Garnet Wolseley.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers). Pymr. (Capt.) Roberts has been granted leave from India to England on medical certificate. The special correspondent of the Standard telegraphs from Jellalabad on the 7th inst.:—"It is considered that the accident to the Carabiniers, by which five troopers were drowned, arose from the fault of the men themselves. The ford was easy. Doolies and footmen had already passed safely, and the water was barely up to the horse's girths. Owing, however, to the horsemen circling round instead of keeping straight across, the outside file came upon boulders, and stumbling, fell into deep water."

3rd Hussars. It is expected that Brevet Lieut.-Col. Vincent, one of the smartest and best officers in the Service, will obtain the command, vacant by Col. Blundell's retirement under the five years' rule.

9th Lancers. A telegram from the Viceroy, dated Jan. 4, states that Lieut.-Col. Cleland and wounded officers are all out of danger. The Times of India says:—"Lieut. Hearsey, of the 9th Lancers, who was killed in the disastrous action with the Kohistanis on December 11, is the youngest son of the late Sir John Hearsey. He joined the 9th soon after their arrival in India, and turned out a soldier worthy of the distinguished regiment which has numbered amongst the officers such men as 'Dick' Clayton and 'Bill' Beresford. Coming of a family which has done good service to India in camp and council, his death is in accord with its traditions. He will be regretted wherever he was known as a pleasant companion and a sympathetic friend."

10th Hussars. TIC-SANO.

TIC-SANO is the cure for RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT, SCIATICA, GRAVEL, LUMBAGO, SICK and NERVOUS HEADACHE, as proved by numerous unsolicited testimonials.

TIC-SANO is a vegetable remedy; can be taken by both young and old, and by persons of the most delicate constitution without change of diet.

TIC-SANO is the ORIGINAL SPECIFIC for the above complaints; it has been tried and approved of by the Medical Profession, and has been spoken favourably of by the Public Press.

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879:—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

TIC-SANO purifies the blood, strengthens the system, and so wards off one-half the diseases the flesh is heir to.

Beware of Imitations, and ASK for TIC-SANO.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 10, 1880.

THE information from Afghanistan has been meagre during the past week, and though the Indian Government has decided to abrogate its odious and unnecessary Press Rules, it is evident that but few facilities for the speedy transmission of telegrams are afforded to War Correspondents. We know of a recent instance, in which a private telegram, sent by an officer of rank, reached England the day after it was sent out; yet telegrams from war correspondents frequently occupy three or four days in transmission. Generally speaking, no news is good news, but we can never be certain that such is the case with regard to Afghanistan. For the moment, the insurgents are leaving us alone, and equally are we compelled to abstain from meddling with them, for northern Afghanistan is not a country which, in winter, can be traversed without much difficulty and hardship, by even the lightest equipped of flying columns. In the meantime, General Charles Gough's brigade occupies the Bala Hissar, and General Roberts's original division occupies the Sherpur cantonments. Owing to the scarcity of forage, the 12th Bengal Lancers have been sent to Jellalabad, while the 14th Bengal Lancers are divided between Butkhek and Gundamuk. The whole line of communications between Cabul and Jumrood is now strongly guarded, and we have nothing to do but to make preparations for expeditions as soon as the spring arrives. These preparations, however, are vast and important enough to absorb all the energies of the authorities. It is now generally admitted, by all save the officials personally interested, that there has been terrible mismanagement, both as regards the Transport and Commissariat, So great, indeed, has been the mismanagement, that during the campaign which ended with the Treaty of Gundamuk we lost about 60,000 baggage animals, and that the resources of the Punjab were almost exhausted. So much has this been the case, that General Bright was only able to push on his troops by successive small detachments, when it was of the utmost importance promptly to reopen communications with Cabul. Now, whatever may be the plan adopted for the settlement of the Afghan question, it is certain that for years to come it will be necessary to keep movable columns in readiness, to make expeditions into difficult districts at a moment's notice. It is not so much a large army that we shall need, but the power of moving detachments with great promptitude and speed to the scene of action; and the more mobile our troops are, the fewer we shall require, and consequently the less will be the military expenditure. All the resources of science, therefore, should be combined with a Spartan absence of superfluities, to reduce our baggage-train. A recent article in the Times has done good service in directing the attention of the authorities to this point. As our contemporary remarks, the vast armies of camels, mules, and ponies, hitherto deemed indispensable, can surely be largely diminished by carrying food and forage in a concentrated form. By the use of horse-biscuits, a horseman can, without inconvenience, carry on the saddle sufficient provender to last his steed a week. Had horse-biscuits been present at Cabul, General Roberts need not have deprived himself of the services of two regiments of cavalry. Horse-biscuits are no novelty, having been used by several Continental armies; and experiments have also been tried by order of our own War Office. These experiments have not been altogether successful, but there are no insuperable difficulties to be overcome, and, according to a recent advertisement, a firm in London has already vanquished them. As to consolidated food for men, there is no question about it, for Kopf's preparations have been tried on a large scale, both in South Africa and in Afghanistan, and have proved thoroughly successful. Nor is there any reason on the score of expense, for Kopf's consolidated pea-soup and extract of beef are as remarkable for their cheapness as their portability. One tin of the pea-soup, we may mention, contains enough for a good meal; and a soldier can carry in his haversack, without distress, a sufficient number of tins for a week; and one mule can, according to the calculation of the Times, carry 2,000 tins. As our contemporary remarks, it would not be advisable to supersede ordinary rations by Kopf's preparations, but as a supplement they are invaluable. With these at his disposal, a General could send an expedition into the most difficult country without disturbing himself the least about his base. With Kopf's food, a column might sever its connection with the Commissariat for a week; and had General Bright possessed a store of this consolidated food, he would have promptly broken through the hostile cordon which kept Roberts for ten days beleaguered in Sherpur. The great military question of the day is how to increase the mobility of troops, and if we may trust to the testimony of individual officers, and official reports from South Africa, that question has been satisfactorily settled by Kopf's invention. More conclusive than all, is the popularity which this food enjoys among the rank and file. Our soldiers, proverbially dainty and morbidly suspicious of anything new, have taken to Kopf's food, and in proof thereof buy it at the canteen. Liked by officers and men, and approved of by the Commander-in-Chief himself as the best field-ration in existence, it is a matter of surprise that a large quantity of this food was not at once sent out to India, as soon as the second Afghan campaign began. Better late than never, however, and there will yet be plenty of opportunity of profiting by the valuable invention to which the Times has so impressively directed public attention.

Her Majesty has approved the arrangements proposed by the Horse Guards, by which Brigadier-General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., is transferred from the Belfast to the Chatham command.

We are informed that Dr. Gatling will arrive in England shortly from America, to attend in person the experiments about to be carried out to test the capability of the improved machine gun constructed on his principle. The experiments are expected to commence in the course of a week or so. Excellent results are anticipated.

The attitude of passive resistance and discontent assumed by a large portion of the Boers is to a certain extent embarrassing, and may involve a military occupation of the Transvaal for some time to come. But the Transvaal should be made to pay all the expenses of the troops while the occupation lasts. This is the only way to bring the lesson home to this ignorant and lawless people. Should the military occupation require to be continued, and the British troops be wanted elsewhere, it is suggested that regiments of Zulus could easily be raised under English officers, and quartered in the Transvaal. A brigade of sepoys might also be obtained from India for garrison duty, if this arrangement were considered better, though it would not be so economical. The inconvenience to the troops of remaining in the Transvaal is very great, as there are no barracks, except for 300 men at Pretoria, and consequently they have to live in bell-tents summer and winter, in that trying climate.

The Wellington College Committeè is still sitting, and nothing is known as to when it will bring its labours to a close. It is going thoroughly into the subject before it, and there is every reason to hope that the officers of the Army will find the grievances of which they complain, with so much reason, partially, if not entirely, removed as a result of the Committee's deliberations.

The Canadian Minister of Militia has given instructions for the establishment of a manufactory for the making of cartridges in Quebec, and an officer of artillery is to be sent to England to undergo a practical course in the Royal Arsenal to qualify for the appointment of superintendent. The Dominion factory will be under the supervision of Lieutenant-Colonel T. B. Strange, R.A., Staff officer of the School of Gunnery, Quebec. This is another instance of the determination of the Government to carry their national policy into practical effect.

The Legislative Council of Natal has passed a vote of thanks to the Imperial Government for the prompt and ample succour sent to the colony when it was believed to be in peril, and to all the forces that took part in the war—Imperial and Colonial, naval and military, regulars and irregulars, Europeans and natives.

We are, indeed, pleased to be in a position to give a positive denial to the report, which has been for some time current, that Commissary-General Sir Edward Strickland is to be compulsorily retired, on the reorganisation of the Commissariat and Transport Department. Sir Edward will be allowed to hold on to complete five years in his present rank, and the Army will thus have the benefit of his services for another four years.

Upwards of four months ago we drew attention to the harshness with which Lieutenant Lambart, 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, had been treated, on being passed over for promotion. The pretext, no doubt, is that Lieutenant Lambart was tried by court-martial some eighteen months ago. For the offence for which he was tried, he was, however, punished at the time, the sentence being a reprimand. The court did not sentence him to lose seniority, yet the authorities have acted as if such had been the penalty awarded. It is too bad that the sentence should be thus aggravated, and the consequences prolonged, especially considering the circumstances of the case. Lieutenant Lambart, it may be remembered, was tried for assaulting a brother-officer, under the impression that this brother-officer had wounded his honour; and the punishment, with its incidents, surely fulfilled all the demands of justice. Since then he has gone through a trying campaign in the performance of the arduous duties of adjutant, and was mentioned in dispatches for his conduct at Ulundi. We should have imagined that these war services would have been held to have wiped out the offence committed under strong provocation eighteen months ago, especially as the conviction was, as he pointed out at the time, utterly illegal. But no; he has been passed over for promotion, and within the last few weeks the consequences of being so passed over have been brought especially home to him by Captain and Brevet-Major Jackson having been brought in, in succession to Captain and Brevet-Major Stevenson, seconded. We have reason to believe that questions will be asked in Parliament, concerning the treatment of which Lieutenant Lambart has been the victim.

A committee has been appointed by the Natal Government to investigate all claims on the part of members of Volunteer corps against both the Imperial and Colonial Governments. The object is to ascertain the exact losses borne by the local defenders during their many months of self-denying service.

At the conclusion of the operations against Secocoeni, who surrendered on December 2, it was expected that the 2nd Battalion 21st Fusiliers would be stationed at Pretoria; the 94th Regiment at or near Leydenburg; and the 58th Regiment in the Wakkerstroom and Utrecht districts. The 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles will occupy Natal, and the 91st Highlanders Cape Town, Mauritius, and St. Helena.

The Times understands that Lieutenant-General E. A. Whitmore, C.B., who has just relinquished the post of Inspector-General of Recruiting, will succeed General Sir Alfred Horsford as Military Secretary to his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief on April 1 next.

The Queen has been pleased to appoint Lieutenant Arthur John Bigge, Royal Artillery, to be one of the Grooms in Waiting in Ordinary to her Majesty, in the room of Major Charles E. Phipps, resigned.

The proposal recently made by his Excellency Sir F. Haines that officers of the British Service employed in the Garrison Instruction Staff should be permitted to retain their appointments for five years, whether the regiments to which they belong continue to remain in India or not, and that officers of the Garrison Instruction Staff, whether belonging to the British or Indian Service, should vacate their appointments if proceeding on furlough or medical certificate out of India for more than six months, has received the sanction of the India and War Offices.

A regimental officer, serving in Afghanistan, makes some very telling remarks on the working of the new Army Medical system in the field. He says that there is a general and a base hospital, and that each regiment is only provided with one doctor and a few stretchers. Every man suffering from any but the most simple complaint or injury is at once sent to the general hospital, instead of being taken care of regimentally. This system is very unpopular, and it has not been found to work well in action, at all events under the circumstances in which actions are fought in Afghanistan. At Char Asiab its inefficiency was plainly illustrated. The small hospital establishment soon proved itself unequal to its task. The stretchers of one regiment were quickly filled, and from that moment the wounded had to be left where they fell till the arrival of the general-hospital stretchers, late in the day. When the general-hospital stretchers did come up, it was long before the wounded were collected, for the fighting extended over several miles of ground. Thus not only were the wounded unnecessarily left for hours in torture, and perhaps some lives lost for want of prompt attention, but they were all exposed to the not improbable danger of being murdered by prowling villagers. Our correspondent winds up with the following pertinent remark, the justice of which we cordially endorse:—"Does it not seem absurd to alter the old system, when each regiment was self-supporting, and could take care of its sick and wounded?"

Her Majesty has approved the appointment of Brevet Major W. C. F. Molyneux, 22nd Regiment, late Aide-de-Camp to Lord Chelmsford at the Cape, as Brigade-Major of the 3rd Infantry Brigade at Aldershot, vice Brevet Major R. W. T. Gordon, 93rd Highlanders.

Lieutenant G. E. Giles, Royal Artillery, has been appointed Captain of the Artillery troop attached to the Cape Mounted Rifles.

There seems to be no doubt that Sir Garnet Wolseley will leave South Africa for England, in the course of the present month. Yet the Boer population of the Transvaal are in a feverish and excited state, and disturbances may occur at any moment. It has been the game of the Authorities to impress the public with the idea that the meeting of December 10 was a failure, and that no evil results were to be anticipated. It is pretty evident, however, that if the authorities have not deliberately deceived the public, they have, at all events, taken a far too sanguine view of matters. The resolutions passed at the meeting virtually embodied a declaration of rebellion; and, as a proof that the authorities themselves attach some importance to the meeting, we have the fact that Ex-President Pretorius and Mr. Bok have been arrested for high-treason. A recent telegram also states that the Boers on the road from Potchefström stopped, imprisoned, and finally turned back, the bearer of despatches to Pretoria. It is, therefore, idle to pretend that the Transvaal is in other than a very unsatisfactory state. Such being the case, it is difficult to conceive how Sir Garnet Wolseley can reconcile it to his conscience to return home at the present moment. It is as if the captain were to go ashore as soon as a gale threatened, and it will certainly be said that Sir Garnet, having, with his usual shrewdness, perceived that more trouble than credit was to be gained in the Transvaal, smartly anticipated troubles, and left them to be overcome by his successor.

Lieutenant R. W. P. Lodwick, 28th Regiment, has vacated his appointment as aide-de-camp to Major-General J. W. Schneider, C.B., commanding a division of the Bombay Army.

Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel F. W. Grenfell, 60th Rifles, has taken up his appointment as Brigade-Major at Shorncliffe from the 1st inst., vice Captain C. K. Brooke, 15th Regiment, whose period of Staff service has expired.

Captains F. M'K. Salmond, 21st Fusiliers, and A. M. Creagh, 42nd Highlanders, have taken up their appointments as deputy-assistant-adjutant-generals for musketry at Edinburgh and Portsmouth respectively, vice Captains A. Moberly, Royal Scots, retired, and W. Marsden, 82nd Regiment, transferred to the staff of the School of Musketry.

Captain M. G. Johnstone, Scots Greys, has been appointed an Extra Aide-de-Camp to the Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland.

She was joined at Maran Island by the Conflict, on Sept. 26. An expedition was here formed to march inland to capture the murderers, who had taken to the bush. "A company of small-arm men accordingly landed the following Monday, under the command of Lieut. Halifax. The men were marched through the bush, a strict silence being enforced. Capt. Ferguson, of the Ripple (s.), and Capt. Woodhouse, of the Emu (s.), accompanied the expedition to identify the murderers and stolen property, also ten scouts from Pidgeon Island. On the way two villages were passed, both deserted, and on searching Washarri's settlement the people had apparently fled; but on some one peeping into one of the houses it was found to be full of men, armed with muskets, who, being thus suddenly surprised, made a rush for the entrance, where they had left their spears. A scrimmage ensued, in which one native was shot, and two or three were wounded; the wounded, with the other natives, dashed into the bush and escaped. They were followed in hot pursuit; but the men, getting separated in the dense forest, it was considered prudent to recall them, and they were marched back to the village, which was burned down, the canoes and fishing nets being destroyed. The arms found in the house were primed and ready for use, but the suddenness of the surprise had evidently created a panic."—Sydney Morning Herald.

Li Hung-Chang, we hear, asked the Admiral how many of these gunboats could take an ironclad; the Admiral said four, but the Viceroy seemed to doubt it. The Admiral then stipulated that the Chinese crews were not to be trained to take an English ironclad. The Viceroy, in reply, said that there was to be everlasting peace between England and China."

The Opal, which has just completed her first commission, was commissioned by Capt. Robinson at the latter end of 1875, and has therefore been more than four years in commission, during the whole of which period she was attached to the Pacific station, and was employed for a portion of the time in exploring the Strait of Magellan and of the channels connected with it. Notwithstanding the length of time the Opal was in commission, there were only five deaths on board from accidents and all other causes, and there were comparatively but few desertions. On the crew being paid off, they were granted seven weeks' leave of absence on full pay, at the expiration of which time they will join one of the flagships at either of the naval ports. The officers have also been granted a similar amount of leave. The detachment of Royal Marines doing duty on board rejoined the Chatham Division, and the Royal Marine Artillery proceeded to Eastney Barracks. Before she is again commissioned, the Opal will require a thorough overhaul and repair. She is now attached to the Chatham Steam Reserve.

Ready, Com. H. H. Edwards, was at Muscat on Dec. 7, 1879.

Rifleman, Com. J. Ingles, is ordered home. She was relieved in Dec. by the Dragon, on the coast of Madagascar, and was to start for England, viâ Zanzibar and the Suez Canal.

Ruby, Com. R. H. M. Molyneux, was at Rangoon on Dec. 15. On Nov. 25 the crew of this vessel were entertained at a public dinner and sports by the English residents in Rangoon, the success of the entertainment being unquestionable.

Salamis, Com. FitzGeorge, is ordered to leave Portsmouth for Lisbon about a week after the departure of the Channel Squadron, but whether she will then wait upon the fleet as a tender or proceed on a Mediterranean cruise with Prince Leopold is not definitely settled.

Seagull, Com. Fred. W. B. M. Heron, was at Berbera, on the Somauli coast, on Dec. 15. She sailed on Dec. 16 for Massowah, to watch 750 miles of dreary coast-line, in the event of war being declared between Egypt and Abyssinia. The ship's company were well, and the defaulters' list very low.

Serapis, Capt. Guy Twiss, sailed for Bombay on Wednesday with the 30th Foot, consisting of 27 officers, 7 staff serjeants, 35 serjeants, 17 drummers, 850 rank and file, and 38 families. She also takes out six serjeants, one drummer, 204 rank and file, and nine families, composed of various drafts.

Sheldrake, Lieut.-Com. Marcus Bridger, returned to Hong Kong from Canton on Nov. 29. She expended her quarterly allowance of ammunition at target-practice while on the passage.

Spartan, Capt. Richard Tracey, left Trincomalee on Dec. 8 for Rangoon, to relieve the Ruby.

Swinger, Lieut. and Com. O. Tudor, was at Yokohama on Nov. 22.

Vestal, Com. Dashwood G. Tandy, having been provisioned by the Dragon in December last, remains in the Mozambique Channel.

Vulture, Com. Eliot Pringle, flying the flag of Rear-Admiral Gore Jones, was at Bombay on Dec. 15.

Wild Swan, Com. Seymour H. P. Dacres, was at Rangoon on Dec. 1. On Nov. 25 the crew of this vessel was entertained at a public dinner and sports by the English residents in Rangoon. The Rangoon Times says:—"The dinner passed off as pleasantly as possible, and just at its conclusion Mr. and Mrs. Aitchison walked round the tables and engaged in conversation with several of the men. In reply to the toast, 'The People of Rangoon,' which was given with three such cheers as British sailors and soldiers only know how to give properly, Mr. Aitchison addressed the men of the Ruby and Wild Swan in a few appropriate words of welcome. After the tremendous applause which his speech elicited had somewhat subsided, a call was made for 'three cheers for Mr. Aitchison.' How the call was responded to those who were present that day, and with ears to hear, will remember."

RUMOURED LOSS OF THE "EUPHRATES."

It being desirable to discover, if possible, how the rumoured loss of the Euphrates originated and was propagated, we have ascertained that on Saturday afternoon, about two o'clock, the following telegram was received at the Chamber of Commerce from the Press Association, and was posted in the usual course:—"A rumour was prevalent in Portsmouth this morning to the effect that the Euphrates, troopship, with all her crew and 1,100 troops, had been lost during the recent gale; but the dockyard authorities believe that there is not the slightest foundation for the report, and expect to hear of the trooper calling at Malta during the day." It is unfortunate that the Press Association, before issuing such a telegram, had not referred to the files of Reuter's telegrams sent out by the Press Association twelve hours previously, when they would have found that they contained an announcement of the arrival of the Euphrates at Malta.—Western Morning News.

The Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have awarded medals for long service and good conduct to the following men:—William Dyer, ship's corporal (1st class), of the Dido; John Christian, master-at-arms, and Henry Griffiths, able seaman, of the Royal Naval Barracks; Arthur Sims, serjeant R.M., of the Duncan; Thomas Lamb, ship's corporal, of the Pembroke; William Edwards, quartermaster, of the Invincible; John Gunn, chief quartermaster, of the Valiant; John Otterson, leading stoker, of the Asia; Alex. Brown, leading stoker, of the Endymion; John Knight, chief boatman; Benjamin Ford, commissioned boatman; James C. Upstall and Edward N. D'Alton, boatmen, of the Coastguard.

After his third trial by court-martial, Capt. Count Montz, of the Grosser Kurfürst, was last week again acquitted for the loss of that ship by collision with the König Wilhelm on the last day of May, 1878, off Folkestone.

NAVAL NOTES.

The Glatton, turret-ship, will shortly be taken out of dock at Portsmouth. Her under-water torpedo fittings have been modified to suit the 14-in. torpedo. The Canadia and Cordelia, steel corvettes, have made satisfactory progress since July last, when their construction was commenced. Each ship will cost about £100,000 when completed and ready for sea. Their dimensions will be, length, 225 ft.; breadth, 44 ft. 6 in., with a displacement of 2,383 tons, a novel feature in their construction being the providing of accommodation for an auxiliary rudder in the after dead-wood of the run, under the screw-shaft. Considerable progress has been made with the turret-ship Colossus. She will be 5 ft. longer than the Inflexible, on 7 ft. less beam, and should be a faster ship. Rather more than two months will elapse before the dockyard authorities will be able to report the Neptune ready for her pennant. Her new armament consists of 38-ton service-pattern guns in her turrets, and 12·5-ton guns under the forecastle. She is also receiving an equipment of Nordenfeldt guns, and will carry a second-class torpedo boat. She has also had torpedo ports cut through her side-armour, below the waterline between the turrets. Her spars have been reduced in size, and the general arrangement of her cabins has been entirely altered, the Nelson having been selected for a flagship. The strain she underwent when on the mud in the Thames, off Dudgeon's Yard, has hogged her back slightly, sufficient to be noticeable. The Repulse will be out of the hands of the dockyard within a comparatively short period, but the chances of an early commission are now considered remote. She has received new boilers, and her machinery has been thoroughly repaired by Messrs. John Penn and Sons. Her armament has been increased by Whitehead torpedoes, to be projected from four ports on the main deck. Gatling guns have also been supplied, as also a couple of second-class torpedo boats, to be stowed on crutches in the waist, as are ordinary boom-boats. The Flirt was taken outside Plymouth Breakwater to try her machinery, but broke down in her pumps. The Wivern will be commissioned on the 14th inst., for service on the China station. There are at this moment 700 men engaged upon the Inflexible, which is more than double the number hitherto employed upon her, fitting the compound iron and steel armour-plates on her turrets, and otherwise completing her hull. The abolition of the Royal Marine Artillery as a separate corps appears, we regret to find, to have been definitely determined upon, and a committee is to sit at the Admiralty in a few days to consider how the decision is to be carried into effect. On this subject, the Daily News says:—"It is remarkable that Col. Sir Francis Worgan Festing, R.M.A., will alone represent the interests of his brother officers, another officer of the Royal Marines, nominated to the committee, Major-Gen. Adair, R.M., belonging to the infantry branch of the Service. The other members of the committee will include Admiral Sir Cooper Key, K.C.B., the Senior Naval Lord of the Admiralty, and Rear-Admiral Sir John Commerell, V.C., K.C.B." We must say we cannot see the utility of abolishing the Royal Marine Artillery at a time when the science of Naval gunnery is coming daily more prominently to the fore. We should prefer to see the corps increased in numbers, the Royal Marine Light Infantry being absorbed by it.

NAVAL EXPENDITURE.

There is a marked improvement in the last annual return of the amount of dockyard expenditure for shipbuilding, for the Accountant-General of the Navy, Mr. R. G. O. Hamilton, has prefaced these accounts with a report which not only explains their meaning and value, but throws considerable light on the course of naval expenditure for the past ten years. This should have been done before, for this report proves conclusively that the naval policy of the past ten years, so far as it may be measured by naval expenditure, has been governed by the shipbuilding arrangements which have been approved from time to time. In other words, the rise or fall in the annual cost of the Navy is due to the arrangements made by the Constructor's Department of the Admiralty, and not to the Administration of the personnel of the Navy. An instructive table introduced into this report illustrates this fact. Since the year 1869, the first year of the late Liberal Administration, the following figures are given as the amounts spent annually on ships for construction and repairs, for stores and labour, and for the general service of the Navy:—

	Total amount of			Variation in
Year.	Expenditure on Ships. £	Votes 6 and 10 (Labour and Stores.) £	Navy Votes. £	Ship Expenditure. £	Navy Votes. £
1869-70	1,964,339	2,572,745	10,102,641	—	—
1872-3	1,355,003	2,413,347	9,564,678	—314,106	—311,303
1876-7	2,929,616	3,929,846	11,259,835	+362,721	+355,911

From the above tabular statement it is at once apparent that, except in the year 1870, the increase in naval expenditure was due to the construction, maintenance, and repair of our ships. The large increase in the last year of Liberal administration condemns its previous economic policy. It was a false economy, necessitating a sudden increase of expenditure to adjust the deficiency of previous years of so-called retrenchment, when the sum spent on shipbuilding had fallen from a previous average of £1,200,000 to £800,000. On this subject the Times remarks that, "Mr. Ward Hunt's passionate outburst about paper ships and phantom fleets finds a practical expression in these tables in the evidence of a general increase in naval expenditure of £415,000, and an increase in the cost of repairs, from £815,000 in the last year of Mr. Gochen's work at the Admiralty to £992,000 in the first year of his own work. What this points to is that in the year 1873 the necessity for conducting repairs on a large scale was admitted and the remedy applied, and that it was necessary to continue to apply what had already been commenced." An interesting statement is also given by Mr. Hamilton of the disposal of that portion of the recent six million grant applied to naval purposes in the purchase of the following ships:—

Ship purchased.	Class.	Sum spent.	Remarks.
Belleisle	Ironclad	£240,138	Includes £35,000 for armament.
Neptune	,,	614,051	Includes £58,000 for armament and stores.
Orion	,,	126,825	Includes £22,000 for armament.
Superb	,,	453,033	Includes £10,000 for stores.
Hecla	Unarmoured	79,000	— —
Torpedo boats	—	9,850	— —
Miscellaneous	—	300	— —

"These sums," says the Times, "seem large, but they are rapidly becoming dwarfed in presence of the gradually-increasing cost of ironclad construction. The average sum of half-a-million sterling no longer covers the cost of a modern ironclad. In this report we are shown the cost which has already been incurred on vessels in course of construction or completion, in 1877-8, and which may be sufficiently illustrated by the following formidable figures:—The Téméraire was incomplete in March, 1878, and had cost to that date £489,586; the Dreadnought, ditto, £577,467; and the Inflexible, ditto, £566,034. These sums, it should be observed, include the bare cost of labour and materials used; but if establishment charges for plant, &c., were added, it would mean the addition of at least 50 per cent. to these figures—that is, supposing it were necessary to establish a comparison between the cost of these vessels and vessels built by private firms, such as those purchased out of the Vote of Credit." We do not, however, consider this to be a fair comparison, as ships built in the Government dockyards are invariably better constructed and last longer than do vessels built on contract by private firms. In cases of emergency it is well that we have private firms to fall back upon. But so long as there is no need to hurry on the construction of ships, it is preferable that they should be laid down in the Government dockyards, where the work, though somewhat more costly, is the best of any in the world.

INDIA.

The journals which have come to hand this week contain accounts of the repulse that Gen. Roberts met with before retiring to Sherpur. Interest in the war, we are told, had nearly dwindled away in India before the receipt of this news. An Allahabad message of Dec. 14 gives the following epitome of fighting news from the front. It refers to the engagement of Dec. 12, when the guns were abandoned and subsequently recovered by Col. Maccgregor. Later on the hills south of the Bala Hissar were attacked, and we lost Lieut. Hardy and Lieut. Hearsey, killed, and Col. Cleland, Capt. Mackenzie, Lieut. Cook, and Lieut. Forbes wounded. "All the bodies, except that of Lieut. Forbes, have been recovered. The Horse Artillery left no men killed and only one wounded. Their officer, Lieut. Hardy, was shot through the head and killed while the guns were retiring. Col. Cleland, though wounded by a tulwar-cut and had a bullet through his side, rode eight miles into Sherpur. The 14th behaved splendidly. The 9th Lancers' loss was two officers killed and two wounded; 16 troopers killed and seven wounded. The enemy's numbers are not over-estimated. They now hold the hill south of the Bala Hissar heights, and are commanding them. Gen. Macpherson attacked them at noon on the 12th and captured the lower hill, and so much of the position as could be assailed before the night fell. Agaria joined the enemy during the night. Sixteen standards are flying on the hill. Lieuts. Fergusson, 72nd, and Fasken, 3rd Sikhs, were wounded on the 12th. There is no appearance of Kohistanis at Sherpur, which is in a thorough state of defence. Gen. Baker's column is now marching into Sherpur. The rear-guard was attacked during the last two days of the march, the casualties being two killed and three wounded."

It is officially notified that, with the sanction of Her Majesty's Government, it is notified that as many of the retirements under the provisions of G. G. O. No. 1 of Jan. 1, 1879, as remain unallotted on Dec. 31, 1879, will be held available for officers of all three Presidencies up to March 31, 1880. This offer is restricted to officers who are qualified under clause II. of the G. G. O. of Jan. 1, 1877, and who may have completed 28 years' service on or before Dec. 31, 1879. Applications will be disposed of by the Government of India according to priority of proposed dates of retirement, preference being given, if necessary, to the senior applicant, should there be more than one for retirement on the same day. Officers of the Madras and Bombay armies should submit their applications in the usual manner to their respective Governments for communication to the Government of India.

Brig.-Gen. J. Watson, V.C., C.B., Bengal S.C., it is now said, retains the Koorum command until the completion of the Zymukht Expedition.

The list of appointments in connection with the Naga Expeditionary Force was not gazetted until after the battle of Konoma, and includes the name of one officer who was killed in the attack on that famous stronghold, poor Major Cock, who was appointed Dep.-Assist.-Adj.-Gen. Brig.-Gen. J. R. Nation, the Commandant of the Eastern Frontier District, commands the force. Lieut. C. R. Macgregor, Wing Officer and Qtmr., 44th Bengal N.I., is Dep.-Assist.-Qr.-Gen.; Lieut. T. S. Boileau, of the same regiment, Provost Marshal; Lieut. E. Raban, R.E., Assistant Field Engineer, and Lieut. G. Wingate, Commissariat Officer.

The Government of India has decided that warrant and non-commissioned officers and privates are to be considered eligible for examination in the degrees of honour in the native languages in the same manner as they are for the high proficiency tests, receiving the usual rewards.

Col. A. Paterson, Bengal S.C., is about to retire, on a pension of £456 5s., and special annuity of £530 12s., from Dec. 1st, 1879.

Major W. J. Stewart, Bengal S.C., is about to retire, on a pension of £292 per annum, from Dec. 6, 1879.

† This officer has produced a certificate of his having passed in India the examination in Burmese, according to the higher standard.

At a court-martial held on board the Wolverine at Sydney, Walter Kilby, private, Plymouth Division R.M.L.I., of that ship, was found guilty on two charges of using threatening and insulting language to a superior officer, and sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment with solitary confinement and hard labour. The Admiralty have notified that they have directed that after his arrival in England the man shall undergo hard labour for the remaining portion of his term of imprisonment, and not be kept in solitary confinement.

Some surprise has been occasioned by the circumstance of the two guns captured by the Zulus at Isandula having had a screw thread cut in the vent-holes for the insertion of a rifle nipple, but they have been examined by the artificers of the Royal Gun Factories, who are of opinion that the operation has not been performed, as supposed, by skilled workmen, nor even by the ordinary process of "tapping," but that the rifle nipple itself, which is case hardened, has been forcibly screwed into the soft copper which surrounds the vent, and thus formed the thread. The reason the guns were not turned to better account by the Zulus appears to be that they thought the loaded shells could be fired without a charge of powder, and rammed home the shell without a cartridge behind it.

On Tuesday, Dec. 23, last, the seamen of the squadron lying in Malta were landed as a naval brigade, and inspected on the Floriana Parade-ground by Admiral Sir Geoffrey Phipps Hornby, Commander-in-Chief, his Excellency the Governor, Sir Arthur Borton, Gen. the Hon. Percy Feilding, and a number of officers from the regiments in garrison being present. The numbers landed from the various ships were as follow:—Alexandra, 258; Téméraire, 231; Monarch, 239; Achilles, 242; Rupert, 69; Thunderer, 81; and Helicon, 27,—making a total of 1,137 officers and men under arms. The whole brigade was under the command of Capt. FitzRoy, the flag captain. It was divided into one battery of six field guns and half a battery of three Gatling guns, under Com. Jenkins, of the Téméraire; one battalion of nine companies, consisting of the Alexandra, Monarch, Rupert, and the Helicon's men, under Com. Thomas, of the Monarch; and a second battalion of the same number of companies, consisting of the Achilles, Téméraire, and Thunderer's men, under Com. Beckford, of the Thunderer. The Commander-in-Chief has expressed himself much pleased with the manœuvring and appearance of the men landed under Capt. FitzRoy's command.

The erection of new barracks opposite King's Terrace, Southsea, says the Daily News, is proceeding satisfactorily, and it is understood that they are intended to accommodate a regiment of the line. They will not be devoid of ornamentation, and, therefore, will constitute an important addition to that part of Portsmouth. Convict labour is being used in the erection of the barracks; but it is not yet definitely settled whether or not the building of the new Government House shall be carried out by contract under the superintendence of Royal Engineer officers.

THE BRITISH ARMY IN THE TRANSVAAL.

The following appeared in the Daily Telegraph yesterday:—"To the Editor of the Daily Telegraph.—Sir,—The attention of his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief having been called to a letter, dated Oct. 10, 1879, purporting to be written by your special correspondent at head-quarters, Pretoria, which was published in the Daily Telegraph on Nov. 21, the Duke of Cambridge directed that the statements therein contained reflecting on the behaviour .of certain portions of her Majesty's forces serving in South Africa should be transmitted to the general officer commanding there for any observations he might wish to offer. His Royal Highness has received the accompanying telegram in answer from Sir Garnet Wolseley, and I am directed to request you will have the goodness to give it the same publicity and prominence as the letter above referred to.—I have the honour to be Sir, your obedient servant, C. H. Ellice, A.G., Horse Guards, War Office, Jan. 8, 1880.

"[Copy].—(From Sir Garnet Wolseley to Adjutant-General, War Office.)—Pretoria, Jan. 3.—Statement in the Daily Telegraph of Nov. 21 about conduct of British troops in Transvaal contains such gross exaggerations and transparent untruths, that it is evident the special correspondent has been the victim of a hoax. Full inquiry is being made, and official report will be sent to you when received. I hope you will make this statement public.'' Upon this official communication we have, at present, only thus much to say. With an absence of decorum which does not become either him or the office he represents, the Adjutant-General describes the letter we printed as one "purporting" to have been written by our special correspondent in South Africa. Now, it is perfectly well known at the Horse Guards who our special correspondent is, and Gen. Ellice must also know that he can answer for himself. Dr. Russell is now on his way home, and must arrive on an early day. We shall say nothing more, and merely quote two sentences from the letter which we printed on Nov. 21. The first sentence is as follows: "I begin this letter with reluctance, because I am about to deal with a subject which nothing but a sense of duty would force me to notice." The second is this: "If these statements be contradicted, again I say that they are true, and that proof of the truth shall be forthcoming, and is now ready for the test."

MILITARY RANK.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—I remark your desire to close the correspondence upon the above subject, but if you do not object to insert this, I am of opinion it may be a means of solving a vexed question. If only a few Militia officers, through their commanding officers, will address the Secretary of State for War, and ask, "whether, from the fact of their being subject throughout the year to the conditions of the Army Discipline Act, they should use their military titles at all times, or are privileged to waive them when not out for training,'' &c., I think this will set the matter at rest for ever, as it will doubtless elicit an expression of opinion from Pall Mall such as "Confused Militiaman" properly wishes for. Perhaps it arises from the fact of having served in the Militia before that invaluable body, the Volunteers (who, undoubtedly, are worthy of high honour) came into existence, but I cannot help feeling, whether rightly or wrongly, that there is a marked difference between the two forces as branches of the Army, and I am certain a large proportion of officers of the Regulars are of the same opinion. I hope you will pardon me, if I take exception to your allusion that "Militia officers subject themselves to sneers and jeers by using their rank." I am convinced none of them use their titles who do not believe they would act wrongly in not doing so, and have no desire whatever to usurp the privilege of anyone. Again, there are some who in their private capacity are far more important persons without military rank at all. If such, also, doing what they believe to be the right thing —make use of their title of colonel, major, or captain, as the case may be, and provoke, as you say (but which you must excuse me for doubting is the case), sneers and jeers in return, I can only say, if it is really so, to use a familiar expression, it "is very hard lines,'' and the more rapidly we all revert to the undoubted and repectable prefix of "Mr.,'' the more agreeable it will be. However, it is full time that colonels of regiments looked into the matter, and if their officers, by using rank when not actually upon military duty, are guilty of "bad form,'' the sooner they are made acquainted with the fact the better. If, on the other hand, in their altered state, they are under the obligation of doing so, then no one should question the matter.—I am, &c.,

"Another Militiaman."

[We insert the above letter, for we think the suggestion of our correspondent a good one; but we can give place to no further communications on the same subject.—Ed., A. & N. G.]

Admiral Farquhar, Commander-in-Chief at Devonport, gave a farewell dinner at his official residence on Saturday, Jan. 3. The guests included Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. Lester Smyth, C.B., commanding the Western District, Rear-Admiral Hope, Rear-Admiral Curme, Col.-Commandant Heastey, the captains of the various ships in port, Flag-Lieut. Lowe, and Lieut. Lord Francis Cecil. Admiral and Mrs. Farquhar received 200 visitors.

Reviews.

SOME OF THE MAGAZINES.

Blackwood, for this month, contains a cleverly-written article on "Mr. Gladstone's Pilgrimage,'' "an extraordinary phenomenon, which certainly arrested the public attention in a very marked degree, and produced an immense amount of local excitement.'' In this number, the Turks, Albanians, and the Greek question are discussed. In the further instalment of the serial story, "Reata,'' we find the heroine doffing her old love and donning a new.

Time, for January, is an excellent number. It opens, however, with a statement from the editor of a private matter which occurred very many years ago, was fully discussed at the time, had passed from the memories of most men, and perhaps might have been better left to its repose. This, of course, is a mere question of taste. The further instalment of "The Seamy Side'' is full of interest, although neither Anthony Hamblin nor "Young Nick" appears upon the stage.

The most interesting paper in Cornhill for this month is the first part of Mr. Hunter's exposition of what the English have done for the Indian people. "Fighting Fitzgerald'' is rather an amusing sketch of this remarkable person. It takes a very different estimate, however, of his character and actions from that taken by Sir J. Barrington and other men of the period. "White Wings'' is preciously dull, "Mademoiselle de Mersac'' remarkably interesting.

There is not much to direct attention to in Fraser for this month. "Some Aspects of Indian Finance" are shown by Mr. Hunter. The Duke of Argyll's "First Impressions of the New World" have run their course. Mr. Gladstone's procession throughout Scotland is, of course, commented on. Mrs. Oliphant writes a curious story, with a quaint title, "Earthbound." "Mary Anerley" is as charming as ever.

The Fortnightly. Review opens with an exhaustive article on "Ireland,'' contributed by an experienced writer, Dr. Hancock. There are several other articles of considerable merit.

"The Era Almanack,'' conducted by Edward Ledger, contains a variety of information.

William Tegg. By the Hon. Charlotte Elliss. (Kirby and Endean.)—The true and romantic history of William Tegg, Esq., M.P. for Ham(p)shire; or, "Life's Burlesque in Black and White,'' will be hailed with acclamation by hosts of juveniles. The "ideas,'' and the poetry in which they are clothed, are capital, while it would be difficult to point to any book of its class so admirably illustrated.

We understand that a new edition of Captain de Carteret Bisson's very valuable work, entitled Our Schools and Colleges, which has received the gracious recognition of her Majesty, will be issued from the Press in a few days, revised and corrected up to date, and we hear that the work will in future become one of our regular annuals.

Obituary.

Lieut.-Gen. W. F. Marriott, C.S.I., Bombay Staff Corps, died at Cairo on the 17th ult., in his sixty-first year, having for some time discharged the duties of president of the Egyptian railway administration. The deceased obtained his first commission in the Bombay Engineers in Dec., 1836. He served with the Bombay column of the Army of the Indus in the campaign of Scinde and Afghanistan in 1838-39, and was slightly wounded at the storm and capture of Ghuznee (medal). After various active employments, he was appointed secretary to the Military Department of the Government, in July, 1861, and was nominated a C.S.I. in May, 1866. His commissions bore date as follow:—Lieut., June, 1846; capt., Aug., 1854; lieut.-col., Aug., 1860; col., Aug., 1865; major-gen., March, 1870; and lieut.-gen., Oct. 1, 1877.

One of the Woolwich pattern guns converted into a breech-loader for experiment, has been conveyed to Shoeburyness for long-range practice. The breech apparatus is on the screw principle adopted for the breech-loaders now in course of manufacture. It is also proposed to send to Shoeburyness two other converted breechloaders—one a 43-pounder Armstrong, with the trunnions turned so as to place the wedge at the side instead of the top of the piece, to allow of its being easily drawn out, and the other a 32-pounder cast-iron gun, altered in imitation of the Krupp system. These guns have all been tried at Woolwich, and the superiority displayed by the first-named has induced the Ordnance Select Committee to recommend its adoption as the pattern of the new Service weapon.

We (Globe) understand that the new fortifications in the neighbourhood of Titchfield and Fareham, which are required to complete the defences of Portsmouth on the land side, and which it was recently believed were to be at once constructed, will not be proceeded with. The necessary land has been selected and surveyed, but this is now understood to be intended only to mark the required sites, and it is not proposed to fortify them until there arises a greater probability than at present exists of the fortifications—which, in such a case, would, we presume, take the form of earthworks—being speedily needed.

The Standard says:—"It has been ruled by the War Office that the services of officers of the departments of the Army recently at the Cape of Good Hope shall not reckon as a term of foreign service, and that officers who have been employed with the Zulu Expedition, and who have since returned to England, shall proceed to foreign stations according to the position they held on the roster prior to their embarkation for the seat of war.''

Painted windows as memorials of departed worth and gallantry have more than ordinary interest in the eyes of all. Mr. W. G. Taylor (late O. Connor) has at all times pleasure in showing his various works for church and hall in progress; the introduction of likenesses in windows being a special study. Designs and estimates free. Medal awarded to works in the Paris Exhibition. The "Art' Works, 4 Berners Street, London.

Amusements.

Before the month has far advanced, numerous additional attractions will be offered to the playgoing public, and in the meantime it is pleasant to observe that the holiday entertainments, especially at the West-End theatres, are largely patronised. This evening (Saturday), the Carl Rosa company will commence a new season at Her Majesty's Theatre, with Richard Wagner's "Rienzi,'' the cast greatly varying from that of last season, including Herr Anton Schott, from the Royal Theatre, Hanover, as Rienzi, Mr. Crotty as Colonna, Miss Yorke as Adriano, and Mdlle. Lido and Miss Albu, both débutantes, as Irene and the Messenger of Peace. The season will consist of 50 performances, Mr. Randegger being the conductor during the first fortnight, in consequence of Mr. Carl Rosa's temporary indisposition. If these operas in English included some by our native composers, the programme would be more satisfactory.

At the Princess's, "Drink,'' which has been running since last Whitsuntide, will in a week be succeeded by a revival of "The Streets of London,'' not acted at this theatre for nearly twelve years. Mr. W. G. Wills provides a new drama, called "Ninon,'' for the Adelphi, and another for the Duke's, entitled "The Stepmother." Mr. Burnett succeeds Mr. Edgar Bruce as manager of the Royalty, opening next week with, "Midge,'' a drama already favourably received in the provinces. Mr. Charles Wyndham goes to the Olympic, to play in "Brighton." Mr. Burnand's new comedy is being rehearsed at the Vaudeville, for immediate production; and Mr. J. L. Toole is said to be so much better in health, that he has arranged to reappear at the Folly in the course of a fortnight.

"The Lord of the Manor,'' Mr. Herman Merivale's new three-act play, produced at the Imperial Theatre, has disappointed expectation. The story, derived from an episode in Goethe's "Wilhelm Meister,'' is far better suited to operatic than to dramatic treatment. It has been made familiar already to the frequenters of Her Majesty's Theatre, as the groundwork of the libretto of "Mignon,'' composed by Mr. Ambroise Thomas, and an opera in which Madame Nilsson, as the heroine, made one of her great successes last season. The scene is now laid in England, at a vague period towards the close of the last century. Mr. Kyrle Bellew and Miss Ellen Meyrick represent with tolerable adequacy Horatio and Aurora, who are the Laertes and Philine of the novel; but the Lord of the Manor, Wilfrid Lisle, the substitute for the impressionable, Wilhelm Meister is a character outside the range of Mr. William Farren's present embodiments. Miss Lydia Cowell, a clever young actress in youthful parts, has not sufficient force for a competent rendering of the heroine, Sybil, and Mr. Bannister's representation of the lively Sir Harry Widgeon, Mr. Everill's discreet performance of the erratic personage known as "Crazy Dick,'' and Mr. E. F. Edgar's acting as the acrobat Mallow, probably better realised the intentions of the dramatist, who, though summoned at the fall of the curtain, was not very emphatically congratulated.

The curious in theatrical statistics may learn from "The Era Almanack,'' which has appeared this week, for the thirteenth year of publication, that the metropolis is supplied with 45 theatres and 24 music-halls; while the provinces possess 234 places of dramatic entertainment, and 185 music-halls. During the last twelve months, 131 new farces were produced at the London theatres, and 104 new productions were brought out in the provinces, many of these afterwards finding their way to the metropolitan boards.

The Grosvenor Library, Limited.—This company has been formed with a capital of £100,000, in 20,000 shares of £5 each, of which it is proposed to call up £1 per share on application, and £1 10s. on allotment; but it is intended to call up only half the nominal amount of capital. The company has to take for 30 years the buildings adjoining the Grosvenor Gallery, and here the company will form a first-class circulating library, and a library of standard works of reference; and also provide reading, writing, dining, refreshment, and dressing-rooms, and book places for all London theatres, concerts, and other places of entertainment. Many of our readers must have experienced the want of such an institution, which, for £3 3s., combines the advantages of a club-house with those of a standard library. The company has been formed under influential patronage; a large amount of support has already been promised; and the promoters believe that the undertaking will meet a public want, and prove a commercial success.

PROSPECTUS.

This Company has been formed for the purpose of establishing a Circulating Library at the West End of London, offering exceptional advantages to the Subscribers and Shareholders.

A provisional agreement has been entered into on behalf of the Company for the granting to the Company a thirty years' lease of the noble and desirable block of buildings adjoining the Grosvenor Gallery, in a portion of which the business of the Grosvenor Restaurant has already been established. And the Agreement also provides for the purchase of the valuable Plant and Furniture belonging thereto.

A copy of the said Agreement is deposited at the Offices of the Company, and will be produced to any person desiring to see the same.

These Premises are second to none in London for carrying out the objects of the Company, and the plan of the building, showing the position of the various rooms, and how it is intended to utilise them, will be found attached thereto.

The objects of the Grosvenor Library are fully set forth in the Memorandum of Association, but the following deserve special attention, as exhibiting the advantages that will accrue to the different classes of Subscribers.

1st.—To establish a Circulating Library, with a constant supply of all new books in every branch of English Literature, including the various Periodicals and Magazines, and all new Foreign and Colonial Books of interest and importance

2nd.—To provide a Library of selected and Standard Works in various branches of knowledge, which shall be always available for reference.

3rd.—To provide spacious Reading and Writing-rooms, amply stored with all the leading Newspapers and Reviews, both English, Foreign, and Colonial.

4th.—To provide Dining and Refreshment-Rooms, where Dinners and Luncheons will be served in the style of first-class London Clubs.

5th.—To provide commodious Cloak-rooms for the reception of parcels, &c., together with furnished Lavatories, Retiring and Dressing-rooms.

6th.—To book seats for all the London Theatres, Concerts, and other places of Entertainment, which will be done by telegraphic communication with the Theatres.

7th.—To provide a Circulating Library of all New Instrumental and Vocal Music.

8th.—To provide for the sale of all new books, and for the disposal, at exceptionally advantageous rates, of the surplus stock of such works of permanent interest as have passed out of circulation.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION.

Subscribers of the annual value of Three Guineas shall have the full benefit of all the advantages offered by the Institution, including the use of the Reference Library, the Reading and Writing-rooms, &c., together with the right to six volumes from the Circulating Library.

Family Tickets for Country Subscribers, with the right to Fifteen Volumes from the Circulating Library, Five Guineas per annum.

Subscribers who wish only to make use of the Circulating Library will be received on the same terms as are now offered by existing Libraries, of which full particulars may be obtained by application at the Office of the Company.

It is believed that the exceptional privileges offered to Subscribers will be specially acceptable to dwellers in the country or large provincial towns, whose business constantly brings them to London, and who will find in the Grosvenor Library nearly all the advantages of a first-rate London Club.

The want of such an institution, based upon a large and liberal conception of the public requirements, has been long felt and acknowledged, and the demand for an adequate supply of the works of Contemporary Literature is established beyond dispute, by the success of those existing Circulating Libraries which do not, however, offer the advantages presented by the Grosvenor Library.

Having regard to the numerous advantages offered to the Subscribers, the large amount of support promised by those who have already invested in the undertaking, the favourable opinion of authors, publishers, literary and scientific men, who have been communicated with and consulted as to the advisability and necessity of establishing such an institution, the Directors anticipate such a body of Subscribers as to justify them in the belief that the undertaking will be a commercial success.

No promotion fees whatever will be paid, the only expenses incurred being those incidental to the formation of the Company.

The only contract which has been entered into is an agreement dated the 17th day of December, 1879, between Sir Coutts Lindsay of the one part, and Alexander Rivington for himself and on behalf of the Company therein stated to be about to be formed under the name of the Grosvenor Library, Limited, of the other part.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares may be obtained at the London and County Bank, 21 Hanover Square, or any of its Branches, the Solicitors and Auditors, and also at the Offices of the Company in New Bond Street.

THE GRAND NATIONAL OPERA COMPANY (Limited).

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

In order to secure the completion of the Grand National Opera House on the Victoria Embankment, a number of gentlemen have entered into a provisional arrangement with those who commenced the undertaking for an assignment of their interests in the site and in the building, so far as it has gone.

The Opera House will have all the advantages which it is desirable a building of the kind should possess, and is designed to accommodate 3,000 persons.

It is estimated, as detailed in the prospectus, that £160,000 will be sufficient to acquire the existing property, complete the building in accordance with the agreements with the Metropolitan Board of Works and the lessee, and discharge all liabilities.

This Company has, therefore, been formed with a capital of £160,000, to be raised by way of Tontine, in 1,600 shares of £100 each, the payment to be as follows, viz.:—£5 per share on application (to be returned without deduction in case of no allotment); £20 per share on allotment; and the remaining £75 per share in three equal instalments, at intervals of three, six, and nine months from the time of allotment.

One hundred stalls will be reserved to be taken in rotation by the shareholders (each share conferring the right to one stall), priority being determined by ballot in January in every year. Each allottee will hold his stall for one year, and will be at liberty to transfer his right of admission—a valuable privilege for the shareholders.

The result of the application of the principle of "Tontine" to the proposed undertaking will be, that so long as all the lives nominated by the shareholders last, the annual income will be divided rateably amongst all the shareholders, but that as the lives drop, those shareholders only whose nominees survive will continue to divide rateably the annual income, until eventually the shareholder whose nominee survives all the other nominees will become entitled to the whole of the property of the Company.

In order that the Tontine may be determined within a reasonable time, no nominated life shall be under the age of 60.

Application for shares (accompanied by the requisite deposit) to be made to the Bankers of the Company, Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie, and Co., Pall Mall East.

Full prospectuses, forms of application, and other information may be obtained of the Secretary, at the Offices of the Company, Her Majesty's Theatre, Haymarket, London.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

" Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

Teeth from 5s; sets, 5 to 30 guineas. Only addresses, 312 Regent Street, opposite the Polytechnic; and 49 Moorgate Street. Established 1820. Consultation free.

IN the last issue of the "Journal" of the Royal United Service Institution will be found two important and interesting lectures on "The Military Aspects of Canada." They are by Lieutenant-Colonel T. B. Strange, R.A., and the fact that this officer holds a high appointment as Inspector of Artillery under the Canadian Government sufficiently guarantees their importance. A careful perusal of the paper creates in the mind of the reader a deep and impressive interest. They not only teach in a short space all the more salient features of the military aspects of the Dominion, but they directly lead to the contemplation of a far wider and more significant question upon which they throw much light. This question is the military future of our Empire, and the light is here projected on its Canadian limb. While the present military aspects of Canada, as a portion of an heterogeneously composed Empire, are thus exposed to minute observation, the darkness which envelopes the military aspects of a not remote British future becomes all the more painfully felt. It is generally assumed that England is a sort of central sun in a vast British system, and that around this sun, Canada, the Cape, Australasia, and a host of minor satellites revolve, controlled in their several orbits of progress by the centripetal force exercised by that superior power which some eternal law has immutably fixed in a fragment of territory, situated in the N.E. Atlantic. We do not say that is not a very pretty theory, but in view of Colonial developments, we protest against Englishmen at home complacently pointing to the beauties of the theory without inquiring as to its truth. If it be not true, we are living in a fool's paradise;" not altogether a suitable abode for the pioneers of civilisation. If it be true, we are morally bound to know something of the broader features of the causes which have produced the phenomenon, for otherwise we cannot know whether these causes are prominent or transitory; whether, in fact, what we delight to call our Imperial system is likely to last, or to perish. The picture of Empire the British people love to gaze upon, and call upon the world to admire, may be a durable work of highest art or merely a dissolving view, owing all its apparent reality to the exclusion of mere daylight, which, for the sake of looking at something pretty, is a condition but too readily accepted. Those who venture to let in a ray or two of pure daylight naturally spoil the effect, and dispel some of that comfortable darkness necessary for full satisfaction derivable from delightful delusions. Those few, therefore, who inquire into and bring under notice hard facts, which disturb belief in the reality of this central-sun theory, must not expect general or warm sympathy from the great mass of their fellow-countrymen at home. Those who show that the commerce and wealth of England must in the natural course of things be outstripped by the commerce and wealth of her Colonies, do but trouble and perplex the ordinary Englishman, whose fixed belief is that the "almighty dollar" is the real source of that extraordinary power of control which the theory referred to presumes England to exercise in the British Imperial system. Such statements are to him what the writing on the wall was to Belshazzar. Statisticians who boldly name a not very distant date when the smaller portion of British populations will be found in these two islands, and the larger will be over the sea, spoil the picture, because it is impossible to conceive the major power revolving round the minor. Philosophers who point to the approach of a time when natural physical advantages will be found rather in Colonial than in home-bred British populations, are equally unkind, for that the weak should control the movements of the strong is not consistent with any known law in a world whose whole history is a proof that "the weakest goes to the wall." Of all inquirers, the most obnoxious to the easy-going assumption of the complete and enduring superiority of these two small islands in an assumed British Imperialism are those who investigate the structure of the system by reference to the text of its organised ability to defend itself. The obvious reason for the irritation they produce is mainly due to the fact that this question is one which practically concerns the present, and cannot be shuffled off, nor skilfully avoided by empty allusions to the duties and responsibilities of posterity. To provide an organised system for ensuring a united defence, is the first duty of nations and empires. If our so-called Imperial system provides nothing of the kind, it is a failure; if it is incapable of doing so, the central orb is but a mock sun, and our beloved theory of British Imperialism is little more than a sham. These are matters of paramount importance. They demand investigation, and no satisfactory conclusions can be arrived at in the absence of full information as to what are the principles of defence adopted by our Imperial system, and what is the sum total of the results they have produced. Now, it is a remarkable and somewhat ominous fact that our existing Imperial system renders it quite impossible to say whether it is anybody's business to collect such information. It may possibly be the duty of some clerk in the Colonial Office to put Colonial reports and returns of a Naval or Military nature into a carefully selected, but perhaps dusty pigeon-hole, and Colonel Arbuthnot, M.P., sufficiently exposed the difficulty of getting them out, even for the enlightenment of a Parliament which is believed to be Imperial, though, in point of fact, it is a local assembly of more or less estimable persons, chosen to carry out the views of that limited portion of the subjects of the Queen residing in Great Britain and Ireland. The Naval and Military affairs of the United Kingdom, or even of India, attract a considerable amount of public attention, because the public has ample opportunities of acquiring information concerning them. Colonial, Military, or Naval questions command no attention at all, because ignorance is no disgrace where knowledge is well-nigh impossible to obtain. Probably neither Lord Beaconsfield extolling the power of the British Empire in the carefully-heated atmosphere of the Mansion House, nor Mr. Gladstone repudiating it out of a railway carriage-window in the bleak North, could say even roughly what amount of armed assistance its Colonial portion could, would, or should render when a struggle for Imperial existence comes. Probably each prefers appealing to the imagination of the people of the United Kingdom who have votes, rather than dealing with facts which primarily concern multitudes of Englishmen who, by reason of being colonists, have none. Meantime, however, the war-power of our Empire is not an imaginative speculation, but a real, practical, and all-important matter, and Colonel Strange's admirable lectures form a most valuable contribution to a study of the subject. The strategic geography of Canada is concisely explained, with the assistance of an excellent map, and a full and detailed description is given of the military organisation of the Dominion Forces, including the educational establishments. His remarks on "Armament and Supply," we think, fully justify his half-concealed ridicule of the net results produced by what he designates a "policy of drift." When Englishmen at home, excited by prospects of war, and doubtful as to the amount of military force available, heard that Canada offered to come to the rescue with some thousands of men, they began at once to boast of the military strength of the Empire; now that danger has, for the moment, passed away, they care not to inquire whether that boast, so far as our colonial system is concerned, was justified by facts. Those who really desire to know the true bearings of questions relating to Canadian contingents for Imperial service should read Colonel Strange's lectures. We must deny ourselves the pleasure of referring to his remarks on military colonisation at any length. We may, however, on a future occasion specially refer to the striking suggestions of one most competent to form sound opinions, and who, moreover, is not afraid to declare them in plain and forcible language. In conclusion, we commend to the attention of our readers one passage which cannot be too carefully weighed by careless dreamers who are believers in the "unhappy-go-unlucky system" producing Imperial military strength. "The Canadian population," says the colonel, "is full of loyalty which could be at any time rendered active in the defence of the country, provided the principal expense and direction was taken by Great Britain, or the council of a federated Empire."

In alluding recently to the desirability of bringing about a closer alliance between the seamen of the Royal Navy and those of the Mercantile Marine, a contemporary describes the latter as a "sorry lot," and says that the term "seaman," as applied to them, is a misnomer; that they are falling so low in the social scale, that they compare most unfavourably with the lowest orders of foreigners; and that in consequence of the almost utter worthlessness of the men who present themselves as British seamen, the masters of our merchant ships are compelled to ship foreigners, and that these latter form the vast majority of the crews of our ships. As though to prove the correctness of these remarks, seven "British seamen," A.B.'s, and quartermasters of the P. and O. steamer Australia, declined to man a boat to take the commanding officer on board the Valorous, which had been sent to her assistance, the weather being "not fit," and the man-of-war had to send a boat to the Australia in compliance with the request made by signal. Even passengers and Lascars volunteered to man the Australia's boat, when these poltroons feared to go. More recently still we have examples of crews deserting the ship and passengers confided to their care, and taking to the boats without orders. To such miserable specimens of humanity the Mercantile Marine owes its bad name, and this leads those not better informed to the conclusion that the crews of our vast merchant fleet are, with few exceptions, a worthless set, and the scum of our seafaring population. It is scarcely fair to the large proportion of good men in the Merchant Service, that there should be wholesale condemnation, for the sake of a minority. That there are bad and worthless characters among merchant seamen there can be no question, as what body which is numbered by hundreds of thousands can boast itself free? But even the greater proportion of these would compare favourably with the foreigners, whom it is stated are given preference in employment, and it is well known that few captains of first-class vessels will ship foreigners, when they can get their own countrymen. The Greek, Spaniard, or Portuguese, is never so good a seaman as the British sailor; and although he may probably be less given to drink, yet he is more dirty and more quarrelsome; and most of the causes of fray, stabbing, and even open mutiny, have arisen through the foreign element in the crew. It is a sorry fact that hundreds of our vessels are manned in part by foreign seamen, but, with few exceptions, not by choice of the captains. It has become a matter of necessity, resolved from the question of supply. The foreign sailor first found a footing in English ships from the simple reason that he would work cheaper. The supply then increased, and although at this day his wages in British ships are on a par with the English seaman yet the wages of the latter would now have been higher and a better class of men consequently obtained if the former had been kept out; but it is, of course, the object of the owners, as of all other employers of labour, to go to the cheapest market; and therefore the foreigner is encouraged, not because he is a better or more intelligent seaman, but because he keeps down the market price. That there is much to improve in the men of our Merchant Navy cannot be denied, and the onus lies with the owners and captains. Let them give higher wages, better food, and better accommodation, and they will soon get better men, more qualified for discipline, and a closer alliance with the seaman of the Royal Navy. Until late years, so little interest has been taken in the moral or spiritual welfare of our merchant seamen, that it is refreshing to know they are now better cared for, not only in the matter of accommodation and seaworthiness of ships, but when in port, are sought out by the agents of the Society for Missions to Seamen, who visit their ships and hold services either in, or in close vicinity to, the several docks. Mr. Thomas Brassey's offer of a prize of £25 for the best essay or suggestion to merchant officers, who are willing to help their crews in spiritual matters, and to conduct divine service on board-ship, as in the Royal Navy, is a step in the right direction, and will, we trust, have some good effect. But the surer way would be for men of influence to work up the large shipping companies and shipowners, and induce them to give positive instructions to their captains to hold divine service (weather permitting) at least once every Sunday, and that the fact be noted in the day's log. There is many a master willing to read the service, but who shirks it because he will not face the sneers of a motley crew; whereas if he had the positive commands of his owners, he would the more readily carry out the duty in obedience to orders, until, in the course of time, divine service on Sundays would become the rule instead of the exception in the Mercantile Marine. In the Navy the Admiralty Regulations provide that, weather permitting, a service is to be held every Sunday, and short prayers from the liturgy of the Church of England read every morning after quarters or divisions. This, perhaps, would be too much to expect from the merchant service, but owners should be called upon to follow the example of the Admiralty, and compel a Sunday service at least, when there is no valid ground for evading it.

An uneasy feeling prevails among the officers of the Light Infantry branch of the Royal Marines, with regard to what may be recommended by the Committee now sitting, to report upon the Royal Marine Artillery, as it is believed they have instructions to go into the composition of the Marine Corps generally, and ugly rumours are afloat as to the probability of further reductions. It is well known that an influential member of the Committee has already expressed an opinion that seven or eight thousand Marines ought to be sufficient for Admiralty requirements, taking into consideration the present training of the seamen of the Fleet, and that the seamen should be increased in proportion to the numbers taken from the Marines. Should, however, a move be made in the direction of economy, it is thought that any fears on the score of reduction are groundless, and that the numerical strength will not be effected, but that a possibility exists of giving up the depôt at Walmer. For many years there has been varied opinion as to the value of the depôt. It is solely for training recruits in drill before they are drafted to their several head-quarters; and it is very questionable whether the old system of each division instructing its own recruits was not a better one for many reasons. For a regiment which is continually changing its quarters, a depôt at which recruits can be turned into trained soldiers is not only desirable, but absolutely necessary. With the Royal Marine Corps, the case is different, for its divisional head-quarters are always stationary; each has its adjutant and serjeant-major, and an efficient drill staff of non-commissioned officers, so that a dépôt must be looked upon as a luxury and not a necessity. Again, the question arises whether it is not more desirable that young recruits should at once join their divisions, where they would mix in their barrack-rooms with old soldiers, rather than they should, as at the depôt, be brought up all young fellows together, for the first few months of their entry into the Service. With regard to the cost of the system there can be no doubt, as added to the fixed charge of barracks and their maintenance, and the additional staff of officers and non-commissioned officers, the item of travelling expenses for several hundred men being sent to and returning from the depôt in the course of a year would amount to no small figure. This would be avoided if the old system of drilling the recruits at their own divisions was reverted to. We never advocate unnecessary reduction, but at the same time we feel bound to express an opinion that if estimates are to be curtailed, it is more desirable to close a depôt than a division.

Rear-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh has returned to England from visiting the Empress of Russia at Cannes. H.R.H. the Duchess of Edinburgh remains abroad.

On Commander Francis J. Eliott leaving the Resistance on the 2nd inst., he and Mrs. Eliott were entertained at dinner by the officers of the ship, who presented Mrs. Eliott with a gold bracelet. Commander Eliott has invariably shown considerate kindness to the men under his command, the result being seen in the fact that the Resistance took a high place as regards smartness during the late cruise with the Channel Squadron.

The Chilians have no very great opinion of Peruvian courage. They express their disdain for their present enemy in the curt sentence:—"Every man who fights in Peru is a hero, since in Peru only heroes fight." "And all other Peruvians, what do they?" asks Los Tiempos of Santiago.

The Channel Squadron entered the Tagus on January 10, and anchored off Lisbon. The Achilles joined the flag. The usual salutes were exchanged between the Squadron and the shore and the Achilles.

It is reported that the German Admiralty will renew the contract for raising the Grosser Kurfürst, from month to month only.

Vice-Admiral Sir F. L. M'Clintock arrived at Bermuda on the 7th inst., and will leave for the West Indies on the 20th inst.

Rear-Admiral Stirling, in the Triumph, was at Callao on December 11. The Admiral would go south as soon as possible, returning to Callao about the last week in January.

We are informed that as a part of the arrangements made for the reduction of the number of annual entries of Naval cadets, it has been decided that in future a candidate is to be allowed only one examination. Rejection or non-appearance will finally exclude him from a cadetship. As regards the question of non-appearance, we hope their Lordships will see the justice of allowing some latitude, for it would be hard indeed to finally exclude a cadet who might be unable to attend on account of some passing sickness, family affliction, or other circumstance over which he would have no control.

Lieutenants Hadley, Matson, Booth, Wilson, Willis, Percy, Tate, and Palmer, R.M.L.I., will commence a course of military instruction, at Eastney, under Major C. C. Suther, R.M.A., on the 20th inst.

It has been stated by a contemporary that King William IV. hated Marine officers. If this was the case, the feelings of his late Majesty must have undergone a considerable change after coming to the throne, for, as Duke of Clarence, he was decidedly partial to the Marine corps, so much so, that when, in 1827, he presented new colours to the Chatham Division, he expressed himself as "feeling peculiar and very great happiness, both in his station of Lord High Admiral and as a General of Marines," that "he had been intimate with the corps of Royal Marines for a period of nearly 49 years, and had been, he might almost say, born and bred amongst them. The feelings he, therefore, must have at being made the instrument of the Royal approbation of their heroic, glorious, and victorious conduct he left for them to imagine, for he could not express them." His Royal Highness also alluded to the wars of succession in the reign of Queen Anne, "during which," he said, "the Marines had by their exertions contributed to the establishment of his family on the throne of these realms. For these great and glorious services he felt a particular gratitude to them,—a gratitude in which he felt confident he might say the people of this country participated." As a further proof of his Royal Highness's partiality for the Marines, when he came to the throne, and resigned his post of Lord High Admiral and General of Marines, he presented to each of the four Divisions a full-length portrait of himself in the uniform of Lord High Admiral, and this memento of his Majesty is now in the mess-room at each head-quarters.

The conference between the directors of the Sailors' Home at Portsmouth and the representatives of the Service afloat, has at last taken place. The agitation set on foot concerning the management of this Home is not to be regretted, and while we have the fullest confidence that the directors have been willing to do all in their power to promote the welfare and popularity of so important an institution, the outspeaking of the Navy as to its wishes will doubtless have good results.

The Grand Duke Constantine has issued a circular to the Russian Fleet enjoining upon all officers the necessity of making themselves acquainted with the construction and composition of torpedoes on board their vessels. Mining officers, on taking up their appointments on board men-of-war, are to explain to the officers the functions of the various sectional parts of torpedoes, and are to continue their instruction until accuracy of knowledge is arrived at. In order, further, to impart torpedo knowledge to the officers of the Fleet, courses of lectures are to be given during the winter at St. Petersburg, Cronstadt, and Nicolaeff; and the Grand Duke expresses his opinion that captains and commanders, as well as their subordinate officers, will do well to profit by this opportunity to receive instruction.

Admiral Farquhar, on resigning the naval command at Devonport, left for London last Saturday forenoon. At the railway station, there had assembled General the Hon. Leicester Smyth, commanding the Western District, Admiral-Superintendent Hope, and a large number of naval and military officers, who bade the gallant admiral a very cordial farewell.

The Wivern was commissioned at Devonport on Wednesday by Commander John G. Jones, as harbour-defence ship for Hong Kong, and will leave for that station as soon as ready, taking out a crew for the Kestrel, which is to be recommissioned, after repairs, at Hong Kong. The Wivern, when she was placed in the hands of Messrs. Laird for refit, was intended for service at Bermuda, but another ship will be selected for that station, to the unprotected state of which we recently called attention.

Commodore Richards, C.B., was at St. Helena in the Boadicea on December 29, having arrived there the previous day. The Commodore intended to leave the island on the 3rd inst. for Ascension, taking with him the Industry, and proceeding thence to Sierra Leone.

Paymaster Bernard Meyer, who was appionted additional to the Garnet in September last, in consequence of an anticipated vacancy arising in the Elk, will now assume the paymaster's duties of that ship, a court-martial having decided that the officer lately holding that appointment is unworthy of retention in her Majesty's Service, from which he is now dismissed with disgrace. False statements and misappropriation of public money were the offences of which he was proved guilty.

The cancelling of the promotion of Sub-Lieutenant Duncan Macpherson, to which we alluded last week, was not on account of any report received from his commanding officer, Lieutenant Nowell, but the result of the finding of the court-martial, which inquired into the grounding of the Foxhound. The court found the commanding officer, the sub-lieutenant, and the navigating officer all guilty, in some degree, of having contributed to the grounding of the ship, and for this the sub-lieutenant's promotion has been cancelled. Of this decision there may be little reason to complain, but it does seem especially hard upon Mr. Macpherson, that he should have been so publicly visited with this mark of their Lordships' displeasure. The Board knew that a court-martial was ordered, and it would have been kinder to have withheld the promotion of this officer until the minutes were received, instead of giving him his step in rank and then publishing his reduction to his former rank in the Gazette, and consequently in almost every paper in the kingdom.

According to a telegram from Valparaiso, dated December 18, the Huascar had then been refitted by the Chilians and was ready for sea. The Blanco Encalada and the Loa were on the look-out to intercept a transport from Panama, and other ships of the Chilian squadron were blockading Arica.

By the arrival of the African mail, further information of the late Niger expedition has been received, and it is universally acknowledged that the proceedings of the Pioneer were productive of much good. Her late commander, Lieutenant Burr, has been invalided home, but we hope his services will not be overlooked by the Admiralty.

We are glad to hear that a raid has been made upon the gambling dens at Lisbon, in which so many of the young officers of the Channel Squadron have from time to time burned their fingers. It is of little avail forbidding officers to go to these places, for in some the love of gaming is so marked as to make them brave the displeasure which would attend their detection; and seeing that play is strictly forbiddeh on board ship, many have accepted the opportunity offered at Lisbon with all the more readiness, thougn greatly to their cost.

Commander Walter Bridges has, we hear, declined the appointment of commander of the Raleigh on being paid off from the Wolverene, it being his wish to be placed upon half-pay. The Raleigh will, in consequence, most probably make the homeward voyage with the Wolverene's paid off crew without a commander.

Captain Chatfield, whose fortune it has been to spend in Malta Harbour nearly the whole of his time in command of the Thunderer, has now been selected for the command of the Steam Reserve at Devonport, vice Curme, promoted. Captain Philip Colomb, who has been appointed to the Thunderer, will find the ship now drawing towards fitness for further service as a sea-going vessel.

By the appointment of Commander J. G. Jones to the Victor Emanuel for service in the Wivern, the Commodore at Hong Kong will gain the advantage, which has long been desired, of having a second in command of higher rank than lieutenant. Hitherto, there has been but one lieutenant in the Victor Emanuel, upon whom the duties of second in command have devolved, and who has been senior officer in the absence of the Commodore.

With two appointments as aides-de-camp to the Queen, and two good-service pensions vacant, the First Lord of the Admiralty will, we hope, find it possible to remember certain captains who have hitherto failed to meet with that recognition which their services are generally believed to have entitled them.

The Christmas examination on board the Britannia has not ended happily for a number of the young gentlemen who had passed their full time on board, but who failed to pass out, and have consequently been discharged. The number of cadets who have been removed from the list of the Navy as unable to pass is seven, and ten others have been cautioned that unless they have a care they will soon follow the unfortunate rejected. We fear the plucked ones have scarcely spent a happy Christmas time with their friends.

The torpedo launch allowed to leave Panama by the Executive of the Republic of Columbia, notwithstanding the representations of the Chilian Consul at that port as to her true character, has fallen into the hands of the Chilians, having been captured by the Chilian Squadron off Iquique.

The new Naval Medical Warrant has not yet appeared. The half-yearly advertisement for candidates for medical men for the Navy is out, and at the same time appears that for the Army. Surely the Admiralty cannot believe that young doctors will go up for the Navy under the existing regulations, when they can try for the Army, with its recently acquired benefits and greater pay.

The Italian ironclad Duilio has just been put in commission at Spezia. She carries four 100-ton guns, twelve smaller ones, and four mitrailleuses. She is expected to attain a speed of twelve and a half knots, and her trial trips will be commenced almost immediately.

We are informed that Inspector-General John Watt Reid, M.D., senior Medical Officer at Haslar, has been selected to succeed Sir Alexander Armstrong, K.C.B., as Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy.

Commander V. L. Cameron, C.B., will deliver a lecture at the Royal United Service Institution on the afternoon of Friday, February 20, on his recent travels in Mesopotamia, especially with reference to the proposed Euphrates Valley Railway.

The Euryalus has broken down in her steam department, and requires the attention of the dockyard at Malta, the yard at Bombay being unequal to the task of repairing her. She has been ordered to make the best of her way under sail, and after being towed through the Canal, will be met by the Téméraire, and be conveyed by her to Malta. This is rather an undignified proceeding for a flagship, and Rear-Admiral Gore Jones has been left on the East Indies station without a proper ship in which to fly his flag.

Mr. Swainson, Mr. Awdry, and the Accountant-General of the Navy have been directed to inquire into the position of the messengers at the Admiralty, and to suggest any reorganisation they may deem advisable.

The Stanhope medal is in future to have a special riband, in order that the wearers of this coveted honour may be distinguished from those who have received the Humane Society's medal only. The Stanhope medals for 1875, 1877, and 1878 were bestowed upon Naval officers, but that for the past year has been awarded to Mr. Chuckerbutty, a native medical practitioner, who saved a woman from drowning in the Hooghly.

A very unnecessary fuss is being made by some of the weeklies over the so-called tattooing of the noses of the young Princes on board the Bacchante. The idea of putting the Service mark upon youngsters on their first sea-going trip is, of course, very absurd, but just the kind of thing that delights the boys in a gun-room mess. As for the "considerable facial disfigurement" which is supposed to follow, the mark is but the merest scratch, and not a "tattoo."

Commander Robert Willcox, on the retired list, who has been awarded the Greenwich-Hospital pension vacant by the death of Commander Robert St. Aubyn, entered the Navy in June, 1832, and was promoted to Lieutenant in 1842. He served for some time in the Mediterranean and on the coast of Africa; commanded the Harpy, revenue cruiser, February, 1849, to January, 1851; and on February 1 of the same year was appointed to the Coastguard, in which he served to January, 1863, when he was promoted to the rank of retired Commander. He was awarded the Coastguard pension November 2, 1874.

Under the revised arrangement of the Transport Department of the Admiralty, Admiral William R. Mends, K.C.B., continues as director of transports; Mr. W. F. Baughan becomes assistant-director; and Messrs. S. J. Graff, F. L. Vaux, and Gordon W. Miller, senior clerks. The Imperial and Indian branches will be amalgamated, Captain Cruttenden, I.N., remaining as "consulting officer for the Indian troop service."

We recently gave a preliminary list of the Marine Artillery Committee, and the following is a complete list of the members:—Admiral Sir A. C. Key, K.C.B. (chairman); Major-General C. W. Adair, C.B., D.A.G., Royal Marines (vice-chairman); Major-General. J. W. C. Williams, R.M.A.; Major-General E. L. Pym, R.M.L.I.; Captain J. O. Hopkins, R.N.; Colonel Sir F. W Festing, K.C.M.G., C.B., A.A.G., Royal Marines; Captain N. F. Way, R.M.L.I.; and Captain F. H. Poore, R.M.A.

Her Majesty the Empress of Germany has expressed her desire to add her name to the list of patrons of the Seamen's Hospital, Greenwich. Her Majesty has also sent a donation of £20.

Among the passengers who arrived at Plymouth on Tuesday from the West Indies were Lieutenant H. N. Rolfe, R.N., Lieutenant C. W. W. Ingram, R.N., Chief Engineer H. Hull, R.N., and Paymaster Silas W. Parker, R.N.

A novel invention has been patented by Captain L. M. Carmichael, 5th Lancers, deputy-assistant-quartermaster-general on the Staff of the Intelligent Department, in the shape of a portable boot-tree. It is made of india-rubber, and when inflated is equal to the present wooden tree, but excels it so far as convenience is concerned.

A distinguished-service reward is vacant by the death of Major-General A. Scudamore, C.B.

We notice that at the recent examination for Sandhurst five of the candidates passed direct from Wimbledon School, while one headed the list. This is the same school we alluded to in a former issue as having passed eight of the forty-five successful candidates for the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, facts that must be highly gratifying to all concerned, and which certainly speak well for the system of education at that institution.

Brevet Major W. E. Despard has been appointed to the barrack mastership at the Chatham Division of Royal Marines, vacant by the voluntary retirement of Major H. F. Cooper. Major Despard received his brevet rank for services in the Ashantee expedition.

Many of our readers will be interested in learning that Mr. S. Roberts, for many years on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief's Office, has retired upon pension, and has established himself at 28 Leicester Square, as an Army and General agent. Mr. Roberts was greatly respected, and has quitted the Horse Guards with the highest testimonials. Few men are better fitted to advise on questions of exchanges, &c., or to conduct business for which it is necessary for officers to employ an agent.

A medical officer, lately returned from India, complains to us of the very inadequate provision which is made in the Indian transports for officers who are invalided to England, and expresses an opinion that the death of a young officer the other day was entirely due to the defective arrangements on board the troop-ship on which he was provided with a passage. The matter is one of serious moment, and we feel that we have only to draw attention to it to secure the consideration of the authorities, who, we rest certain, will adopt steps to prevent a recurrence of circumstances which have robbed the Service of a valuable life, and have cast into mourning the family of a distinguished officer who has served his country in India for a long term of years.

We learn from an account of the storming of Secocoeni's stronghold, which reaches us from the Cape, that, "Shortly after 11 a.m. (Nov. 28) the signal to storm the stronghold was given. The heights had by this time fallen into our hands, but the isolated stronghold still held doggedly out. Upwards of 200 shells (double and common) were hurled against its rocky walls, several exploding in the mouths of the caves, carrying death to the miserable beings below. But still they kept up a desultory fire, and seldom, if ever, exposed themselves to the view of our sharpshooters. The signal (two rockets fired in the air) having been given, the 21st and 94th Regiments fixed bayonets, and Colonel Russell, drawing his sword, placed himself at the head of the column, and gallantly lead the attack. It was a magnificent sight, the bright rays of the sun reflecting on the burnished steel of the pointed bayonets, the red-coated soldiers nimbly climbing among the dark masses of rock, and loud strange echoes of the musketry ringing incessantly in the mountain gorges, produced an effect, the like of which it would be impossible to realise. But our infantry carried the stronghold, and Colonel Russell, on reaching the summit, was enthusiastically cheered by the lads who followed him through the deadly storm which surrounded them on all sides. Sir Garnet smiled, and well he might, for British infantry and Colonial cavalry proved themselves worthy of their General's approbation."

The following "Memorandum relating to the reorganisation of the clerical establishments of the manufacturing departments under the War Office" was issued on Thursday:—"The Lords Commissioners of her Majesty's Treasury have agreed, subject to the condition that the Secretary of State for War decides who shall retire and who may remain, to give the following terms to those gentlemen in the clerical establishments of the manufacturing departments at Woolwich, Enfield, Waltham Abbey, and Birmingham, whose services will be dispensed with in the forthcoming reorganisation:—1. Annual pensions to be such only as the Treasury now awards on abolition of office, conformably to the Superannuation Act of 1859, except that in no case shall less than half the salary be awarded, as provided in the Admiralty and War-Office Regulation Act, 1878. The pension in no case to exceed two-thirds of salary. 2. A gratuity of £30 for each year's service in the War Department in any class which is included in the present junior class, but in no case to exceed £600. In the calculation of this gratuity, service as a temporary clerk will not be allowed to reckon, except in the case of those who were not required to undergo a further examination on appointment to the establishment, and who had a claim to succeed to established vacancies. The Secretary of State has appointed a committee to select the members of the present establishment who shall compose the new establishment, and so far as is consistent with the conditions above stated, he will be willing to consider offers of retirement from gentlemen in the departments who may desire to take advantage of the present opportunity of leaving the Service; but it must be distinctly understood that the offer of retirement is subject in each case to the Secretary of State's approval. Endeavours will be made to meet as far as possible the wishes of individuals, but if the Committee of Selection report that it is for the advantage of the public service that any who have volunteered to retire should be retained, and the Secretary of State approve such recommendation, they will be retained. On the other hand, those whom it is not in the interest of the public service to retain will have to retire, whether they have volunteered or not. All applications to this effect must be sent to the Permanent Under-Secretary of State not later than the 24th inst.—War Office, Jan. 13.

All must agree that Lieutenant-Colonels Bond and Rogers have been but inadequately rewarded for their recent services at the Cape. Both officers served as Majors throughout the Zulu campaign, and the latter commanded the 90th Regiment, in the absence of Sir Evelyn Wood, yet all they have got is a brevet Lieutenant-colonelcy. Now what possible advantage can this give them, considering that they have now obtained the substantive rank? In their case—certainly in that of Colonel Rogers—some further acknowledgment is called for. A month's seniority seems but poor recompense for all the anxiety which a year's command in the field must necessarily have entailed.

It is now an undisputed fact that the object of training an infantry soldier should be to place him in the best position for using his rifle with the greatest possible effect, and the army which carries out this principle most thoroughly is that which will stand the fairest chance of success when brought into action on a European battlefield. The subject is one of such immense importance, that it may well be asked,—How do we stand in this respect? Are our soldiers trained on a sound principle, and is time wasted in our Service upon show manœuvres? In order to furnish a comprehensive answer, and to point out defects, we will sketch out briefly our system, and, having done so, we ask,—Is the following in any way an exaggeration?—In peace time, the efficiency of a British battalion in the field is tested by the performance of a number of movements in the presence of an inspecting officer.

Sometimes a few rounds of blank ammunition are expended, when a considerable noise is made, the firing, as a rule, being aimless and extremely rapid. The most important movements at an inspection are "marching-past" and the "manual, platoon, and bayonet exercises." These are never, under any circumstances, omitted. At the close of the inspection, should the General address the battalion on the subject of its efficiency in the field, he is almost certain to allude to the manner in which these exercises were performed. The usual form of speech is as follows:—"The marching-past was excellent, and the manner in which you went through the manual and bayonet exercises deserves the highest praise. From the steadiness with which the several movements have been performed, I am sure that should the battalion be sent on active service, it will maintain the good name it has always borne," &c. The General reports accordingly. Occasionally, if the practice-range be within an easy distance, one or two men per company fire a few rounds of ball ammunition at a target, as a matter of form. Nobody cares whether they hit or miss. For the whole year, therefore, with the exception of eight working days, the trained soldiers are practised in perfecting themselves in drill, and more particularly in the above-mentioned exercises. The mathematical precision which is frequently attained is simply astounding! In a great many regiments, the musketry training of the men is looked upon as a nuisance, and is hurried through as quickly as possible, for the fact of a battalion shooting well brings it little or no credit, and if its performances be bad, practically no notice whatever is taken of it. It is simply through the individual exertions of a comparatively small number of officers that the shooting of the Army is as good as it is. If one-half the attention were paid to rifle instruction which is now given to "marching-past" and the "bayonet exercise in quick time," the efficiency of the Army as a fighting machine would be doubled, if not trebled. It would surely be a far more practical test of the efficiency of a battalion in the field, if it were exercised at the annual inspection in field-firing, or where that is impossible, in skirmishing by sections on the range, than to depend almost entirely on those time-honoured, but somewhat useless, manœuvres of "marching-past" and the "bayonet exercise." These may be a test of smartness, but we doubt much whether they are any criterion of a regiment's fighting efficiency, for it is proved that the commanding officers who pride themselves most upon the proficiency of their men in these performances are those who are allowed by general consent to rank in the category of leaders of "doubtful capacity." What we want to do is to make the test of the small Army we have at command, and do all we can to teach our boy-soldiers what is actually useful during the short time we have them under instruction, not to waste time and energy in show-manœuvres and obsolete exhibitions, which are all very well in their way, but are made far too much of, both by commanding and inspecting officers.

We have received a letter drawing attention to the effects of the wholesale supersession by captains of the Ordnance Corps of captains of Infantry and Cavalry. On July 5, 1872, Lord Cardwell promoted all captains of the Ordnance Corps to the rank of major. This was but an act of justice, for it was obviously an anomaly that, considering the real positions occupied by these officers, they should rank only with commanders of troops of cavalry or companies of infantry. Unfortunately, justice to one class of officers was done at the expense of injustice to another class, namely, those captains of infantry and cavalry who, as captains, were senior to the officers promoted. The junior of the latter was Captain Ducat, Bombay Engineers, a captain of 1868, who had only 16 years' service; yet he superseded captains of 1860, and of 18 years' service and upwards. The last captain of the Line promoted is Captain Todd, 87th Regiment. He is a captain of 1866, yet his junior as a captain by two years became, by the promotion of 1872, a major, nearly eight years ago! During 1879, the per-centage of captains to majors, in the different branches of the Service, was as follows:—Artillery, 11·82; Engineers, 8·99; Cavalry, 6·3; Infantry of the Line, 3·9. It will be gathered from the above that the promotion of captains to majors is three times greater in the Artillery than in the Infantry of the Line. Returning to the subject of the Gazette of July 5, 1872, the injustice of the wholesale supersession of Non-Orduance Corps officers was so glaring, that Lord Cardwell was forced to give the public a sop; and this he did by giving, in 1873, brevet promotion to a certain number of infantry and cavalry captains. But though he thus practically admitted the principle that the supersession of which we complain was unjust, he did not carry it out to its logical conclusion; he only diminished the amount of injustice. Since then, no other steps have been taken in the matter. Now, brevet promotion by seniority will cease on October 1, 1880, by which time the captains of 1867 will probably be still captains, without a chance of advancement. Now is, therefore, the moment to offer the only possible compensation to the superseded infantry and cavalry captains, by promoting at once all who were senior as such to Major Ducat, the date of whose captaincy is February 5, 1868. There are very few such captains left; the expense would be but slight, and no precedent would be created.

To judge by a correspondence which has been placed in our hands, the Authorities seem resolved to obtain some financial consolation for the disaster of Isandula. Captain Reginald Younghusband, 1st Battalion, 24th Regiment, was among those who fell in that unfortunate engagement. He left a widow to mourn his loss, and that widow, being by no means well off, applied for a pension. It appearing, however, that she possessed an income of over £300 a year, the application was, in accordance with an arbitrary, unjust, and shameful regulation, refused. The brother, as representing Captain Younghusband's parents and family, then asked that the value of the commission might be returned to Captain Younghusband's legal representatives. In reply, he was informed that Captain Younghusband, having left a widow whose claim to pension was inadmissible, the repayment of the value of the commission could not be sanctioned. We cannot ourselves see what connection pension and repayment of commission-money have with each other. The pension is ostensibly granted to prevent an officer's widow from actually starving; while the repayment of the commission-money is merely the return of what an officer has actually expended, but for continuing to enjoy the benefit of which he is prevented by losing his life in the public service. The War Office, however, asserts that though this commission-money was found by Captain Younghusband's own family, it could only be paid to his widow, who is debarred from receiving it because she is ineligible for a pension. It might as well be maintained that she could not receive it because she had red hair, or stammered. Setting aside, however, technical objections, we would touch on the broad question of justice and truthfulness. Recently, the Secretary of War, in reply to a question from General White referring to Isandula, said that in the case of officers skilled in action, the sums they had paid for their commissions were returned to their representatives. If Colonel Stanley was correct, why is not Captain Younghusband's commission-money handed over to his representatives? As to justice, it is manifestly unjust and discreditable in the highest degree that the State should derive a pecuniary benefit from the death of those officers who fall in its defence. It is equally unjust that two officers should go into action side by side, the one having no money invested in his commission, the other some £1,700 or £1,800. The whole question, however, of the treatment of the representatives of officers killed in action or dying in the performance of their duty needs attention, and we do not intend to let the matter drop.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Calcutta, January 12, says:—"The arrival in India of Lieutenant-General W. Olpherts, V.C., C.B., is hailed with the utmost satisfaction by the Press and the public, and it is anticipated that he will be appointed to a high command at the front, or to the post of Commander-in-Chief of the Forces in Madras." We have many times expressed the opinion that General Olpherts has been badly treated in having been left so long without employment, seeing that he is admitted by all Anglo-Indians to be one of the ablest, gallantest, and most popular—as he undoubtedly is one of the most eccentric—General officers who has ever held command in India. It is no secret, and the fact is known to the General himself, that many persons, especially in office, charge him with madness. Those, however, who know the man best—those, that is to say, who have served with and under him, and have held positions on his staff—affirm that there is such method in his madness that he is simply idolised by subordinates, whilst no General in India commands more thoroughly the confidence of the Army. Besides his other qualities, "Hell-fire Jack" is the most upright, outspoken, and dashing of soldiers, and if we are to place reliance on the statements of those who have had practical experience with him in the field, no General officer in the whole British Army has more completely mastered the details of tactics and can manœuvre the three arms with greater effect than the distinguished Bengal gunner, whose appearance in India has called for such an outburst of enthusiasm.

The French Budget for this year has just been published, and furnishes the following information with regard to the Army and Navy. There are now only three Marshals,—Marshal Canrobert, who is a Senator and president of the Committee on Promotion; Marshal MacMahon, who since he was President of the Republic has held no office; and Marshal Lebœuf, who has been under a thick cloud ever since the Franco-German war. These three Marshals each receive 30,000 fr. a year; the Grand Chancellor of the Legion of Honour, General Vinoy, who resides in a palace, receives 40,000 fr.; the Secretary-General, 18,000 fr.; the Governor of the Invalides, 27,000 fr.; the Military Governor of Paris, 26,000 fr.; the Military Governor of Lyons, 15,000 fr.; and the Commanders of Army Corps, 31,000 fr. Such are the prizes of the military profession. In the Navy, there appears to be no full Admiral at present, and 15 Vice-Admirals receive 18,000 fr. a year; Rear-Admirals, 12,000 fr.; Post Captains, 8,000 fr., &c. There used to be another prize for military men,—to wit, the Governor-Generalship of Algeria, 100,000 fr. a year; but that post is now held by M. Albert Grévy, brother of the President of the Republic. It may be added that since the days of Carnot and Pache the War Minister has always been either a Marshal or a General, and from the same revolutionary epoch the Ministers of Marine have all been Admirals. All Ministers receive 60,000 fr. a year. Generals and Admirals are also often entrusted with diplomatic missions. France is always represented at St. Petersburg by a General; General Chanzy is the present French Ambassador. In London we have Admiral Pothuan, who has been twice Minister of Marine since the fall of the Empire, while Admiral Jaurez is French Ambassador at Madrid. There are also Port-Admirals, who receive extra pay, and a good many colonial Governorships go to Naval men. The best paid Governorship is Senegal, 122,000 fr.; then comes India, 83,000 fr.; afterwards, New Caledonia, Martinique, Guadeloupe, and Réunion, each 54,000 fr.

There are, as most of our readers are doubtless aware, several retired officers of the Army still resident among the brotherhood of the Charterhouse. The advanced age and isolated condition of these veterans naturally awakens sympathy, especially on such occasions as "public days," such as founder's day, when they are the only persons who do not participate in the festivities. A banquet of this high conservative character assumes a peculiarly exclusive aspect when it is considered that there are some sixty or seventy "poor gentlemen" pensioners "left out in the cold," or offered the "scraps," in the name of "increase of commons," at the end of the celebration. As far as the Services are concerned, a correspondent puts in a plea for some less humiliating recognition of the officers referred to, and asks,—"Why should not the brotherhood as a body be given an annual dinner, as well as the governors and their friends?" It is known in the hospital that its rules are sufficiently elastic—thanks to the considerate spirit in which they were originally framed by the munificent founder, Thomas Sutton Sutton, who had himself been a soldier in his youth, and introduced the military element into the Charterhouse—and the fact should not be forgotten. It remains to be impressed upon the government of the Charterhouse in the present day that an "officer" and a "gentleman" are synonimous terms, and ought ever to be so regarded, if only out of respect to the memory of Captain Thomas Sutton!

The young gentlemen called engagés conditionels, who joined the French Army before their time, under certain conditions were allowed home for a few days on the occasion of the new year, but not to pass their holiday in feasting, riot, or idleness. In fact, each engagé, on leaving his regiment, carried with him a paper styled biographique, which was to be filled up before his return. In this paper he was to give, 1st, date and place of birth; 2nd, moral education received; 3rd, souvenirs of childhood; 4th, instruction received and lectures followed; 5th, instruction acquired up to the present in science and literature; 6th, knowledge of ancient and modern languages; 7th, diplomas received; 8th, licentiates obtained; 9th, physical, gymnastical, riding, swimming, fencing education; 10th, profession and work accomplished; 11th, social situation of parents, father, mother, or guardian; 12th, voyages made and souvenirs preserved; 13th, general reflections concerning the civil career; 14th, peculiar opinions concerning the military profession; 15th, operations in arithmetic, algebra, or geometry; 16th, essay upon general history or some nation in particular; 17th, appreciation on the present and future value of Algeria. A French editor, casting his eye over this "biography," declares that it would take him six months to fill it up properly. Supposing Bob Clive, who has the worst reputation in his village, had been called on to give among other matters his souvenirs of childhood before getting a commission. Cannot one imagine how Soult and other men, who rose to fame under the First Empire, would have been taken aback had they been called upon to fill up such a document during a week's congé. But under the First Empire there was too much rough campaigning to be done for education, souvenirs de jeunesse, &c., to be considered absolutely essential. Take, for example, the following scene which is to be found in the memoirs of Baron de Meneval, who for many years was private secretary to the Emperor:—"Often, when reviewing an army corps or on the field of battle, the Emperor would pull up in front of a regiment, and summoning the officers around him, would question them, and ask them to point out their comrades most worthy of promotion and decoration. He would then pass to the soldiers. . . . . . . At one of these distributions of military recompenses, which resembled family parties, a serjeant was pronounced the best and bravest. The colonel acknowledged that he united all the necessary qualities for making a good officer, but regretted that he could not propose him, as, unfortunately, a serious impediment stood in the way. 'What impediment?' exclaimed the Emperor, with impetuosity. 'Sire, he can neither read nor write.' 'Colonel, I name him officer.' And his Majesty, whose own orthography, was very shaky, and whose writing was almost illegible galloped off." History, unfortunately, does not say what became of this illiterate officer; whether he took to pot-hooks and hangers, or whether to the end of his military career he was unable to write a report or read a bulletin.

The Army.

1st Life Guards. The death is announced of the Right Hon. the Earl of Roden, one of her Majesty's lords-in-waiting, which occurred on Saturday, in the 34th year of his age. He was educated at Eton and at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he graduated in 1868; and he succeeded as fourth earl on the death of his grandfather, in March, 1870. His lordship entered the regiment as cornet in 1868, became a lieut. in 1869, and retired in 1871.

6th Dragoon Guards. The Times' correspondent at Gundamuk telegraphs, on Jan. 8, the following further particulars of the recent accident by which several men of the regiment lost their lives:—"A reconnoitring party, consisting of the Carabiniers and the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, went out from Jellalabad, crossing a ford over the Cabul river near Fort Sale, for the purpose of examining the entrance into the Lughman Valley. After a successful reconnaissance, Capt. the Hon. C. Dutton, A.Q.G., and Major W. J. Boyes, A.A.G., being with the party, they returned by a ford at the foot of the Dorunta Gorge, a very narrow and difficult gorge, round which the Lughman Valley commences. Here some Carabiniers lost the line of crossing, and five men were drowned."

9th Lancers. Writing from Cabul on the 13th ult., the correspondent of the Pioneer gives the following account of the Cavalry action on that day:—"Mahomed Jan drew off his men towards Chardeh and a squadron of the 14th Bengal Lancers got among them near Indikee, killing many. Soon after Gen. Baker left Sherpur, 2,000 Kohistanis appeared on the plain east of the Bemaru hills, making for Mahomed Jan's position. They did not seem to know of Gen. Baker's attack, and fell back upon G-3 R.A. shelling them. The Guides Cavalry then moved out and waited beneath the end of the ridge until the Kohistanis got well into the plain beyond, and then charged through them twice in brilliant form, cutting them up and utterly dispersing them. The chase extended to the Logar River. The plain was covered with their dead; about Beni Shahr there were a good thousand. The Kohistanis driven from Siah Sung were charged by three squadrons from the 9th Lancers, 5th Punjab Cavalry, and 14th Bengal Lancers. The cavalry behaved admirably, and the ground favoured them. The enemy fought stubbornly. Capt. Butson, 9th Lancers, was killed leading his squadron: Capt. Chisholme wounded; four troopers of the 9th Lancers killed and seven wounded. Our casualties in all amount to 11 killed and 43 wounded." We learn from Maritzburg, under date Dec. 15:—"Among the first of the officers to return from the Secocoeni stronghold is Major Bushman, of the 9th Lancers, who reached the city on Friday evening, 12th, having left the Mountain on the 1st inst., two days after the assault. Major Bushman led the attack on the east side of the mountain, and led it in a manner which has called for the approbation of everybody. The Major is now en route to India, to join his regiment in Afghanistan." The Lahore paper says, "Capt. Lord William Beresford, V.C., A.D.C. to the Viceroy, has left Calcutta to rejoin his regiment, the 9th Lancers, at Cabul. It was time he did so, as the 9th have been so terribly cut up that they can now have very few officers fit for duty. But it will be no easy matter for even the dashing Lord William to make his way to Cabul from Gandamak."

13th Hussars. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Baker Russell, C.B., we understand, had his horse shot under him in the action before Secocoeni's stronghold. Writing from Fort Albert Edward on Nov. 21, a military correspondent says, "Col. Baker-Russell is earning golden opinions among all classes at the front. His manly and independent bearing are characteristic of the Russell family, and I need not tell you that he is unceasing in his efforts to mitigate the sufferings which are invariably borne by troops operating in a tropical region."

14th Hussars. The Madras Times says:—"Orders have been received in Madras for the immediate posting of two officers from the 14th Hussars at Bangalore to the 9th Lancers in Afghanistan, to fill recent casualties in the field in the latter corps."

15th Hussars. A correspondent writes:—"Last November the term of foreign service for the 15th Hussars, now quartered in India, having expired, the regiment received orders to prepare for embarkation, and consequently the officers disposed of their horses' furniture and equipage. The order to march was subsequently countermanded, and directions were given for the regiment to be held in readiness for embarkation by next April. Now, however, a further detention until next winter is ordered, thus prolonging the period of foreign service by one year. The cause assigned for this proceeding is that the King's Dragoon Guards are appointed to relieve the 15th Hussars, and it has been decided to keep the former regiment one year longer in South Africa. Now, from my own knowledge of Cape matters, and taking into consideration both the unsettled state of the country generally, as well as the threatening attitude of the Boers, I am decidedly of opinion that it may be necessary to retain a cavalry regiment in Natal for some years to come; and therefore I maintain that it would be much more desirable to relieve the 15th Hussars at once by some corps from England, than to prolong its stay in India by another year, thus creating a very tangible hardship for the regiment generally, and in particular, obliging the officers to repurchase the horses, outfit, &c., which they have just disposed of."

17th Lancers. Serjts. F. G. Style and H. Yeoman have been appointed assistant-instructors in signalling for the present year.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

A correspondent writes:—"Amongst the deaths which have recently occurred in Afghanistan, we notice that of Lieut. C. A. Montanaro, who died on Dec. 20 last from the effect of wounds received on the 19th before Cabul. This promising young officer was born on June 20, 1855, was educated at the Southampton College, from which he passed direct into the Royal Military Academy (at his first attempt), in Feb. 1872, and got his commission in August, 1874, having been in the same term with the ill-fated Prince Imperial. He proceeded to India with his battery in Jan. 1876, and served at Allahabad and Morar until the beginning of 1878, when he was appointed to No. 2 Deragat Mountain Battery (Major Swinley's), at Abbotabad. He was amongst the first to cross the frontier, and was in all the skirmishes in the Kurum and Khost Valleys with Gen. Sir F. Roberts's force. He was subsequently at the battle of Charasiab and at the taking of Cabul. He invented a rack for carrying intrenching tools on mules, which was adopted by No. 2 Mountain Battery throughout the campaign, and he also invented an improved fuze, a few of which were in course of manufacture at the Dum Dum factory at the time of his untimely death, is that the poor fellow did not live to see the result of the productions of his young brain.

Lieuts. D. C. Dean Pitt and W. A. Plant, aides-de-camp to the Governor of Bombay, have passed the higher standard in Hindostanee.

Capt. W. O. C. Shippard, 8th Brig., has been granted leave from India to England from Nov. 6 last to July 5 next.

Capt. W. A. Riall, 11th Brig., has been selected for the adjutancy of the Tipperary Artillery Militia.

A Baty. 3rd Brig. and No. 10 Baty. 8th Brig., which, under ordinary circumstances, would have returned to England from India this relief season, will, on account of the present position of military affairs in India, be retained, and be in excess of the establishment. The other batteries of Artillery ordered home, and for which reliefs have been sent out, will return as follows:—D and F Baty. 6th Brig. and Nos. 8 and 9 Batys. 8th Brig. in H.M.S. Jumna, which leaves Bombay on the 27th inst., and is timed to reach Portsmouth on Feb. 26; and No. 14 Baty. 8th Brig. in H.M.S. Euphrates, which leaves Bombay on the 31st inst., and will arrive early in March.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

A correspondent writes to us from Natal:—"The four companies of Royal Engineers who took part in the Zulu war have received orders as follow:—No. 2 Compy., commanded by Capt. D. C. Courtney, to remain in the Transvaal with Col. Harrison's force; No. 7 Compy., under the command of Capt. and Brevet Major F. W. Nixon, consisting of three officers and eighty non-commissioned officers and men, to return home; No. 5 Compy., in charge of Lieut. J. C. MacGregor, to return home; and No. 30 Compy., commanded by Capt. B. Blood, consisting of five officers and 170 non-commissioned officers and men, to proceed to Gibraltar. The C Troop, Royal Engineer Train, Major A. C. Hamilton in command, is under orders to return to England."

The correspondent of the Daily News at Alexandria telegraphed on Tuesday night:—"Col. Gordon has left for Naples by the French steamer to-day. Despite the flattering letter of the Khedive already mentioned, Col. Gordon complains of the conduct of the Egyptian Government towards him. He apparently requires mental and physical rest."

Major J. Birney has been granted leave from India to England for two years, on medical certificate.

Scots Guards. Lieut.-Col. the Hon. J. S. Roden, eldest surviving son of the third earl, late of the regiment, has succeeded to the title and estates of the earldom of Roden, by the death of his nephew, the fifth earl, on Saturday last.

6th Regiment. We (Times of India) regret to hear that much sickness prevails amongst the men of the 1st Batn. 6th Foot at Aden. The regiment only arrived at Aden on Nov. 20, having previously been stationed at Peshawur and Delhi, where the men suffered from fever. Six men died on the voyage from Bombay, and we hear that six deaths have occurred since the regiment landed at Aden. Capt. Lewis, 2nd Batn., is a candidate for the Pay Department.

16th Regiment. The Madras Mail says:—"The 2nd Batn. 16th Foot, at Secunderabad, and computed at 900 bayonets, is the regiment in Southern India best able to take the field immediately. But there is not much chance of its receiving marching orders, for there is cause for great precaution at Hyderabad, where events at Cabul are being watched with the keenest interest by crowds of Afghans and Arabs who would readily take advantage of any shortening of the arm that now keeps them in check."

18th Royal Irish. Lieut. Fox, 1st Batn., a probationer for the Indian Staff Corps, has passed the higher standard in Hindostanee.

19th Regiment. The paymastership of the 1st Batn. has been filled by the appointment of Major Webster, on that officer's transfer to the Pay Department from the 96th Regiment.

20th Regiment. Capt. Waudby, 2nd Batn., is about to retire from the Service, receiving the value of his commission. Brevet Major Briscoe, whose period of service as adjutant of the 5th A.B. Kent Rifle Volunteers has expired, has obtained two months' leave of absence.

21st Fusiliers. H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Most Worshipful Grand Master of English Freemasons, has appointed Lieut.-Col. Shadwell H. Clerke, half-pay, late of the regiment, Past Grand Deacon, to the vacant office of Grand Secretary.

22nd Regiment. It was rumoured, when the mail left India, that the 2nd Batn. was to leave Allahabad for the frontier.

23rd Fusiliers. Pymr. and Hon. Capt. Bampfield, Pay Department, has been appointed paymaster of the 1st Batn.

24th Regiment. The Queen decorated Pte. W. Jones 2nd Batn., at Osborne, on Tuesday, with the Victoria Cross, for his gallantry at the defence of Rorke's Drift, where he, as hospital-orderly, assisted in the removal of the sick from the hospital building whilst it was being forced by the enemy. Acting upon the suggestion of its Mayor, Brecon has decided to present a handsome watch and chain to Serjt. W. Allan, V.C., one of the heroes of Rorke's Drift, who was the means of keeping up communication with the hospital, and thus saving the patients. Serjt. Allan is now quartered at Brecon.

32nd Light Infantry. We learn from the Cape that "Capt. Cherry, 32nd Regt., is at present at Port Elizabeth, by order of the Government, recruiting for the Cape Mounted Rifles. This corps is now being reorganised, with a view to improving its tone and discipline."

33rd Regiment. The death is announced as having taken place in London, at the comparatively early age of 37, of Capt. E. S. Wason, adjt. of the 6th West York Militia. Capt. Wason, who was the youngest son of the late Rev. J. G. Wason, of Witchling, Kent, and Montagu Square, entered the Army by purchase in June, 1860, and served in the Abyssinian campaign in 1867-68 as adjt. of the regiment (medal). He became a lieut. in Feb. 1864, and capt. in Sept. 1869.

34th Regiment. The will, dated Nov. 22, 1854, of Lieut.-Gen. A. C. Goodenough, C.B., late of the regiment, who died on Nov. 29 last, was proved on the 15th ult. by H. P. Goodenough, the brother, the personal estate being sworn under £9,000. After payment of all his just debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, the testator leaves all his personal estate to his said brother.

37th Regiment. Capt. Nott has been appointed pymr. of the 109th Regt., on appointment to the Pay Department.

ROYAL MARINES.

Capt. Ramsay, R.M.L.I., will relieve Major Despard, R.M.L.I., in command of Marine detachment, Raleigh.

A good-conduct medal has been awarded Cprl. Solomon Payne.

50th Regiment. Lieut.-Col. J. B. Bonham, late of the regiment, died on Jan. 7, at St. Leonard's-on-Sea, aged 68. Col. Bonham was present with the regiment at the battle of Punniar. He served also in the Sutlej campaign of 1845-46, including the battles of Moodkee, Ferozeshah, Aliwal, and Sobraon (where he was dangerously wounded); in all these actions he commanded the Light Company, (medal with three clasps). He entered the Army in Oct. 1829, and retired in Feb. 1852.

57th Regiment. "An ex-Die Hard" writes to the Standard from Dublin:—"It is now nearly five months since peace was concluded between England and Zululand, and the gallant old regiment (the 57th) to which I formerly belonged are now comfortably settled down in the Royal Barracks. Since Dec. 26 last nearly four hundred men of the 57th (the 'Die Hard') have been sent back to their old corps, the 77th (D.C.O.) Regiment, and now the talk of both regiments is what batta is to be granted for loss of kit, hard lying, &c. I can assure you that since the day we left Ceylon for the Cape it has cost me four pounds on account of wear and tear of clothing, lost of kit, and equipment. On our return from the front to Durban, Natal, where our kits were left in store, we could obtain no satisfactory account of them, but were told they must have been lost or mislaid, and now, on rejoining our linked battalion, we have to make our losses good again out of our own hard earnings. I ask, is it acting fairly to treat us in this way after going through a dreary campaign? We were all naturally expecting a furlough to visit our relatives, but for the present we are doomed to disappointment, as a great many of us are now placed upon the paltry sum of one penny per diem in order to fit us out again for service at home. We cannot, of course, attach any blame to our officers, as they are bound to see that we are in possession of a serviceable kit. Should this met the eye of some one in authority, I hope he will represent our case to the Secretary of State for War, who, I trust, will kindly take our case into consideration, as the furlough season expires early in March, and there are upwards of two hundred men of my regiment alone anxiously waiting to go on leave, but who are unfortunately prevented for want of means."

62nd Regiment. The Bombay Gazette says:—"The troops at Morar have not escaped the fever which has been raging for some time in the Upper Provinces. In one company of the 62nd, barely 100 strong, only about one man in three was able to go through the musketry course, and of these about one-fourth was subject to fever. The death-rate has been about 78 per 1,000."

69th Regiment. Capt. Owen is a candidate for the Pay Department.

72nd Highlanders. The Globe says:—"Her Majesty, on the recommendation of Gen. Sir F. Roberts, is about to confer the Victoria Cross upon Pte. McMahon, 72nd Highlanders, in recognition of the conspicuous gallantry displayed by him in the recent operations before Cabul." A correspondent at Cabul writes to the Globe, Nov. 30:—"I have not been writing much lately because there has not been much doing. Everything is apparently quite quiet, and we are very busy getting ourselves housed before the very severe weather comes on; it is always worse here after Christmas, January and February being the coldest time of year, and the time of most snow. The weather is still fine; very cold at night, but bright and clear during the day; and our houses are nearly ready, though insufficiency of labour makes our progress slow, for instead of impressing the natives, and making them work, they are allowed to work just as much or little as suits their own sweet will. The only thing we are allowed to do is to pay them about double the wages they ever received before. After a delay of just a year a good many promotions and rewards have been given for last year's campaign, but the 72nd seems to have been forgotten, though we thought we had a good deal to say to the successful termination of the first part of the war. Our chief, Colonel Brownlow, has been made a C.B. That is all we have got as our share, though we were, as everyone knows and acknowledges, the backbone of the Kurum Force, which really was the fighting column, and whose success brought the whole thing to a satisfactory termination. We (the 72nd) bore the brunt of the fighting, and did everything in a way that has, at any rate, not lessened the reputation of the English Army. The 10th Hussars have been more fortunate. They were with the Khyber column, and no doubt did all they were asked to do. Their share of rewards and distinctions is a C.B. for the colonel, their major made a brevet lieutenant-colonel, and their captains brevet majors."

74th Highlanders. H.M.S. Orontes, with the head-quarters and seven companies on board, en route from Singapore, left Malta on Saturday last for England.

80th Regiment. A telegram dated Cape Town, January 9, states that "the 80th Regiment will remain for the present at Potchefstroom." We regret to hear that Major Creagh was taken very ill with fever on the march to Secocoeni's Town. He was in hospital at Lydenburg when our advices left Natal, seriously unwell.

92nd Highlanders. The special correspondent of the Pioneer, writing from Cabul on the 13th ult., gives the following particulars of the fighting on that day, in which the regiment so greatly distinguished itself:—"To-day, our troops have been fighting for several hours, and with little loss on our side. The enemy have been heavily punished. This morning their sixteen standards were seen flying on the hill south of the Bala Hissar, with crowds of men about them. Gen. Baker was ordered to attack from the Beni Shahr direction, up the spur of the hill leading to the peak from which Mahomed Jan rallied his supporters about him. Gen. Baker left camp at 8 o'clock, with the 92nd Highlanders, the Guides Infantry, a wing of the 3rd Sikhs, four guns G-3 R.A., and No. 2 Mountain Battery. The 5th Punjab Cavalry rode from Sherpur past the gates of the Bala Hissar, and Gen. Baker's force debouched into the Cabul plain, between the Bala Hissar and Beni Shahr hills. A small lake and a stretch of marshy ground were crossed over, and the spur of the hill was seen, covered with dense masses of the enemy. The guns shelled them briskly, and our infantry moved forward to the attack. Gen. Baker directed his strength about the middle of the enemy's line, so as to cut them into two parts. These tactics succeeded admirably. The enemy at first waited firmly for the attack, but the Highlanders, in splendid style, drove them from the hills. Lieut. Forbes, 92nd Highlanders, while trying to capture a standard, some distance to the front of his regiment, was shot. Colour-Serjt. Drummond, defending him, was cut down, and both were killed. The men defending the standards fought bravely hand-to-hand with the Highlanders. Having cut through the enemy's line, Gen. Baker left part of the 92nd Highlanders, 3rd Sikhs, four R.A. guns, and the whole of the cavalry below, to deal with the portion of the enemy nearest Beni Shahr, while he himself, with the rest of the brigade, worked his way towards the conical peak, thus taking the men upon it in flank."

94th Regiment. We learn from an account of the storming of Secocœni's stronghold, which has reached us from the Cape, that "the 94th advanced to within 300 yards of the principal stronghold (which was afterwards carried by assault), and for seven hours opened a steady and well sustained fire. Some companies of this regt., in exposed situations, fired upwards of 50 rounds per man, which was, considering the surroundings, far from being wild. Those who imagine that British troops have deteriorated in quality should have seen them exposed to the fire of a hidden enemy for upwards of seven hours, during the morning of the 28th of November. They were as steady and unconcerned as though on a home parade, and if our fighting material is never worse than the present, we have little grounds for alarm. Apropos, I may here remark that some of the men were thoroughly exhausted, for in some instances men were without sleep for three and even four nights, for picquets in the advanced guard formed a component part of the military system, as practised by Sir Garnet Wolseley."

95th Regiment has been ordered to be in readiness to move from the Curragh, but the date of its departure and its destination are not yet named. The Curragh correspondent of the Irish Times writes:—"Talking, or rather writing about departures, reminds me that the 95th Derbyshire Rams are under orders to leave the Curragh at a moment's notice. Their destination is unknown. Some say they move to Connemara, others to Chatham, but these are only conjectures. It is understood they will be relieved by the 80th Regt., which, if report speaks truly, has already embarked at Natal. In the event of the latter corps coming to the Curragh, they will join their own depot, attached to the 38th Regt. The 'Rams' will be much regretted in camp, as they have ever been remarkable for their dancing and theatrical proclivities."

96th Regiment. Brevet Major Webster has been appointed paymaster of the 1st Batn. 19th Regt., on entering the Pay Department.

99th Regiment. A telegram to the Times, dated Cape Town, Jan. 9, announces the departure of H.M.S. Himalaya with the 99th Regt. for Bermuda.

104th Fusiliers. F company, under command of Capt. Alcock, has been removed to Carrickfergus, to relieve the detachment under Lieut. Butler-Kearney. Capt. Alcock is a candidate for the Pay Department.

105th Light Infantry. Capt. Ferrier is a candidate for the Pay Department, and has been posted to the pay office of the 63rd Sub-District for three months' probationary duty. Capt. Ferrier will, it is expected, be posted to the 105th, on his being gazetted to the Pay Department. Capt. Cooper is also a candidate for the Pay Department.

109th Regiment. The paymastership has been filled by Capt. Nott, from the 37th Regt., who has been gazetted to the Pay Department.

Rifle Brigade. Capt. Boyle, 1st Batn., has been approved acting brigade-major of the 3rd Infantry Brig. at Aldershot.

1st West India Regiment. Lieut. Yate, a probationer for the India S.C., has passed the higher standard in Hindostanee.

2nd West India Regiment. "One of the Six" writes:—"In the Army and Navy Gazette, of the 29th November, referring to the 2nd West India Regiment, it is stated that six or seven officers are seeking an exchange, four are probationers for the Indian Staff Corps, six more are trying to follow in their footsteps, and that 'something more than climate seems to make service in this regiment unpopular at present.' As one of the regiment, perhaps you will permit me to correct a misapprehension in this statement, which is as correct regarding its facts as the inference you seek to deduce from them is undoubtedly erroneous. Several officers are certainly seeking an exchange, several are probationers for the Indian Staff Corps, and six more are trying to follow in their footsteps; but it cannot be a matter for surprise that after three years' service on the West Coast of Africa there should be found some officers desirous of effecting an exchange, and the better climate, higher pay, and wider field offered by service in India are quite sufficient to account for so many of the junior officers being anxious to enter it, without having recourse for explanations to that mysterious and indefinite 'something more than climate,' which, whatever else it may be intended to convey, cannot mean that the 2nd West India Regiment has been other than most fortunate in its officers, or that anything but a strong spirit of camaraderie and good-will exists among them, a fact which all who know the regiment must admit, and which no one can recognise more fully than your correspondent."

Commissariat and Transport Department. The Standard says that "Comy.-Gen. Sir Edward Strickland, K.C.B., lately employed in commissariat charge of the Zulu expedition, is to succeed Comy.-Gen. J. Scott Robertson, C.B., at the head of the Commissariat Department in Ireland, on that officer's retirement, on the early reorganisation of the Commissariat and Transport Department." A military correspondent, writing from Natal, says:—"Deputy-Comy. W. A. Dunn, of Rorke's Drift fame, has left the colony for home. I have seldom seen a finer-looking soldier, and it certainly seems very odd that he should have been overlooked, considering that his zeal and promptitude contributed so much towards the successful defence of that ever-memorable post. I should not be surprised if the Victoria Cross was awarded in recognition of his heroic conduct, when face-to-face against such fearful odds. It may not be generally known that the plan devised for the defence,—i.e., biscuit-boxes and mealie-bags piled breast-high, so as to form a barricade, originated from Mr. Dunn; and it was not until he was stricken down by the bullets of the enemy that he left his post, and when carried away in an apparently hopeless condition, his only thought was for the safety of others."

Ordnance Store Department. Deputy-Comy.-Gen. W. L. Penno is about to retire. Deputy-Comy.-Gen. W. C. Nagle succeeds to the charge in Ireland.

Medical Department. Surg.-Gen. C. A. Gordon, M.D., C.B., was due at Southampton yesterday in the steamer Pekin, on vacating his appointment as P.M.O. of the Madras Army. The correspondent of the Times telegraphs from Cabul on the 10th inst.:—"A great public loss was sustained by the death yesterday of the principal medical officer with this force, Surg.-Major J. H. Porter, one of numerous recent victims, European and native, of pneumonia. His services have been of the greatest value, both in this and the last campaign." Dr. Porter entered the Service in 1853, and served with the 97th Regt. at the siege of Sebastopol from Nov. 20, 1854, and in India during the suppression of the Indian mutiny, taking part in the actions of Nusrutpore, Chanda, Ummeerpore, and Sultanpore, siege and storming of Lucknow, storming of the Kaiser Bagh, the operations in Bundlecund in 1859, and surprise and night attack at the Kala Nuddy. He also served with the British ambulance during part of the Franco-German war in 1870, and was at the siege of Paris. His services had been rewarded with the 5th class of the Medjidie, Crimean and Indian medals with clasps, Turkish medal, and German war medal. Dr. Porter had been employed in recent years on the medical staff at Netley Hospital, and only went out to India last year. He had taken part in the advance on and capture of Cabul and action at Charasiab, and was markedly mentioned in official despatches. The London correspondent of the Irish Times writes:—"You are, of course, aware that Surg.-Major J. H. Porter, whose death is reported from Afghanistan, was the son of the late Mr. Joshua Porter, formerly high sheriff of Dublin. Dr. Porter was one of the most distinguished members of the Army Medical Service, his scientific reputation reaching far within the sphere of general practice. I fear his death must be set down in no small degree, not only to the hardships and exposure inevitable in a winter campaign, but in a particular manner to the extreme demands upon his physical endurance, resulting from the shorthanded condition of the Medical Department in Afghanistan. Dr. Porter was attacked with illness immediately upon his arrival in the country, but he insisted on remaining at duty, and stuck to his post till his strength gave way, and he had to take to his bed for the last time. This eminent gentleman makes the seventh member of his profession who has lost his life in the Afghan war. The mortality among combatant officers has been noted, and with reason, as very great; but it is not to be compared with the proportion of fatalities among the doctors, who are beyond question entitled to the place of honour by their losses, if not by their superior devotion."

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

6th West York. The adjutancy is vacant by the death of Capt. E. S. Wason, 33rd Foot. Capt. Wason had held the appointment since Oct. 1875.

Roscommon. Qrmr. J. Bond died at head-quarters, Boyle, on the 9th inst. The deceased was appointed quartermaster, Sept. 8, 1869.

Tipperary Artillery. Capt. Riall, R.A., has been selected for the adjutancy.

The following letter from a distinguished officer of the Indian Native Army, addressed to the Homeward Mail, is deserving of the consideration of the authorities. If the regimental system of the Indian Army is to be perfected, it must be by maintaining an adequate complement of European officers with each regiment in India:—"Sir,—A short time ago the Indian Government applied for eighty subalterns for enrolment in the Native Army. Has this requisition been complied with? and if so, can you inform me from whence the young officers have been obtained? I presume from Sandhurst, as on previous occasions; but why not permit subalterns of Militia corps to share in such appointments? There are in these regiments many active, intelligent young fellows who have passed, or are about to pass, their qualifying examinations before the Civil Commissioners, and who have also gone through two or more trainings and passed their examinations as lieutenants. Why not, therefore, beat up for volunteers from amongst them? There must be many who would gladly accept such service, more especially from amongst the sons and near relations of Indian civil and military officers who are now serving with Militia corps. Those, I should say, are just the stamp of men required, for, the majority of them having been born in India, they will have much less difficulty in acquiring a knowledge of the native languages than those who go to India for the first time, as having spoken the lingo when quite young, the colloquial knowledge quickly returns to them. It is now generally allowed that even in peace time the number of European officers with native regiments is absurdly small, how much more ridiculous is it to expect that in war time the few officers that are now serving with those regiments can suffice for all the multifarious duties required of them? The present war in Afghanistan has made that sufficiently plain to those in authority; and, therefore, we must look to another and much larger demand for subalterns from the Indian Government, and no better field could be had recourse to than to that of the subalterns belonging to the various Militia corps in the United Kingdom."

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Volunteer returns for the past year show that the enrolled strength of that force has risen from 203,213 in 1878 to 206,250, and the efficients from 194,191 to 197,485, or a per-centage of 95·74 against 95·55. The proficients, officers and serjeants, likewise increased to the highest figure yet known, being 5,586 and 11,825 respectively, or a total of 17,411, whereas in 1878 they were 5,536 and 11,518. The increase is general throughout the country and in all arms, with the exception of light horse and mounted rifles, which show a diminution.

The Indian Army.

13th Bengal N.I. Surg.-Major L. F. Dickson, M.D., has been granted leave from India to England for one year, 182 days, on medical certificate.

44th Bengal N.I. The Brigadier-General commanding the Eastern Frontier Division has issued an order, most heartily congratulating the troops under his command on the capture of Konoma, on Dec. 22:—"All the troops engaged did their duty to their utmost, and Brigdr.-Gen. Watson offers them all his most sincere thanks for their exertions on that day. He feels convinced that no body of men could have behaved better, or have carried out his orders more efficiently. But the Brigadier-General commanding especially wishes to place on record his high sense of the bravery and devotion displayed by Col. Nuttall, C.B., and the officers and men of the 44th N.I. The task allotted to them was to storm a series of almost impregnable positions, consisting of stone forts protected by entanglements and obstacles of all kinds, every approach of which was commanded by the heavy fire of the enemy. Lieuts. Ridgeway and Forbes both fell, seriously wounded, whilst gallantly leading the stormers. The Subadar-Major, Nurbeer Sai, was killed at the same time, and Col. Nuttall himself was wounded. Forty-three men of the regiment fell dead or wounded. The regiment simply covered itself with glory, and have added one more to their already long list of gallant feats of arms. The Brigadier-General on this occasion can but give them his thanks, but he need hardly say that he will not fail to represent their valour in the strongest terms to the Commander-in-Chief and to the Government of India. The detachment of Royal Artillery and the party of the 44th N.I. attached to the guns rendered the greatest assistance during the assault, serving them (their guns) with the utmost coolness under a heavy fire from the enemy. Major Evans and the detachment of Assam Light Infantry and Frontier Police under the command of Capt. Williamson, Inspector-Gen. of Police, executed with precision the duty assigned to them of cutting off the retreat of the enemy, and capturing a Samgah in the rear of the position. The medical staff, headed by Deputy-Surg.-Gen. A. C. C. De-Renzy, performed their most trying duty under heavy fire in the most cool and courageous manner. The Brigadier-General only regrets that the brilliant success of the day was so heavily purchased. In Major Cock, deputy-assist.-adjt.-gen., the force has lost a most gallant officer. He fell mortally wounded when charging in the final assault on one of the enemy's strongest positions."

Reviews.

The History of the Honourable Artillery Company. By Captain G. A. Raikes, 3rd West York Light Infantry Militia, Instructor of Musketry Hon. Artillery Company. In two vols. Vol. II. (Richard Bentley and Son, New Burlington Street. 1879.)—This volume, which has for a frontispiece an admirable coloured portrait of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, and is altogether handsomely illustrated and very well got-up, quite fulfils the promise of the first volume. The Hon. Artillery Company is, in the fullest sense of the word, a Volunteer corps, for it receives no aid whatever from the State. It consists of a troop of light cavalry, a battery of field artillery, and a battalion of six companies of infantry. The company is a curious combination of a club and a military body, no one being admitted unless proposed by five members, on which he is balloted for by the court of assistants. The entrance-fee is £5, and the annual subscription is £2 2s. In addition, each member provides his own uniform, the cost of which is,—for the cavalry, £29; for the artillery, £14; and for the infantry, £13. Our limits of space will not admit of our analysing the contents of the volume before us; but we feel justified in saying that it will be read with interest by all who care to trace the military history of this country.

Gedenkblätter aus der Kriegsgeschichte der K. K. Oesterreichischen Armee. By A. Graf Thürheim. (Teschen: Karl Prochaska.)—The Gedenkblätter contains a history of the whole Austrian Army, including the most important epochs of its activity since its establishment as a standing army, and of the regiments at present existing, down to the last engagements in the Bosnian campaign. It comprises also a summary of the honours won, and finally, a chronological list of the higher grades of officers since 1527, with their services, decorations, &c. The contents of the Gedenkblätter is arranged according to the different arms, next by regiments and battalions, the history of each of which is added. By the arrangement of the text, it has been possible to collect the rich material in its completeness in a handbook not out of proportion to its contents. The work, which, by the way, took the author twenty years to compile, has no rival in the literature of the Austrian Army. Its great importance, therefore, to those who desire to become acquainted with the history of that army is undoubted, as well as the certainty that it will find a large circle of readers.

Catechism of Squad Drill, including Definitions, &c. Compiled by H. Gloster Armstrong. (Dublin: Ponsonby.)—Squad drill may be considered the basis and A B C of tactics. It cannot, therefore, be too thoroughly mastered. The little book before us is intended for the use of subalterns of Militia, but ought to be read by both non-commissioned officers and subalterns of Infantry in all branches of the land Forces. Blank pages being interleaved, the student can make additional notes, useful for subsequent reference, or for the drawing of explanatory diagrams.

The Words of Command used in Company Drill. Compiled by H. Gloster Armstrong. (Dublin: E. Ponsonby.)—The compiler hopes that this unpretending little work, which is so small that it could be carried in the waistcoat pocket, will be of use to subalterns of Militia; and we are of opinion that his anticipations are well founded. There is no pretence at originality on Mr. Armstrong's part. He has simply collected the words of command required for the performance of different company movements, and given them in a concise and tabulated form. His merit is that the arrangement is simple, and that he has provided his brother subalterns with a handy memorandum, which will serve to refresh the memory.

Among the Boers. By John Nixon. (Remington and Co.)—This book, which makes its appearance at a very opportune time, is intended by the author for two classes of readers,—first, for the general reader; and secondly, and incidentally, for persons in search of a climate suitable for threatened or actual pulmonary disease. It in some degree assumes the character of a medical work, as it contains a special chapter for the benefit of invalids, which has been perused and approved by a high medical authority, Dr. Theodore Williams. Other readers, who can afford to laugh at pulmonary attacks, will find plenty to amuse them, although in some instances the book appears to have been hastily set together.

The will (dated Feb. 25, 1876) of Admiral the Hon. Keith Stewart, C.B., late of No. 1 St. Michael's Terrace, Stoke Damerel, Devonport, who died on Sept. 15 last, was proved on the 18th ult., by the Hon. Mrs. Mary Caroline Stewart, the widow, and Lord Alfred Spencer Churchill and the Hon. Cecil Duncombe, the nephews, the executors, the personal estate being sworn under £16,000.

The first of a course of five lectures on the "Buoyancy and Stability of Ships" was delivered last week at the Royal Naval College, Greenwich, by Mr. W. H. White, Assistant-Constructor of the Navy. As in previous years, officers not studying at the College are permitted to attend these and the other special courses of lectures authorised by the Admiralty. The remaining lectures of the course are to be delivered on successive Wednesdays at noon.

TIC-SANO.

TIC-SANO is the cure for RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT, SCIATICA, GRAVEL, LUMBAGO, SICK and NERVOUS HEADACHE, as proved by numerous unsolicited testimonials.

TIC-SANO is a vegetable remedy; can be taken by both young and old, and by persons of the most delicate constitution without change of diet.

TIC-SANO is the ORIGINAL SPECIFIC for the above complaints; it has been tried and approved of by the Medical Profession, and has been spoken favourably of by the Public Press.

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879:—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

THE "CARMICHAEL"
PORTABLE BOOT-TREE.

A want long felt has just been supplied by this most important invention. All sportsmen and military men know the great advantage of having both their long and short boots treed up every day, especially after they have been wet, but there is often great inconvenience in carrying about the boot-trees.

An officer in the 5th Lancers has lately hit upon the idea that an India-rubber tree, which, with ease, can be carried in the pocket, can, when put inside the boot, be inflated, filling out the boot tightly, and so making it an impossibility to shrink.

For officers on active service, autumn manœuvres, or whenever it is impossible to carry wooden trees, this invention will be invaluable.

This invention is patented for Great Britain and other countries.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 17, 1880.

OUR troops in Afghanistan seem likely to have their hands full, even during the remainder of the winter. The Mohmunds, a powerful and warlike tribe, on the 11th inst. made a vigorous attempt to sever our communications. Crossing the Cabul River, they occupied a ruined fort near Ali Boghan, and attacked that post. Though, however, they numbered 5,000 men, they were repulsed. Being followed up, they recrossed the river, and a few shells dispersed them. Another party taking post on an island in mid-stream, our guns soon forced them to retreat. They suffered heavy loss in the different affairs, but are, nevertheless, reported to be assembled in large numbers near Lanjar Khel. Our loss was slight, being one killed and seven wounded. All is, for the present, quiet at Cabul, but Mahommed Jan still maintains a menacing attitude at Ghuznee, and the Kohistanis are restless. Any day may, therefore, witness the renewal of active operations by Sir Frederick Roberts. As to any progress being made in restoring strength, independence, and friendliness to the Afghans, we fail to see it. Indeed, we fear that the Government will never be able to carry out their schemes, and that we shall be obliged either to evacuate or to annex the country. The wholesale burning of villages may be an evidence of vigour, but it does not savour of sound policy, and, as we happen to know, is condemned by officers of high rank on the spot. After all, the villagers are not the people whose hostility has brought about a renewal of the war, neither are the men hanged at Cabul the most guilty, for they merely acted on the orders of their chiefs or the principal Sirdars. This off-hand way of burning and hanging cannot but embitter the mass of the population, who after a time would have become reconciled to our presence. As it is, we can scarcely have a real friend left in the country. The execution of a few Sirdars and Ministers would have been recognised as only reasonable retribution, and would have excited no universal thirst for revenge. To return to military operations, we glean from an admirable letter in the Morning Advertiser of yesterday some interesting particulars concerning the first twelve days of December. We are glad to find that the Intelligence Department in Afghanistan, though, at first, appearances were against it, has not been wanting. On the contrary, it seems to have kept Sir Frederick Roberts well informed of what was going on previous to the recent outbreak. The cavalry have also shown themselves well skilled in reconnaissance duties. While Sir Frederick was acquainted with all that was going on among the enemy, he succeeded, by the aid of General Hills, who can write Pushtoo to perfection, in completely deceiving his antagonists. Accidentally, a messenger in one of the brigade offices was detected and caught in the attempt to convey to Mahommed an abstract of our troops, guns, supplies, and plans. In ten minutes, General Hills copied this document, altering the figures and intended movements, diminishing our numbers, and giving, generally, information calculated to mislead. Measures were taken to cause this paper to fall into the hands of Mahommed Jan, and the result was to embolden the Afghan leader to advance. Still further to deceive him, a grand parade was held, ostensibly to confer medals and decorations on certain soldiers, and the turn-out was made as weak as possible, large numbers of men being kept out of sight in cantonments. Two hours after the troops were dismissed, Macpherson was sent off with a brigade, with orders to try and force Mahommed Jan towards the Bamian valley; while Baker, with another brigade, was misleading him as to his route, to cut off his retreat on Ghuznee. The plan succeeded so far that Mahommed Jan was, to use the expression of the Morning Advertiser's Correspondent, "jammed in between Baker and Macpherson." Unfortunately, in the night large reinforcements reached the Afghan leader, and enabled him to attack us, with about 11,500 men. Unfortunately, Massy, with 4 guns and 230 Europeans and Bengal Lancers, while acting as one of the stops, was assailed by the whole of the Afghan army, which was handled in a manner to do credit to any General. 5,000 men in skirmishing order were pushed forward in the form of a crescent, while in support were 6,500 men, distributed in columns. Our guns were powerless to check the steady onslaught, and even at 1,200 yards bullets dropped in our ranks, showing what the arms of the enemy were. At this moment Sir Frederick Roberts galloped up, and called out, "We shall lose those guns, Massy. Let's try them with the cold steel. Take two squadrons away to the right, where the ground is not so cut up, change position to the left, and charge them in flank." Gallantly did Massy carry out the order, and nobly did he and his handful of horsemen offer themselves as a sacrifice for the guns. The ground, however, was impracticable. Ridges, furrows, drains, watercourses, small stone walls, and boulders broke our men's order, and horses fell in every direction. The enemy's fire was also very destructive, and the Afghans, though pierced, stood firm. Guns and limbers, in the attempt to retire, were overthrown, or imbedded in the deep ground, and many of the horses were killed. There was no choice, therefore, but to spike and temporarily abandon the guns. Soon, however, Macpherson arrived with his infantry, and while he held the enemy in check, Colonel Macgregor, coming up with a reserve of cavalry, brought off the guns with lassos. Mahommed Jan then tried a flank movement, with a view of passing through the city, gathering as he went the malcontents among the inhabitants, and surprising the cantonments. As we know, however, he was turned by the deadly fire of 200 of the 72nd Highlanders, hastily ordered up by General Roberts. It is thus evident that not a particle of blame is due to General Massy for the partial disaster which befell the weak force of cavalry under his command, but that he merely obeyed the orders of General Roberts; and as, when a boy, he earned the title of "the hero of the Redan," he now has established a claim to be considered the hero of a second Balaklava. The 5th Lancers may well be proud of their former colonel.

We regret to have to announce that the long-expected Warrant for the reorganisation of the Commissariat and Transport Department, though signed by her Majesty, has at the last moment been shelved, Colonel Stanley having telegraphed instructions to the Surveyor-General of Ordnance on Saturday last to stop its issue. The cause of the delay in the promulgation of the Warrant must be attributed to one of two causes:—Either Colonel Stanley, having promised faithfully from his seat in Parliament that the Warrants for the Commissariat and Ordnance Store Departments should appear simultaneously, fears to incur the responsibility of publishing the one, before the other has even been thought of; or else he sees the danger which would unquestionably be involved by the introduction into the Service of two distinct sets of Commissariat officers, both performing the same duties. Be the reason for the decision what it may, the effect upon the Commissariat Department cannot fail to prove most damaging, and to render the unfortunate members more than ever convinced of the false step they took, when they allowed themselves to be enrolled in an Administrative Service of her Majesty's Army.

Major-General H. D'O. Torrens, C.B., has been selected to succeed Brigadier-General Sir H. E. Wood, V.C., K.C.B., in command of the Belfast District. General Torrens served in the Eastern campaign as aide-de-camp to Brigadier-General Torrens, including the battle of Inkerman—mentioned in despatches (wounded, and horse shot under him)—and siege of Sebastopol; was appointed D.A.Q.M.G. at head-quarters in February, 1855, and served in that capacity until the end of the war, having been present at both attacks on the Redan (medal with four clasps, Brevet of Major, Knight of the Legion of Honour, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). Served in the Indian campaign of 1857-58, including the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde; selected for the command of the relieving army during its march from Lucknow to Cawnpore, after the relief of the Lucknow garrison; defeat of the Gwalior Contingent at Cawnpore, December 6, 1857; operations across the Goomtee, siege and capture of Lucknow; was Assistant-Adjutant-General of her Majesty's forces at head-quarters, during the operations by Lord Clyde against the rebels in Oude in 1858-59, and was present at all the engagements of that campaign (medal with clasp and brevet of lieutenant-colonel). He entered the Army, September 13, 1849; and became Major-General, October 1, 1877.

The Cape Government has offered the command of the new wing to be raised for the Cape Mounted Riflemen to Captain and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel F. Carrington, 24th Regiment, whose services throughout three campaigns in South Africa, have proved unmistakably his thorough fitness for the duties of the appointment.

People are asking themselves what Major-General Hamley, C.B., has done for the Colonies that the the Colonial Office should have singled him out to receive knighthood in the Order of St. Michael and St. George—a Colonial Order. The Gazette announcement informs us that General Hamley was "lately her Majesty's Commissioner for the delimitation of Bulgaria." Now, whilst employed as Commissioner, General Hamley was surely in Foreign Office employ, and therefore was entitled to promotion in the Order of the Bath on account of his services. His appointment as a Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George smatters very much of the ridiculous, and renders it more than ever difficult for any person of ordinary intellect to comprehend the rules which govern the distribution of honours now-a-days.

Brevet Colonel W. Stirling, C.B., Royal Artillery, who has lately returned to England from active service in Afghanistan, succeeds Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. King, R.A., as assistant-adjutant and quartermaster-general of the Woolwich District. A more popular appointment than this could not have been made.

It may be remembered that a number of officers who accompanied the Plenipotentiaries to Berlin, on the occasion of the drawing-up of the Treaty of Berlin, received Companionships of the Bath and brevet promotion for their services. Yet the heads of two most important departments of the Army, who have recently conducted the affairs of their respective services in a most able manner during a trying campaign, are allowed by the War Office to pass unnoticed. We cannot believe for a moment that an officer of Lord Chelmsford's known uprightness of dealing will allow such a gross injustice to be perpetrated with his sanction.

"An Anxious Inquirer" asks us to explain how it is that "Colonel C. J. East, half-pay, late 57th Regiment, should have received promotion to the rank of colonel in the Army for his services in Zululand over the heads of 840 senior officers, when, as the Army List shows, he had only held the rank of lieutenant-colonel for the period of six months." Colonel East is so exceptionally good and valuable an officer that he well merits any favours of which he may be made the recipient. At the same time, there is no disguising the fact that throughout the Service there is a strong feeling existing that the Horse Guards has been guilty of cruel injustice in allowing him to be elevated over the heads of such officers as Lieutenant-Colonels Pemberton, 60th Rifles; Welman, 99th Regiment; Ely, 99th Regiment; Lambert, 88th Regiment; Degacher, 24th Regiment; Malthus, 94th Regiment; Murray, 94th Regiment; Gilbert, 13th Regiment; Clarke, 57th Regiment; Hopton, 88th Regiment; Cherry, 90th Regiment; Owen, 88th Regiment, and Black, 24th Regiment, all his seniors as lieutenant-colonels, and all of whom served in one or another capacity during the Zulu campaign.

We understand that Private George Dodd, Transport Branch, Army Service Corps, has been awarded by Lord Beaconsfield a grant of £50 from the Royal Bounty, in recognition of the gallantry displayed by him in saving the life of a child from under the wheels of a tram-car, near Portobello Bridge, Dublin, in Auugst last.

Commissary E. W. H. Webb, C.B., has left Aldershot on leave pending retirement.

In the same Gazette that General Hamley's name appears we find a notification that Lieutenant H. C. Chermside, R.E., late military attaché at Constantinople, and Assistant-Commissioner for the delimitation of Bulgaria, and now her Majesty's Vice-Consul at Aidin, has been created a Companion of the said Order of St. Michael and St. George. Considering that such men as Lord Chelmsford, Sir Evelyn Wood, Sir Edward Strickland, General Newdigate, Colonels Glyn, Rowlands, and Collingwood, Deputy-Commissary-General Palmer, Assistant-Commissary-General Wright, and Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon Gudgin, who have all of them—not to mention many others—performed lately most valuable service in connection with the British Colonial possessions at the Cape, should have been allowed by the Colonial Office to pass entirely unrecognised, it is nothing short of a public scandal that a young subaltern of Engineers should be selected to receive the honour thus conferred upon Lieutenant Chermside. The services Lieutenant Chermside has performed doubtless have been valuable, but we ask,—Can his claims be held, on any pretext whatever, to be as great as those of the officers we have named? If decorations continue to be given in this haphazard manner, we shall soon find that men of sense will make a point of refusing them, for they are fast beginning to lose their value, and the treatment of some few of the officers lately serving in Zululand has done much to lower decorations generally in the eyes not of the Army only, but of the public as well.

Captain C. E. Le M. Cherry, 32nd Light Infantry, who has been for some time at the Cape on special service, will, we understand, be asked to accept a permanent appointment in connection with the colonial forces.

Captain St. J. S. Taylor, 11th Hussars, has been appointed aide-de-camp to Major-General C. C. Fraser, V.C., C.B., commanding the cavalry in Ireland.

The removal of the name of Colonel the Hon. F. A. Wellesley, Coldstream Guards, from the list of Queen's aides-de-camp will create no vacancy, Colonel Wellesley having been appointed as a supernumerary, and not in succession to an officer on the establishment.

The Empress of the French has intimated to the Union Steamship Company her intention to embark in their Royal Mail steamer German in March next, for conveyance to Natal, en route to Zululand, for the purpose of visiting the spot where her son, the late lamented Prince Imperial, lost his life. The Empress will be accompanied by several ladies and gentlemen, and a small retinue of servants. The German will leave England with the Cape of Good Hope mails on March 26, and her great speed should ensure her reaching Natal in ample time to allow the Empress to arrive at her destination by June 1, the anniversary of her son's death. To accomplish this, the German, after calling at Cape Town in the performance of her mail duties, will proceed direct to Natal before carrying out her engagements at intermediate ports. Although special arrangements will be made by the Union Steamship Company in regard to accommodation, it is understood to be her Majesty's wish that no state or ceremony should be observed.

A correspondent writes to complain that, though the senior officers who were besieged in Ekowe have been rewarded, there has been no acknowledgment of the services or compensation for the sufferings of the junior officers and the men who constituted the garrison. Our correspondent evidently thinks that as the troops in Ekowe underwent a blockade lasting nearly as long as the beleaguerment of the garrison of the Lucknow Residency, similar treatment should be meted out to them. In our opinion the cases are not parallel, and we consider that no special reward is called for. There has been, as it is, too much tendency to reward some of those who took part in the Zulu campaign, as if they had fought in an arduous, long, and bloody war, like the Crimean or the Indian Mutiny. Our South African warriors do not claim to have done more than their duty, and a medal will, we think, be a sufficient acknowledgment of their achievements.

ALBERTA, Staff Capt. Balliston. The following letter appeared in the Daily News of Jan. 13:—"Sir,—I went this morning from Ryde to Southsea by the steampacket Princess of Wales. About three-parts of the way across we noticed her Majesty's ship Alberta coming up from Osborne to Portsmouth with, as I afterwards learnt, his Royal Highness Prince Leopold on board. She was on our port side, —i.e., between us and the Hampshire coast. It was high tide, and as she gained on us she was about to overtake and pass us, when she altered her course, crossed our path astern of us, and came up rapidly on our starboard or southern side. For a minute or so we both held the same course, but drawing away from us and not 20 yards off, to our surprise she starboarded her helm and endeavoured to cross our bows. Had our captain continued in the perfectly straight course he had all along been steering, a collision would have been inevitable, but putting his helm hard a-starboard also, the packet just escaped running her bowsprit into the stern cabin. Now, remembering that the Alberta was the same vessel that ran down the Mistletoe a few years back, I think it deserves to be widely known that she is still ready to go out of her proper course, and circle round a poor Isle of Wight packet, to show, I suppose, her superior speed. 'If you had done such a thing as that, captain,' I said, 'you would have lost your certificate, had a collision occurred.' 'And deservedly, sir,' was his answer. I enclose my card.—Yours truly, M.A.—Ventnor, Jan. 9." "M.A.," of Ventnor, before writing to the Daily News and publicly exposing his ignorance, should have ascertained what is "the rule of the road" for steamers "overtaking and passing each other" in pilotage waters. He would then have learnt that the Alberta was in the right in leaving the Ryde packet on her port hand, and in afterwards starboarding across that packet's bows to enter the harbour.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Robert O'B. FitzRoy, flagship of Admiral Sir Geoffrey T. P. Hornby, K.C.B., was at Malta on Jan. 13, having defects made good by the dockyard authorities.

BACCHANTE, Capt. Lord Charles Scott, arrived at Trinidad on the 7th inst., and will sail on the 20th.

BELLEROPHON, Capt. D'Arcy-Irvine, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir E. A. Inglefield, was to leave Bermuda for Spithead on Jan. 12.

BITTERN, Com. Edward B. Pusey, has left Larnaca on her way to relieve the Condor, and assume the duties of senior officer on the coast of Syria.

BOADICEA, Comdre. Richards, was at St. Helena on Dec. 29, having arrived on Dec. 28, and found the Industry; the two ships would leave on Jan. 3 for Ascension, where the Commodore expected to meet the Firebrand.

COCKATRICE, Com. Harry T. Grenfell, arrived at Malta on Jan. 6 from the Danube.

COLOSSUS. The rapid progress made in the construction of the double-turret, armour-clad ship Colossus, at Portsmouth, during the past year speaks well for the efficiency of that dockyard. The keel was laid on June 5 last year, and at the present time it is computed that 570 tons have been placed upon the blocks. The work will now, however, go on with less despatch, as the men engaged in preparing the plates and frames in the workshops have been taken from task work, and overtime has been forbidden; and as, under the new conditions, the hands employed upon the ship itself cannot be supplied with the necessary amount of prepared material to work into the hull, the number has been reduced.

CROCODILE, Capt. F. Proby Doughty, left Malta with the 2nd Batn. 5th Regt., for Bombay, on Jan. 13.

DIDO, Capt. Domvile, was at Fernando Po on Dec. 5, and after arrival of the mail of Dec. 6, she would leave for Loando and St. Helena.

DRUID, Capt. W. R. Kennedy, returned to Bermuda on Dec. 13, and was making good defects.

DRYAD, Com. J. Hext, was inspected in Plymouth Sound on Wednesday by Capt. W. B. Grant, and has received her orders for the East Indies.

DWARF, Com. W. St. Clair, was ordered to St. Helena on Dec 5, but was detained at Quettah by request of the Governor.

EUPHRATES, Capt. Brownrigg. Lloyd's agent at Aden reports, under date Jan. 14, that the Euphrates, from Portsmouth for Bombay, had arrived there.

FIREFLY, Lieut.-Com. Hughes-Hallett, was at Sierra Leone on Dec. 5; ordered to Cape Coast Castle.

FLAMINGO, Com. W. H. Hall, left Port Royal for Key West on Dec. 19, and would probably return by Jan. 2.

FOXHOUND, Lieut.-Com. W. H. Nowell, left Hong Kong for Singapore on Nov. 29. She took with her supernumaries for the Fly.

GANNET, Com. E. G. Bourke, was at Arica on Dec. 11, where she remains.

HECLA, Capt. Morgan Singer, remains at Spithead, and it is uncertain whether she will return into harbour, or proceed to join the Channel Squadron on a further experimental cruise.

HORNET, Com. J. S. Eaton, left Nagasaki, on Nov. 17 on a week's cruise.

HUMBER, Com. John L. Way, having brought home a large quantity of old gunpowder from the Mediterranean station, has landed the same at Purfleet, and after discharging various warlike stores at Woolwich, proceeded to Sheerness to disembark some naval stores, and after undergoing repairs to her machinery, will return to Woolwich and embark fresh ammunition for Gibraltar. The Humber and the Tyne, which are both employed on similar service, were both purchased out of the "vote of credit."

INFLEXIBLE. The turret armour of the Inflexible was subjected to the final test on Tuesday last, on board the Nettle, under the superintendence of Capt. Herbert, of the Excellent. As has been previously stated, the inner armour consists of 7-in. iron plates, and the outer of 9 in. compound armour, having a hard steel face 3½ in. thick welded, upon iron plating 4½ in. thick. The test piece, which was fired on Tuesday, was the fragment which had been cut out of one of the forward plates to form a gun-port. It measured 4 ft. by 2 ft. 6 in., and it was fired at by the 9-inch gun, "with a projectile weighing 250 lb. and a charge of 50 lb.," similar to the charges used in the recent naval combat in the Pacific; but, as it is clear that the target, even supposing the hit to have been fairly in the centre, could only allow of 10½ in. of clear space on each side of the shot, it is not easy to perceive what advantage was to be derived from an experiment conducted under such abnormal conditions as these; the more especially as, in consequence of the limited dimensions of the test piece, it was only found possible to enclose the target within an elastic timber framing. Only one shot was fired. The impact had a diameter of 14 in., with a penetration of 2½ in., the projectile being broken entirely up. Instead of such an insignificant test being applied, we should have preferred to hear that a 25-ton gun had been used.

INVINCIBLE, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle, C.B., has been detained at Malta, but is ordered to leave for the Piræus of Athens and Alexandria by about the 19th inst.

JUMNA, Capt. G. Parsons, arrived at Aden on Jan. 11, and proceeded for Bombay.

LIVELY, Lieut.-Com. Charles Le Strange, tender to the Penelope, Coastguard ship at Harwich, and flagship of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, K.G., Admiral-Superintendent of the Reserve, has been taken into dock at Sheerness, in order to have defects made good and several minor alterations executed. The Hampshire Telegraph says:—"Although the Lively has been commissioned in the first place for duty in connection with the Coastguard, having been selected to replace the Hawk, in which the late Admiral Superintendent of Reserves made his tour of inspection, she will not alone be used on this service. The amount of visiting which the Duke of Edinburgh will find necessary after he has once looked fully into the stations of the Coastguard and the Naval Reserve around the coasts will not be very great, and he has been informed that as the Lively's services will not be needed by him exclusively, she will be used for other purposes as occasion requires. The statement that the Lively has been decorated regardless of expense, and in a more ornate and costly manner than the Royal yachts even, is unfounded, as she is very much like any other despatch vessel in which the "distinguished visitors" cabin is well turned out of hand; but since some papers offered objections to the Duke being given employment, it has suited them to make, or try to raise, objections to everything connected with his employment as Admiral Superintendent of Reserves."

MONARCH, Capt. George Tryon, C.B., has relieved the Bittern at Cyprus, and has taken up the duties of senior officer on that part of the station.

NEWCASTLE, Capt. E. Kelly. A Reuter's telegram from Lisbon, Jan. 11, says:—"While the anchor was being weighed on board H.M.S. Newcastle yesterday off this port an accident occurred to the capstan, whereby six men were injured, one of them seriously. The Newcastle will be detained here for three days in consequence."

NORTHAMPTON, Capt. J. A. Fisher, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock, arrived at Bermuda on Jan. 7, and was to leave for the West Indies on Jan. 20.

ORONTES, Capt. Kinahan. A telegram from Gibraltar, dated Jan. 15, says the Orontes, with the 74th Highlanders, from Singapore, sailed for Greenock at 6 o'clock that evening.

OSPREY, Com. Hon. Henry H. A'Court, was at Panama on Dec. 4. The Chilian Consul in Panama had officially requested Com. A'Court to order a survey to be made of a torpedo-boat recently launched in the Bay, and then in charge of Don Aristides Vidal, a lieutenant in the Peruvian Navy, with a view of having her detained as contraband of war. The Executive of the Government of the Republic of Colombia declined, however, to take any cognisance of the representations made by the Chilian Consul. The torpedo-boat was allowed to proceed to sea, and has since been captured.

PELICAN, Com. Henry H. Boys., was at Callao on Dec. 11, having her boilers repaired. "Although more than a couple of months have elapsed since the boiler explosion on board the composite-sloop Pelican, Com. Boys, the Admiralty have not thought it necessary to give further particulars than the names of the dead and wounded. We now learn, from a private source, that, as the chief engineer had been invalided to England, the engine-room staff was much reduced, the one engineer on board having to fulfil the duties of acting chief engineer, and to keep extra watches below. On the day of the accident, the sloop was on her way to Callao to join the flagship, and for some reason unexplained, she was driving at the unusual rate of 10 knots an hour. At 4 o'clock in the morning, Mr. Barker retired to his cabin, after having been on duty eight hours, leaving the machinery in charge of an artificer. About 7 o'clock he was awoke by the noise of the explosion, and by the cries of the scalded stokers in the stoke-hole. Without waiting to dress himself, he attempted to rush through the blinding steam into the engine-room, but was driven back, not by the steam itself, but by the scalding water which dripped from the deck beams. Having returned to his cabin for the purpose of putting on his clothes, Mr. Barker succeeded in forcing his way into the stokehole, where he found all the fires burning brightly with the exception of the furnaces of the port midship boiler, which were blackened by the escaped steam. He managed to close the stop valves, and thus stopped the engines, and the dead and wounded men were, after considerable difficulty, got out through the engine-room hatch. An examination showed that the crown of the exploded boiler was lying upon the furnace bars, and that the cause of the accident was undoubtedly due to a want of water. The working pressure of the boilers is 60lb. to the square inch, and, as the engines were making 80 revolutions per minute at the time, it is thought that the difficulty of maintaining the necessary supply of steam had induced the man in charge to omit to notice the condition of the gauge glass. The other boilers were found to be well supplied with water. By 11 o'clock the exploded boiler had been shut off from the engine, and steam again got up, and the ship was under way again."—Times.

PENGUIN, Com. A. C. Paget, was ordered to relieve the Osprey at Panama, at the end of Dec. 1879.

SALAMIS, Com. FitzGeorge, left Plymouth on Jan. 13 for Lisbon, with mails for the Channel Squadron.

SERAPIS. Capt. Guy Ouchterlony Twiss, who now commands this ship, in succession to Capt. D. G. Davidson, whose period of service has expired, entered the Navy in 1848, and previous to his promotion to lieut., Feb. 22, 1856, served in the Rattler, 11, Com. W. A. Fellowes, in the East Indies. As lieut. he served in the Pique, 40, Capt. Sir F. W. E. Nicolson, Bart., also in the East Indies from March, 1856, until the close of 1858. In May, 1859, he was appointed to the Excellent, Capt. R. S. Hewlett, C.B., and in the following August was transferred to the Neptune, 90, Capt. Sir W. Hoste, Bart., in which ship he continued to serve in the Mediterranean, under Capts. F. A. Campbell and G. T. P. Hornby, until paid off at the close of 1862. In Feb., 1863, he was again appointed to the Excellent, and in the following April removed into the Royal Oak, 35, Capt. F. A. Campbell, and was promoted from that ship to the rank of commander, April 11, 1866. He was 2nd capt. in the Royal Alfred, 18, Capt. E. W. Turnour, from June, 1866, until Feb., 1867; and from the following August until July, 1870, served in the Warrior, 32, with the Channel Squadron. He commanded the Eagle, drill-ship for the Royal Naval Reserve at Liverpool, from July, 1870, until July, 1873; and was commander in the Hibernia, flagship of the Admiral-Superintendent of Malta, from August, 1875, until advanced to post rank, Dec. 31, 1876. He was borne on the books of the Hibernia, flagship at Malta, for transport service, in May, 1878; and was employed in the transit of the Indian troops from Malta; and in Feb., 1879, was appointed additional of the Boadicea, Comdre. F. W. Richards, to superintend the charge of the whole of the transports at Natal.

Shannon, Capt. J. D'Arcy, would proceed to Callao on being relieved by the Thetis at her cruising station between Mollendo and Iquique.

Tamar, Capt. W. H. Liddell, arrived at Bermuda on Dec. 17, and sailed on the 23rd for Barbadoes and Sierra Leone.

Temeraire, Rear-Admiral Watson. A telegram from Malta on Thursday says the Téméraire has proceeded to Port Saïd for the purpose of convoying the Euryalus, the flagship of the East Indies station, now at that port, which has been ordered to Malta for repairs.

Tourmaline, Capt. R. V. Dennistoun, was at Barbadoes on Dec. 29, 1879.

Turquoise, Capt. M. B. Medlycott, has been ordered to Callao the first week in Jan.

Thetis, Capt. P. W. Stephens, left Callao on Dec. 9 to relieve the Shannon between Mollendo and Iquique. We translate the following from a recent number of La Opinion Nacional:—"We know for a fact that when the report (afterwards found to be untrue) reached Lima that a Chilian vessel was grappling for the cable off Chorilos, H.M.S. Thetis got up steam in order to go and put a stop to such an attack on the interests of an English Company. We can guarantee the correctness of this."

Triumph, Capt. A. H. Markham, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Frederick H. Stirling in the Pacific, left Callao on Nov. 14 for the northern ports of the station, returning to Callao, where she was on Dec. 11 preparing to go South as soon as possible, returning to Callao about the last week in January.

Tyne, Com. John E. Stokes, arrived at Aden on Jan. 10 from Suez.

Vigilant, Lieut.-Com. Annesley, has been fitted with a new shaft, and by last advices, dated Dec. 6, she was ordered to proceed north from Hong Kong to bring down Admiral Coote, who is about to be relieved from the China command.

Wivern, Com. J. G. Jones, was commissioned at Devonport on Wednesday for service at Hong Kong, with a complement of 152.

Wye, Staff Com. Vine, having undergone extensive repairs at Sheerness Yard, was taken out of dock on Saturday, and was replaced by the Nassau, which vessel is to be broken up as unfit for further service.

Zephyr. Lieut.-Com. Clutterbuck. Those who are anxious to see their friends of the Zephyr will doubtless be glad to learn that she will not be much longer detained on the North-America station, as orders have been sent to her at Bermuda to leave for England as soon as possible, and without waiting for her relief, as was previously intended. The Zephyr was recommissioned at Halifax in September, 1876, and her orders are for Plymouth.—Hampshire Telegraph.

THE PORTSMOUTH SAILORS' HOME.

The directors of the Royal Sailors' Home received on Tuesday a deputation, appointed at a conference of representatives of the various ships in harbour, held on board the Duke of Wellington, at which the management of the home was discussed. The deputation presented a report, in which complaint was made of the manner in which men's allotments were made, and it was urged that a savings-bank in connection with the institution should be established. In its present situation, the canteen was a constant source of temptation, and men had to meet their female friends amidst smoking and drinking. The meals were badly cooked, and the reading-room was uncomfortable; but the dormitories were the weakest point in the comforts of the institution—insufficient bedding, not over clean, and not well aired in winter, and stuffiness in the summer, all called for improvement. There should be more attention to the baths, and more civility on the part of the paid servants. The present staff did not carry the kind of sympathy with them which the subscribers wished, and they desired to see more female servants, and a motherly matron, who would bring into the home a happiness never before experienced. Every article sold in the home should go towards making the home self-supporting. The appearance of the servants was in harmony with the home—not looking lively, clean, neat, and tidy, or likely to prove attractive. The staff employed should be dressed in a smart uniform, at the expense of the home, so as to distinguish them from persons lounging about; the reform would more than repay the outlay. They endorsed every statement made by the chaplains of the Navy, and they hoped that this would be the forerunner of the accomplishment of the great and glorious work they had undertaken. The directors expressed their satisfaction at the manner in which the report had been drawn up, and promised to give it serious attention.

A RELIC OF H.M.S. "ORPHEUS."

A skeleton has been found buried in the sand on the beach, a little way outside the Manukau Heads, which, taking into consideration all the accompanying circumstances attending the discovery, leads one to believe is the last remains of an ill-fated officer of H.M.S. Orpheus, wrecked on the Manukau Bar in February, 1863. The circumstances of finding this skeleton are worth more than a passing notice, because some of the appearances would suggest the possibility of identification. The following narrative embraces all that is at present known of the finding of this interesting relic. There is a settler named Cowan living on the beach, and on Oct. 30 or 31 last, two boys came to him and said they had seen a pair of boots sticking out of the sand, but they were afraid to examine the spot, suspecting that there was a dead body underneath. Their information, however, lead to the upper coats of sand being stripped off, and underneath was disclosed a full-length skeleton, the skull resting on the wrist-bones. There were fragments of clothing attached, and it was not difficult to determine that the cloth was of the texture used in her Majesty's Navy, and there were several strips of gold lace, although not sufficient to indicate the rank of the former wearer of the garment. But it may be asked, what is there to connect this skeleton with the sad fate of the Orpheus? There is just this circumstance, namely: That the mainmast of the vessel has been washed up on the same beach, within thirty yards of the spot where the skeleton has been found; therefore it is extremely probable that some of the bodies would be cast up in the same direction. The gold lace and the navy clothes suggest that the wearer was an officer. But why was not the discovery made sooner? It must be remembered that at the time of the wreck and for many years afterwards there was no settler on that beach; Cowan is the only settler there even now, and he has been there a very few years. Next as to possible identification. The skeleton is described as being that of a very big man. The front teeth are well preserved in the skull, but the back teeth (which were much decayed internally) are plugged with silver. The boots, though much decayed, would probably indicate the official grade of the deceased. There were patches of light-brown hair found on the skull when the sand was stripped from it. Several persons from Auckland have seen the skeleton, amongst them Mr. T. F. Cheeseman, the secretary of the Auckland Institute, and entertain no doubt that it has remained in the place where it was found since the sea cast it up. The remains were brought into Cuehunga, and interred in St. Peter's Church cemetery. It is a remarkable circumstance that the body was found above high-water mark. This, taken altogether with the fact that the skeleton was found with the skull resting upon the wrist-bones, would indicate that death was from exhaustion rather than drowning, and that the unfortunate gentleman had reached the shore alive. The probability would appear to be that he clung to the mast, from which he was washed off by the heavy surf. There was formerly a small Maori settlement on the Piha beach, and it is just possible that the Maoris placed the body in the position (above high-water mark) where the skeleton had been found. Besides the circumstance that the back teeth were plugged with silver, there are some others that might facilitate identification. It is already stated that deceased was a "big" or "tall" man. The sutures on the sides of the skull are firmly closed, leaving hardly any appearance of a seam, which would show that the deceased was middle-aged. The suture on the centre of the skull is also set close, and hardly visible. There is a further peculiarity also about the teeth. It is stated by an expert that two of the back teeth must have been drawn during life. These marks may never be brought under the notice of those who would identify the deceased, still they are deserving of publication, even for the remote chance of identification they afford. But the remains are now in sacred ground, where they repose safely from possible molestation in future.—New Zealand Herald.

THE FRENCH NAVY.

The methodical manner in which the French have set about the reconstruction of their Navy is deserving of all praise, and might be imitated with advantage by our Admiralty. In the year 1872, Vice-Admiral Pothuau drew up a programme of reconstruction of the French Fleet, which received the approval of the National Assembly. The Conseil des Travaux, or Naval Board of Construction, were then called upon to examine the details and suggest improvements in the proposed constitution of the new fleet, and, after mature consideration, recommended an increase in the speed of the vessels, and in the penetrating power of the guns to be carried, as of great urgence and of primary importance. This necessarily added to the horsepower of the engines, to the dimensions of the hulls, and to the thickness of the armour, in the ships originally proposed to be constructed by the Minister of Marine. The programme which was therefore adopted in 1876, and which is to be completed by the year 1885, stands thus:—

Ships.	Number.	Estimate of 1876. £.	Calibre of guns in in.
Iron armour-clads.—1st rate	16	6,624,000	13½
2nd rate	12	3,576,000	12¼
Iron coast-defence vessels.—1st rate	10	2,500,000	13½
2nd rate	10	2,040,000	13½
Cruisers.—Iron, wood-sheathed	8	2,428,800	9½ and 5½
Coppered	8	1,321,600
Wood, 3rd class	18	1,296,000
Despatch vessels (former 2nd class do.)	18	640,800	7¾ & 5½
Gunboats	32	704,000	6½
Transports.—Horse transports (iron)	10	1,660,000
For colonial service (iron)	5	830,000
Store ships (iron)	10	544,000
Other craft	60	768,000
Totals	217	24,933,200	13½ to 5½.

The first step taken by the French Admiralty was to nominate a committee of officers and dockyard officials well acquainted with the details concerning the ships belonging to foreign navies, and more especially so concerning ships of the British Navy. The committee then inspected all the existing French ships; and from their report the French Admiralty broke up 69 ships between the years 1872-78, removing others from the list of efficient men-of-war, and converting them into transports or storeships. Between the years 1872-73, twenty ships, of which the first-rate armour-clad Rédoutable, and the first-class cruisers Tourville and Duquesne formed part, were laid down, from the designs of the most eminent French naval constructors. These were guided in their designs by the progress made by the British Admiralty. Between 1873-78, there were begun thirty-nine additional vessels, amongst which were the first-rate armoured ships Devastation, Foudroyant, and Duperré. Improvements adopted in England, Germany, and Italy were carefully watched, and at times adopted. The French iron-clads carry no 81-ton guns of 16-in. calibre. Most of them, however, carry guns of 13½-in. calibre, where similar British vessels only carry the Woolwich 35-ton gun of 12-in. bore; thus, where British ships carry 25-ton guns, the French metal exceeds 50 tons. And so on, throughout their fleet, the French have aimed at carrying heavier guns than we do, although, in numerous instances, they have only plated their vessels round the water-line. Here, in their first-rates, the armour ranges from 15 in. to 22 in., while the guns above, in some cases, remain to be fought unprotected by iron or steel plate, except in the barbette towers on the upper deck. Armour, in fact, is not the principal feature of the French scheme of reconstruction. This lies entirely in the speed of their new vessels, ranging from 15 to 17 knots, and in the power of the guns they carry. They are all fitted with powerful spurs, for ramming purposes, while on each quarter is slung a new and improved towing torpedo, which, the moment the ship is cleared for action, it is intended should be lowered and towed astern, the argument being that, in the course of the manœuvres, the enemy must pass under the stern—nay, can be made to do so—when the towed torpedo must, perforce, if judiciously managed, be made to play a decisive part in the day's proceedings. The new class of avisos, or despatch-vessels, to which belong the Chasseur, Bisson, Labourdonnais, Voltigeur, Lancier, and Hussard, are worthy of notice. Their length at the water-line is 200 ft., beam 29 ft., and mean draught 11 ft. They displace about 800 tons, and are propelled by single screws, driven by engines indicating 800 horse-power. Their full speed ranges from 12 to 13 knots. Their hulls are of wood, and, as we mentioned some months back, have long, projecting bows, ram-shaped, very strongly constructed, and capable of penetrating through the sides of the Inflexible. At full speed, one of these small vessels, fairly striking that British monster amidships, would most assuredly sink her. Every precaution has been taken to render these despatch-vessels efficient. Watertight bulkheads exist to prevent their sinking, in the event of their losing their "snouts" after ramming. The internal arrangements are also very perfect, the between-decks being extremely lofty and well ventilated. It was originally contemplated to arm these vessels with 5½-in. guns, four in number; but latterly this has been altered, and we understand that fewer guns, of far heavier calibre, are to be carried, together with some light pieces to repel torpedo-boat attacks. Having made a careful inspection of both the Hussard and Lancier, we have no hesitation in saying that this type of vessel will play an important and prominent part in the naval warfare of the future.

The experiments with the Thunderer's gun were resumed yesterday, and will be carried to a conclusion without further delay. The cell in which the gun is placed has been prolonged, so as to retain most of the fragments in case of bursting; and the gun and platform have, with the same object, been placed further back in the recess. The butt into which the projectiles are fired has been altered, with a view to preventing their escape above and disappearance below the heap of sand which ought to retain them, and other improvements suggested by the first series of trials have been introduced. The test on Friday was to solve the theory of Sir William Palliser, who was present, that the Thunderer accident was caused by the wad wedging the shot and suddenly arresting its progress. The cell in which the gun stands was to have been greatly strengthened in preparation for the expected burst when the gun comes to be doubly loaded, for no general expectation of a burst occurred yesterday. After loading with 85lb. of powder and a common shell, the wad was introduced, rammed to within five feet of the projectile and then canted over to an angle of 45 deg. by means of a wedge-shaped rammer. The gun on being sustained no damage, but a severer test will follow.

Naval officers are frequently called upon, when serving on foreign stations, to sit on Naval Courts, convened for the trial of merchant seamen accused of various crimes or offences by the masters of British merchant vessels. The following case, tried at the Central Criminal Court, on Dec. 19, 1879, may hereafter serve as a precedent, and save the accused under kindred circumstances from a lengthy term of confinement, as has before occurred, when such cases have been ordered home for trial. Henry Cutting was indicted for the manslaughter of James Henry, an able-seaman, on the high seas, and within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England. The prisoner was first mate of a vessel called the Coringa, which was engaged as a regular trader between Antwerp and New Brunswick, although, in fact, she was a British vessel and commanded by an English captain. It appeared that on November 3, while the vessel was on her voyage to America, a dispute took place between one of the crew, a man named Mike Kearney, and another seaman, and they fought. The captain interposed and threatened to put Kearney into irons, but he was violent, and intimated that he should resist this being done. The captain called for assistance, and the prisoner came up with a hatchet in his hand. According to the case for the prosecution, the deceased was merely standing by, and not taking part in the disturbance, when the prisoner attacked him and struck him a blow with the hatchet, and so caused his death. For the defence, however, it was argued that the crew were in a mutinous state, and that they refused to obey the orders of the captain, and that what was done by the prisoner was absolutely necessary to protect the lives of the captain and the other officers, and to strike terror into the mutinous seamen. The captain of the vessel, his brother, and other witnesses, were called to speak to these facts. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the learned Recorder said he entirely concurred in it.

The Morning Post announces that "Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. James and Mrs. Macdonald and family have left London for Hyères, in the south of France, where they propose to remain for two or three months."

INDIA.

The following appears among the general orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief under date Dec. 1:—Major-General Sir P. S. Lumsden, K.C.B., C.S.I., having on September 1 last completed five years' service as Adjutant-General of the Army in India, vacated the appointment from that date. It would be impossible, within the limits of a general order, to record in an adequate manner the eminently valuable services rendered by Sir Peter Lumsden, during the period of twenty-seven years, in the course of which he has filled many highly responsible posts on the Staff of the Army; has proved himself throughout an accomplished soldier, and an able, self-reliant, public servant; and has won for himself, by his discretion and judgment, the well-merited confidence of his superiors. Sir Peter Lumsden's latest and best opportunities of doing good service have arisen out of the Afghan war. At its commencement his topographical knowledge of Afghanistan, and his familiarity with the language and customs of the Afghans, and of the Pathan border tribes, specially qualified him to advise, as Adjutant-General, on all matters pertaining to the concentration, the equipment, and the provisioning of the troops destined to operate in those regions, and in the midst of those tribes. Subsequently, when after a brief interval of peace, the necessity for a renewal of hostilities arose, it was on him, as Chief of the Staff, that the duty of carrying out the details connected with the reorganisation of the field force for the advance on Cabul devolved; a duty which he performed with the utmost industry and intelligence. His sagacious counsel and ever ready fertility of resource, by the aid of which the Commander-in-Chief has been enabled to meet the numerous demands made upon him by the varying phases of the war, and to give effect to the political requirements of the Government of India, in so far as they were dependent on military action, also call for special recognition. With what straightforward honesty of purpose, with what judgment, uniform kindliness, and strict impartiality, he has invariably placed before the Commander-in-Chief all matters affecting the interests or character of officers and men, would never have been known unless recorded here. Sir Peter Lumsden's appointment as Chief of the Staff was temporary only, and now that the emergency, to meet which it was created, has passed, he relinquishes it and leaves India on furlough. Sir Frederick Haines heartily congratulates him on his advancement to the dignity of Knight Commander of the Bath, a proof that his services have gained the approval of the highest authority; and trusts that he may yet see him in the performance of duties higher, though not more arduous or responsible, than those he is now resigning; and in bidding him farewell, his Excellency feels assured that he is joined by the assenting voice of the Army of India in all its branches and departments.

According to the Bombay Gazette there appears to be a general belief in well-informed quarters that the recommendations of the Simla Army Commission, which are now understood to be before the Government of India, include the retention of the post of Military Member of Council, or Minister for War; the abolition of the Madras and Bombay separate commands; the partition of all India into four large military divisions, each under a Lieutenant-General, viz., one for Bengal and the North-West Provinces, with head-quarters at Allahabad or Lucknow; another for the Punjab, head quarters Rawul Pindee; a third for Bombay, including Sind, head-quarters Poona; and a fourth for Madras with Burmah, head-quarters Bangalore. The allotment of large powers to these divisional commanders would, it is anticipated, render feasible a considerable reduction in the army head-quarters staff—in place of the dual administration at present in vogue—with deputies in the Adjutant-General's and Quartermaster-General's departments. The Times of India says, "As regards the Madras Army the reports are conflicting, but the preponderance of opinion indicates that the Commission has thought it unwise to altogether abandon recruiting the Native Army from among the natives of Southern India. The members of the Commission appear, it is said, to have been not quite unanimous in their opinions, one having declined to endorse the recommendations generally, while one or two others have recorded a dissent on minor points."

The following officers have applied to retire from the Service, viz.:—Cols. J. D. Swayne, Bengal S.C., on a pension of £456 5s., and capitalised value of special annuity—£4,580; Col. D. Mocatta, Bengal S.C., on a pension of £456 6s., and capitalised value of special annuity—£6,135; Col. J. J. Dansey, Bengal S.C., on a pension of £456 5s., and capitalised value of special annuity—£6,008; Col. A. W. Ritherdon, Madras S.C., on a pension of £456 5s., and special annuity of £495 8s.; and Lieut.-Col. E. A. C. Lambert, on a pension of £292 and special annuity of £205 10s.

Col. F. Schneider, Bombay S.C., has succeeded to his colonel's allowances from Dec. 10, 1879; and Col. F. Alexander. Bengal S.C., from Dec. 11, 1879.

It is announced by the Bombay Gazette that the intention of giving up Seetapore as a military station has been abandoned. The local military authorities have proved very forcibly that it is one of the healthiest cantonments in the North-West Provinces, and Government have allowed it another lease of existence for troops.

The Naga war is still proceeding, but its history for some time back is little more than a record of petty skirmishes between small parties of the enemy and detachments of Assam regiments employed in hunting them down. There is every probability of the campaign continuing in this desultory manner for some months longer.

The London correspondent of the Irish Times says:—"I am informed that Gen. Wolseley, on his arrival home, will be invited to form one of a military council to be constituted under his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief, for the purpose of considering certain points of difference in the tactics of Continental and British troops, as well as in the ordnance and barrack department of this and foreign nations."

The Standard says:—"It has been ruled by the military authorities that officers who vacated staff appointments in order to proceed on active service to the Cape, are not eligible to return to their former employment, but they are to be considered as having a priority of claim to future vacancies which may occur, and they will be provided for as opportunities offer."

The Irish Times says:—"The Engineers have been for some time engaged in renovating Belfast Barracks, but those who know them well are aware that no real improvement can be effected until the place has been completely re-drained, and those fever-traps and eyesores, the wooden huts, removed. It is stated that the reserve ground at the barracks, recently purchased by Government as a site for the brigade depôt barracks, has been condemned by a board of survey for its alleged unhealthiness and its proximity to a disused graveyard."

According to the Standard, "a scheme which has long been in preparation for reorganising the War-Department staff of clerks at the manufacturing establishments has received the final approval of her Majesty's Treasury, and will shortly be issued. As it may, and probably will, affect many of the officials, it is awaited with much anxiety. It is expected that in its general features the scheme will resemble one recently introduced by the Admiralty at the dockyards, and that many changes will follow.

PAINTED windows as memorials of departed worth and gallantry have more than ordinary interest in the eyes of all. Mr. W. G. Taylor (late O. Connor) has at all times pleasure in showing his various works for church and hall in progress; the introduction of likenesses in windows being a special study. Designs and estimates free. Medal awarded to works in the Paris Exhibition. The "Art" Works, 4 Berners Street, London.

THE KIRWEE BOOTY SUIT.

In the action of "Kinloch v. the Secretary of State for India," for an account of Indian prize-money, an application was made on Monday last at the office of the Chief Clerk at Vice-Chancellor Hall's Chambers in the Chancery Division, on behalf of the Secretary of State in Council, the defendant in the suit, for further time to deliver his statement for defence. The defendant asked that the time should be enlarged until after the decision of the appeal now pending against Sir C. Hall's judgment in favour of the plaintiff on Nov. 4 last; but the plaintiff's solicitor objecting to an indefinite extension of time, the Chief Clerk ordered that the defendant should deliver his defence within three weeks. The appeal is likely to come on for hearing about the end of February. An application was made yesterday (Friday) for an order to compel the Secretary of State for India in Council to put in an affidavit of the documents in his possession bearing on the case. The solicitor to the India Office resisted the application, as involving immense labour, and also contended that the papers were privileged. Mr. Kinloch denied that the plea of privilege which Sir C. Hall's judgment had already destroyed, could be in any shape sustained, and he affirmed that very little labour in collecting the documents, most of which were already printed, could be necessary; but that any extra labour, even if needlessly inflicted on the India Office, could not for a moment be weighed against the injury which any material delay in supplying the essential evidence might inflict on the prize claimants. The matter was ultimately reserved for further consideration on Tuesday next.

Obituary.

Gen. Sir John Low, K.C.B., G.C.S.I., Madras Infantry (Retired List), died on Saturday last, at the age of 91 years, he having been born at Clatto, Cupar Fife, in 1788. Sir John was the eldest son of Mr. R. Low, of Clatto. He was educated at St. Andrew's University, and entered the military service of the Hon. East India Company as far back as 1805. He was in the expedition to Java and took part in the campaign of 1811, serving as a volunteer in H.M.'s 59th Regiment, and was severely wounded (medal and clasp). He served as aide-de-camp to Sir John Malcolm at the battle of Mahidpore, in Malwa, in 1817. Subsequently he was much employed in diplomatic and political duties after 1825, amongst the rest as Resident at Gwalior, Resident at Lucknow, Governor-General's agent in the Rajpoot States, Resident at Hyderabad, Deccan, &c. In the two last mentioned posts, in addition to political duties, he had the direct command of a large force of contingent troops, consisting of cavalry, artillery, and infantry under British officers. In 1853 he was appointed a member of the Council of India. On various occasions he had been thanked by the Government of India in Calcutta, and twice received the special thanks of the Court of Directors of the East India Company, in Leadenhall Street, for his services at Lucknow and Hyderabad. His commissions bore date as follows:—Ensign, July 17, 1805; lieut., July 17, 1805; capt., Jan. 1, 1819; major, Dec. 31, 1828; lieut.-col., Feb. 21, 1834; col., June 10, 1845; major-gen., June 20, 1854; lieut.-gen., May 30, 1859; and gen., Jan. 18, 1867. He was made a K.C.B. in 1862 and G.C.S.I. in 1873.

Major-Gen. A. Scudamore, C.B., died at Darmstadt on the 11th inst., aged 63 years. The deceased served with the 14th Light Dragoons throughout the campaign of 1838-39 in Afghanistan, including the siege and capture of Ghuznee (medal); also throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the action of Ramnuggur (wounded), passage of the Chenab, battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat, dangerously wounded (medal with two clasps); commanded the regiment during the campaign of 1858 in Central India, under Sir Hugh Rose, and was present at the siege and capture of Rahutghur, action of Barodia, relief of Saugor, capture of Gunakota; commanded the detached force sent against Malthone; present at the siege and capture of Jhansie, and commanded the outposts during the investment; present at the battle of Koonch, and all the affairs during the advance on Calpee, including the action of Golowlie; also at the action of Morar, and recapture of Gwalior; also commanded a flying column for six months in the Gwalior and Jhansi district (three times mentioned in despatches, brevet of lieut.-col., C.B., and medal). His commissions bore date as follows, viz.:—Cornet, May 29, 1835; lieut., Feb. 18, 1838; capt., Oct. 22, 1847; major, June 1, 1854; lieut.-col., July 20, 1858; col., Nov. 9, 1862; and major-gen., June 28, 1868.

Gen. the Baron Louis Alexander von During, Major on half-pay, died on the 7th inst. at his residence, near Horneburg, in the 97th year of his age. He received a commission in the 15th Hussars in 1795. He served in the war in the Peninsula during the Corunna campaign, and subsequently from 1812 to 1814, receiving the war medal with seven clasps. During the war he was attached to the division under the command of the late Gen. Sir G. Lowry Cole, G.C.B., and was appointed to his personal staff during the period of the occupation at Cambray. He accompanied Sir Lowry Cole as aide-de-camp to Mauritius and the Cape of Good Hope when the latter served as Governor, but for some years previous to his death he resided on the family property in Hanover. He became Major-Gen., June 17, 1861, and Gen., Oct. 1, 1877.

Col. F. Le Blanc died on the 7th inst. at Blackbrook House, Fareham, in his 90th year. The deceased obtained his first commission as far back as May, 1807; became lieut. in March, 1809; and capt. in Sept. 1813. He served in the Peninsula with the 4th Regiment, and was present at the battles of Corunna, Fuentes d'Onor, Salamanca, and Vittoria, and at the siege of Badajoz and St. Sebastian, where he was severely wounded at the assault and capture. He also served the Waterloo campaign. He had received the war medal with six clasps for his services in the Peninsula, and the Waterloo medal. He went on half-pay in Feb. 1828, was promoted col. in Nov. 1841, and subsequently retired by sale of his commission.

At the quarterly meeting of the directors of the Naval Medical Supplemental Fund, held on the 13th inst., H. J. Domville, Esq., C.B., M.D., Inspector-General, in the chair, the sum of £70 was distributed among the several claimants.

Naval barracks for 4,000 seamen are to be built on a site at Devonport, near Keyham Yard. The seamen's quarters will consist of eight blocks, and officers' quarters, with theatre and recreation-rooms, and exercise ground, are also to be formed. The total cost is estimated at about £200,000, and two of the sites are already in hand. The ground purchased is about 35 acres in extent.

It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. The Gatling, Nordenfeldt, and other machine guns are about to be tested under novel conditions at Portsmouth, in charge of the gunnery officers of the Excellent. While they will be submitted to a practical trial with a view of determining their efficiency as regards range and accuracy, the main purpose of the contest will be to ascertain their power to meet torpedo attacks. For this purpose a model of a boat will be placed upon a raft, to prevent its sinking under fire, and, though stationary itself, it will be fired at by machine guns from the bows of torpedo-boats going at a high rate of speed.

It is understood, and by the time this sheet is in the hands of our readers will possibly be announced, that Dr. Reid has been appointed the Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy. Dr. John Watt Reid's diplomas date from 1844. He graduated M.D. in 1856, and held the rank of Deputy Inspector-General, being attached to the Royal Hospital at Haslar. The fact of the selection being made from the Active List is hailed by Naval surgeons as a welcome appreciation of their claims to recognition.—Lancet.

The German frigate, Prinz Adalbert, having on board Prince Heinrich of Prussia, reached the anchorage at Hiogo on Nov. 15, and saluted the port, the fort responding. The Prince has since visited Kioto.—London and China Telegraph.

Sir A. D. Home, V.C., K.C.B.

CHAIRMAN.—Major-General E. KYRLE MONEY, R.H.A.

BANKERS.—Messrs. Ransom, Bouverie, and Co.
SOLICITORS.—Messrs. Lewin and Co.

As evidence of the importance of the objects of the Company, it may be mentioned that the only other similar undertaking paid in dividends and bonus during the past year the sum of £168,000, or upwards of £45 per cent. upon the capital, while the Shares command a premium on the Stock Exchange of nearly 50 per cent. The improved method adopted by this Company of producing the essence of meat and other consolidated foods will enable handsome profits to be divided upon the capital employed, after making a considerable reduction upon existing prices.

This Company has supplied the War Office and the Indian Government with over two millions of tins of its products, with which the troops in Zululand and Afghanistan have been supplied. Numerous officers proceeding to the seat of war have been and are similarly supplying themselves. Printed copies of certificates of approval from the highest noblemen and the most distinguished officers in the Army can be obtained at the Offices of the Company.

Applications for the above remaining Shares can be made by letter addressed to the Secretary, stating the number of Shares required. No application will be received unless accompanied with a deposit of £1 per Share on the number of Shares applied for.

The "Times" of the 7th inst. observes, with regard to

KOPF'S EXTRACT of MEAT COMPANY:—"In like case, KOPF'S consolidated preparations, which were used with signal success in South Africa, supply a long-felt and much-needed want. What traveller has not felt grateful to Liebig for his extract of meat, or to our own high-class firms, whose tinned provisions have often proved a substantial addition to meagre fare in distant lands! All these were beyond the reach of the private soldier, were expensive and bulky. KOPF'S preparations are inexpensive, they are nutritious and are extremely portable. In Zululand our soldiers spoke most highly of them, and even in England they are not despised in the barrack-room. A small tin cylinder, weighing but 1½ oz., contains ample for a meal; three of these among two men are all a soldier requires in the day. Soups of various kinds containing compressed vegetables in greater or less quantities, are the preparations most appreciated, but compressed tea, milk, and sugar are luxuries which campaigners will not pass by. Three minutes' boiling in a soldier's canteen is all the cooking necessary for a meal. It certainly seems extraordinary that in the face of the unqualified approval bestowed on the compressed food by both officers and men in South Africa, more efforts have not been made by Government to introduce it in Afghanistan. Had General Gough been provided with a supply of these provisions, there need have been no delay for want of transport or supplies. One mule can carry 2,800 tins of KOPF'S Soups, or rations for a whole battalion for a day; a camel can in like manner carry, over rough ground, more than two days' rations. Each man, without much difficulty, could slip a supply for a couple or three days into his haversack. Here, then, we have the whole secret of waging war with minimised transport and consequently at a reduced expenditure. It is not that these compressed foods should supersede the ordinary rations; but on certain occasions, when light marching order becomes necessary, their introduction would be attended with the most valuable results, and would make the General practically independent of transport or of the country through which he was marching. How many flying campaigns into the hills would have been successfully conducted at a tenth of the expenditure incurred, had the invention been known when first we annexed the Punjab! A reduced transport train means reduced baggage guards, extra rest to the men, and finally enables us to move with smaller forces. It will be argued that, however valuable such food may be for our own British soldiers, the caste prejudices of the natives will prevent their ever agreeing to its introduction. There is no reason why the staple articles of diet used by the Sepoys should not be similarly compressed, and under the superintendence of their own cooks; rice, dhal, ghee, vegetables, all and each of them may be operated on in the same manner as peasoup and Scotch broth; intelligent native officers will not be found wanting who will readily agree to the advantages claimed by the inventors......The question of transport is one which affects our Government in no small degree, and anything which promises to lighten the vast sums incurred on this head should at any rate receive an honest, impartial trial."—Similar expressions of opinion will be found in the "Army and Navy Gazette," "Whitehall Review," "York House Papers," "London Figaro," "Broad Arrow," "Bullionist," "May Fair," &c.

KOPF'S EXTRACT of MEAT COMPANY (Limited).—APPLICATIONS for the remaining SHARES must be sent in forthwith, addressed to the SECRETARY, 5 Agar Street, Charing Cross.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

"DURING these bewildering intervals, the ship usually sailed backwards. . . . . ." The author of Alice in Wonderland, in his preface to the Hunting of the Snark, an "Agony in Eight Fits!" remarks that exception may possibly be taken to the following line in his poem,—

"Then the bowsprit got mixed with the rudder sometimes."

He goes on to explain that this condition of affairs on board was by no means a mere effort of the imagination, but a gloomy fact. The bowsprit of their vessel (presumably a "double-ender") was so frequently unshipped for revarnishing, that in the hurry and confusion of rearrangement, it occasionally got "fastened on, anyhow, across the rudder." No steering could be done, consequently, till the next varnishing-day had arrived. . . . . . "During these bewildering intervals, the ship usually sailed backwards!" . . . . . . We ought, perhaps, to apologise for an illustration so exceedingly far-fetched, but—on learning the nature of the third "agony" or "revarnishing" to which the unhappy Commissariat craft had been doomed—the thought was irresistibly forced upon our imagination either that Lewis Carrol must have had "Commissariat on the brain" when writing the poem above alluded to, or that Haliburton and Co. must have gone to sleep with Alice in Wonderland under their pillow. Be this as it may, or otherwise, the result that he depicts as attending the constant process of rearrangement on board his poem's vessel, is precisely what must inevitably follow the injudicious and "bewildering" action of the War Office, in the ever-recurring caprices which it inflicts upon the Commissariat Department—a department, let it be borne in mind, of the supremest utility, both during peace and in war. The departmental vessel will assuredly "sail backwards. . . . . ." The truth is said to be frequently spoken in jest. Never perhaps was this aphorism so incontestably correct as in the present reductio ad absurdum! Of course, no one in his sober senses expects the ship to sail forwards, under the conditions laid down in the new Warrant. That would be ridiculous. In point of fact, the Warrant, so far as regards common-sense arrangements, is like the "captain's chart" in the Hunting of the Snark,—

"A perfect and absolute blank."

Not to instance other anomalies, the "blot in the scheme" which we mentioned in our pages last week—that of introducing untrained officers, holding a recognised military position amongst and as juniors to trained officers who held no such position—would be indeed like lashing "the bowsprit across the rudder." It cannot possibly work. Under such circumstances, the non-military officers would be little better than coolies. Let us imagine a scene under such an infelicitous régime,—in the South-Western District, for instance. Enter a young and insinuating subaltern to the office of his friend, the Military Staff Officer, recently appointed from the same regiment to which the youthful sub. belongs:—"I say, old fellow, you must get that matter of the 'marching-out damages' put through for me now. You're head boss, you know, so you can easily square it."—"All right, I'll see to it; but I suppose I must just go in and tell old Jones, merely out of courtesy, you know."—"Jones! who the dickens is Jones?"—"Oh! one of those old fossils belonging to the old Commissaries' Department, you know whom I mean,—rations, rations! He is senior to me, and we always tell him before giving an order, only as a mere matter of form." We have little hesitation in assuming that this may be taken as a probable illustration of the condition of affairs which will obtain in a department made up of elements so incongruous,—nay, more than this, from their unfortunate relations with another,—so absolutely antagonistic. For it cannot be anticipated that the Department will welcome the advent of a number of interlopers of superior standing, who have been foisted in upon them, against all principles of common honesty and justice. Nor can it be anticipated that the old officers will sit lovingly side by side with the new-comers, patiently instructing them in their multifarious duties, and gracefully gliding into obscurity or retirement when this desirable consummation is realised. No; we are under the impression that the friction will be *con*siderable, and that it is quite on the cards that the ship may go down altogether,—in the event of a serious or European war. This would be a "bore" for the War Office. But it is quite inconceivable that the Warrant can be intended to last, in its integrity. The officials at the War Office are surely only waiting for another "varnishing-day" to arrive! In the meantine, however, the extreme likelihood of a *retro*gressive movement on the part of the entire machine is far from reassuring, to say the most for it. On the other hand, as we have on former occasions hinted, it may be the intention of the War Office to eliminate the "fossils," as they are pleased to consider the present officers of the department, by the process of sheer "wearying." If so, they will in all probability be successful,—in time. But what a monstrous injustice they are thus inflicting upon a deserving body of officers! Let us, however, look at the matter with an impartial eye, not considering the vested interests of the officers concerned, but the public weal. Here are a number of regimental officers throwing up all their prospects in the Army for ten years, for 12s. 6d. per diem. Being seconded in their regiments, they will draw no other pay until promoted. At first, it was decided that all should have passed through the Staff College. Such a course would, at any rate, have secured a capital class of men. Now, we learn that concessions have been made as to the necessary qualifications of the applicants for Commissariat appointments. Only a specific examination is required to be passed. This can be easily managed by a course of study for a few weeks, under an ordinary "crammer." What sort of men are we likely to get then? Not workers, but drones, men who feel unequal to the struggle of life in the Army, and who hope that their many shortcomings will be less observed in a department where they will be removed from regimental supervision. The pay is not good enough to attract really good men. Like King David's army of old, the new Military Commissariat Staff will consist of the "waifs and strays" of the Line. If it is determined to form a really serviceable and permanent Military Commissariat Staff Corps, the first point is to secure the services of a really good military head, an officer of standing and capital administrative capacity. This is a sine quâ non, for how can a purely military corps be commanded by a mister at the War Office? The idea is absurd. Either, then, substantive rank should be given to the Commissary-General at Head-quarters, or this officer should be replaced by a General officer of administrative capacity. The first course would clearly seem to be the reasonable one to adopt, for it would involve merely the altering of a commission. The adoption of the latter would be an insult to the whole of the existing Department. But we would emphatically repeat that a recognised Military Head is essential to the well-being of any corps that may be created. That unwieldy machine the defunct Control Department had no head, and consequently no coherence. The late Sir Henry Storkes was, by outsiders, assumed to occupy this position; but he ignored it himself, declining to attend the only departmental dinner which was ever given. Doubtless he had the best reasons for pursuing this line of conduct. It had, however, a depressing and most deleterious effect upon the "Control." After all is said and done, therefore, have we anything tangible to suggest? Let it be taken for granted that the War Office is pledged to the adoption of some such scheme as that about to be promulgated. By all means let it "taste its legs." Set it in motion. But do not let the advent of the newly-created corps be handicapped by a weight of abuses and grievances attached to the individuals composing it. Remedy these at once. Let no invidious distinctions exist; class all the officers under one head, holding either substantive or relative rank, whichever may be deemed advisable, though we strongly urge the propriety of the former. Then select the best man who can be picked out to command the corps, and to act in the position of Staff Officer, either at the Horse Guards or the War Office. By these means, "coherence," a most important, nay, vital, element will be secured, in the consistence of the corps; confidence will be re-established by the immediate supervision of a powerful and responsible head, to whom access may be obtained, and whose interests will be vested in the "continuance" and prosperity of the Department; and last, but not least, the highest advantages will accrue to the Army and to the country at large, by the increased efficiency which will be developed, when such incentives to additional zeal shall have been offered as we have shadowed forth.

The terrific effect produced by the Palliser 250-lb. shell after piercing the $5\frac{1}{2}$-in. plates which protected the guns of the Huascar, has been impartially reported by an experienced board of American Naval officers. Extracts from this report we publish in another column. It cannot be said that these results were totally unexpected, as the knowledge, which for a long time past has been in our possession, concerning the penetrating power of modern ordnance, forbids the assumption that the partisans of armour-plating can have been taken entirely by surprise. Nevertheless, we find that in the Alexandra, our latest type of broadside armour-clad, the guns in the lower battery are protected by plates no thicker than eight inches, while on the sides of the upper battery the armour only exceeds that of the Huascar in thickness by half-an-inch. And yet this ship would, we presume, be sent into action "with a light heart" by the Admiralty, even were it known she was about to have shells weighing from 700 to 800 lbs. hurled against her. On board the Téméraire, the most efficient ship we have in the Service, thanks to Admiral Fellowes, the foremost barbette tower is protected by 10-in. plates, and the after one by plates 8 in. thick, as are also the guns in the central battery, but against a raking fire the protection is only five inches of iron. These two vessels carry 25 and 18-ton guns. The Sultan and Hercules have their guns protected by 9-in. and 8-in. plates, respectively. They carry 18 and 12-ton guns. The Neptune carries 35-ton guns, and the Monarch 25-ton guns; the Devastation, Thunderer, and Dreadnought are armed with 38-ton guns; and the Inflexible is to be armed with 80-ton guns. Against these ten best specimens of the British Navy, we might find, drawn up in line-of-battle, the Duilio and the Dandolo, each carrying four 100-ton guns. Also, and at the same time, the Foudroyant, Redoutable, Devastation, Colbert, Trident, and the two other vessels being rapidly brought forward in France to complete this class of armour-clads. They each carry six guns, of 38 and 25 tons. Here we have nine foreign vessels, which, taken together, are more than a match for the ten finest vessels of our Navy. The Bellerophon and the six armour-clad ships in her class, carrying 12-ton guns, are opposed by ten French ironclads of the Flandre class, armed in like manner. The ten ships of the Agincourt class, carrying $6\frac{1}{2}$-ton guns, protected by $4\frac{1}{2}$-in. plates, have to face eight French ships of the Alma class, protected by 6-in. plates, which our guns cannot pierce, and armed with 7-ton guns which can easily pierce the sides of the Agincourt or her consorts. The French have also five ships of the Triomphante class, armed with 12-ton guns, to assist in destroying our obsolete ironclads. We have the Shannon, Nelson, and Northampton left. These were designed for fast cruisers, and can barely steam 13·5 knots. Their guns are not protected by armour. The skin of these ships is of iron, just thick enough to ensure the enemy's shells bursting on striking. They carry 18 and 12-ton guns. The French have the Duquesne and the Tourville, each armed with 27 guns of 14 and 24 centimètres calibre, or about $5\frac{1}{2}$ in. and $9\frac{1}{4}$ in. respectively. These vessels can steam 17·5 knots, and can maintain that speed without making any extraordinary effort. We have twelve vessels for coast defence, armed with 18 and 12-ton guns. The French possess nineteen of the same class of vessels, armed with 38, 25, 18, and 12-ton guns, besides having left the Gloire, Couronne, and Solferino, carrying 12 and 7-ton guns, to meet our Lord Warden, Research, and Repulse, with their light armaments. The six French cruisers of the Armide class, carrying 7-ton guns, match the Inconstant, Shah, and Raleigh. The corvettes of the Duguay-Tronin class, steaming 16 knots, are designed to compete with the English Rover class. The Rigault de Genouilly class meets our Opal class, and so on to the end of the chapter. Our designs have been studied and improved upon, by other nations besides France, in every class of vessel, even to that of the smallest gunboat on the list of ships belonging to the Royal Navy. In this manner we have demonstrated it to be a fact that our Fleet does not compare as favourably with that of two foreign Powers as we have invariably been assured it did. Let us now ascertain the cause. We have already attributed it to that false science which "leads to bewilder and dazzles to blind." Had we any just cause for so doing? Let us see. In January, 1872, Mr. Nathaniel Barnaby read a paper on "Modern Ships of War, as illustrated by the Models in the Royal United Service Institution." By this paper Mr. Barnaby propounded his theory concerning the elements which constitute efficiency in a ship of war, and his method of establishing a coefficient to express the cumulative value of such elements in any particular instance. To obtain this coefficient, Mr. Barnaby multiplies together, (A) the weight of armour per ton of ship's measurement, (G) the weight of the protected guns and ammunition carried, (H) the height of the battery port sills above the load water-line, and (S), the cube of the speed in knots at the measured mile. The product he divides by the length of the ship multiplied by 100, to obtain the scientific "coefficient of fighting efficiency" of any ironclad. Applying this rule to the Inflexible and Duilio, we find that, allowing the weight of guns and ammunition carried to be the same in each case, and that both vessels steam 14 knots, the efficiency of these vessels is measured by the co-efficients 254·6 and 354·7 respectively. This bears out the statement of Chief Engineer King, U.S. Navy, to the effect that the Duilio "is the most powerful fighting-machine ever set afloat in the waters of Continental Europe." If we now turn to M. Marchal's work on Les Navires de Guerre les plus Récents, we find the ships of the French Foudroyant class set down as possessing a fighting efficiency represented by the co-efficient 92; the Ajax, 75; Dreadnought, 72; Peter the Great, 71. The French Redoutable class, 65; Thunderer, 63; Tegethoff, 61; Alexandra, 56; Kaiser, 48. The French Colbert class, 46; Sultan, 43; Nelson, 42. The French Océan class, 40; Monarch, 38; Shannon, 35; Iron Duke, 29. The French Tonnerre class, 45; Rupert, 33; Hotspur, 29; Glatton, 28. The French Belier class, 24; Popoffs, 25; and Cyclops, 17. But in each class, all these computations of the relative fighting efficiency of ironclads, the difference in the penetrating power of the guns carried has been assigned far too low a value, while an inordinate importance has been attached to the total weight of the armour, without taking into account the manner in which it may be distributed over the ship. It is the weight of the armour carried, and not the power of the gun, which has been the primary object with Mr. Barnaby, and his idea has, to some extent, communicated itself to other Naval constructors, excepting those of French and American nationality. These have been wiser than to follow in his footsteps. They have watched his experiments and his attempts to reach the "extreme limit" of armour in ships, and have profited as much by his failures as they have by his successes. Mr. Barnaby has stated before the Institution of Naval Architects that, in his belief, "in the Inflexible we have reached the extreme limit in thickness of armour for sea-going vessels." This simple statement, made at a moment when Mr. Barnaby was elated by the thought that it was he who had succeeded in reaching "the extreme limit" in the endurance of sea-going vessels, exposes the policy he has pursued since he was placed at the head of the Constructor's Department of the Admiralty. Mr. Barnaby has been striving to reach the "extreme limit in thickness of armour for sea-going vessels." What that extreme limit is appears to be an unknown quantity at the Admiralty. Onward steps were made in each successive design, until, in the Inflexible, the ship is made to carry a weight of armour equal to 3,500 tons. This, Mr. Barnaby thought, was the "extreme limit." The natural result has been that those foreign nations who have waited, while watching our costly experiments, have been enabled to turn out vessels which, ship for ship, are more efficient than their representatives in our Navy. The Duilio is now in commission. The limit of the Inflexible has thus been proved not to be the extreme. But this search after the "extreme limit,"—where is it to end? With the "extreme limit" of the taxpayer's endurance? That is what it must come to, for surely it is not necessary for us to assert, and we do so without fear of intelligent contradiction, that there is no "extreme limit." The thickness of the armour is only limited by man's power to produce it, and whatever thickness he can produce he can build a ship to carry. It is merely a question of money. But if, instead of attempting to gain the credit of having floated the "extreme limit," English Constructors had, like Sir George Sartorius, turned their attention in the opposite direction, and had endeavoured to design the smallest, strongest, and, with all, the least costly ironclad destroyer it were possible to construct, many millions would have been saved to the country. For the same sum that it takes to build and equip one Inflexible six seaworthy smaller vessels could be constructed, each to carry one 100-ton gun, to ram, to launch torpedoes, and, when necessary, to steam 16 to 18 knots. In the face of the knowledge that this can be done, we feel convinced that nothing but blind infatuation would cause the public to sanction a perseverance in the false policy of endeavouring to reach the "extreme limit" in the armour-carrying capacity of ships. This policy should be abandoned as both unsound and illogical; for when it is thought that that point has, at the expense of an immense treasure, been reached, the nation will find itself none the better off. The ship carrying the "extreme limit" of armour will be reproduced abroad, and since the ship reproduced will also be able to carry the gun to pierce the "extreme limit" of the armour carried by its rival, we shall be no better off then than we are now; while, by turning our attention to designing and constructing smaller, faster, and in the aggregate, more powerful vessels, we shall find ourselves much more powerfully armed in the future than by adhering to the "extreme limit" theory. We have seen the crew of the Huascar nearly annihilated, and we should not forget what might happen to our own men, under similar circumstances. We should not lose sight of the fact that we risk a far greater number of valuable lives in sending our larger ships into action than was the case on board the Huascar; nor that, in sending six smaller vessels into action to attack a Duilio, instead of sending one Inflexible or an Alexandra and a Téméraire, the chances of victory are much greater on our side, while the casualties would be reduced in the same ratio as the relative numbers on each ship. We have honestly endeavoured in these articles to demonstrate the fallacy of the "extreme-limit" policy which animates our Naval Constructors; and we have done this in the hope of awakening the country to a true sense of the actual state of the Navy. The time has come to pause and to consider well what next should be done before the keel of another costly ironclad is laid, so that an efficient personnel may not, in a case of emergency, have to sacrifice both life and limb to make up for the defective state of the matériel placed at its disposal wherewith to defend the interests and the honour of the British Empire.

H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh has this week begun his inspection of the Liverpool District of Coastguard, and its contingent of Naval Reserve men and the two brigades of Naval Artillery Volunteers of Liverpool and Bristol will be inspected by him before he returns to his duties in town, probably next Thursday. After visiting the Resistance, and drill batteries and Coastguard at Liverpool, the Duke proceeds along the Welsh coast, looking in upon the principal places and inspecting the detached corps of Naval Artillery Volunteers, and on reaching Bristol will visit the Dædalus and Formidable, mercantile training-ship, and will return thence to London by rail.

The statement made by Truth, that the cabins of the Lively had been sumptuously furnished and decorated for the Duke and Duchess of Edinburgh, is entirely devoid of foundation. The vessel remains intact as in her last commission. Not a single fitting has been disturbed, or any extra furniture supplied. It is not our intention to contradict all false reports in Truth, but as the above is liable to mislead, we now, after full inquiry, contradict the statement. So far as the appointment of Admiral-Superintendent being a post of "heavy pay and light duty," the Naval Reserves is one of the most important commands, and we believe his Royal Highness will spare no pains to maintain the highest efficiency, and in due course will be able to give a good account of the force placed under his orders. In publishing such unfounded statements, our contemporary is but repeating the tactics pursued when his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh was first appointed to the office of Admiral-Superintendent of Reserves; and on November 10 we felt it a duty to contradict its assertion that great expense had been incurred in the decoration and fitting-up of the office, and we then stated that "nothing whatever had been done to the room occupied by the Admiral, it being precisely as it was when vacated by Admiral Phillimore. Not a single penny has been spent in decorations or furniture on the appointment of the Duke. The statement that permanent officials at the office have been turned out of their rooms is equally false, and we cannot but think that they must have been written with the knowledge that the statements were fabrications. From the first, Truth has opposed the appointment of his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh, and as the real objections are absolutely non-existent, our contemporary appears to have been compelled to manufacture such false statements as those to which we now give the most distinct contradiction. Unfortunately, Truth still persists in belieing its name.

We alluded some time ago to the assistance which had been rendered to the Argentine Confederation by the Constructor's Department at the Admiralty, and possibly, for reasons politic, we appear to take a lively interest in the naval progress of that Republic. Three Commanders of the Argentine Navy are now visitors to this country, and the dockyards and gunnery-ships are to be thrown open to their inspection.

The death of Fleet Surgeon Peter Roe, of Malta Dockyard, was almost sudden, as he was only admitted to the hospital the evening before he died. The deceased officer had only held the appointment since June last, but he had won for himself the esteem of all with whom he was associated. Another sad death at Malta, on the same day, was that of Lieutenant Walter Bathurst, who was only promoted in December, and was on his way home.

Two senior torpedo classes for Naval and Marine officers will be formed on board the Vernon during the present year, and will assemble at 9.30 a.m. on April 7 and July 7 respectively. Officers on half-pay desirous of attending must make application to the Secretary of the Admiralty, not later than ten days prior to the above dates, stating at the same time whether they wish to be provided with accommodation at the College.

Vice-Admiral Coote was at Hong Kong in the Iron Duke on December 17, and intended to leave about the middle of January in the Vigilant, to visit the southern part of the station, and return about the beginning of March.

Commodore Richards was at Ascension in the Boadicea on January 7, and intended to leave for Sierra Leone on January 18. Mails should be forwarded to the West Coast, viâ Liverpool, until February 14 inclusive; and to St. Paul de Loando, by Portuguese mail of March 6 from Lisbon.

The adjudication of Sir Gilbert Blane's medal has lately been made by the presidents of the Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons, and the Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy, and medals have been awarded to Fleet-Surgeons H. F. Norbury, C.B., late of the Active, and W. D. Longfield, late of the Tenedos, both of whom were lately promoted for their services in the Zulu war.

The Wye is to be placed upon the same footing as the Humber and Tyne, as her permanent services will not be required in the Mediterranean during her present commission. She will, therefore, be more under the control of the Director of Transports, and her first duty will be to take stores and a fresh crew for the Antelope to the Mediterranean. Lieutenant Wingfield will complete his three years' command in February, and Lieut. the Hon. Walter Joliffe has been appointed his successor.

We seem to have been wanting when the Samoan troubles took place, for, according to the Standard, no British ship-of-war was present at the time of the outbreak, but orders had been given for the Emerald to be at Samoa in the course of November. Her commanding officer would act in concert with the German ship Albatross and the United States man-of-war Lackawanna, in upholding the authority of King Malietoa, who has been recognised by England, Germany, and America as the lawful Sovereign. We believe the Danae has since been ordered to Samoa, but all was quiet according to last accounts.

The retirement of Lieutenant Charles Eden, which is announced in the Gazette, is at that officer's own request, though his position on the list might have been supposed to give promise of promotion either in 1880 or 1881. He has been senior lieutenant of the Audacious since November, 1879.

Admirals Ryder and de Horsey have had the honour of dining with her Majesty at Osborne during the past week.

In the paragraph in our last issue respecting the reorganisation of the Transport Department of the Admiralty, we inadvertently omitted to include, after Admiral Sir W. Mends, the name of Captain W. A. de V. Brownlow, R.N., C.B., Surveyor of Shipping, who still retains his post.

We recently had to record the untimely death of Dr. Domville from disease contracted in the execution of his duty as Inspector-General in charge at Haslar, and we now learn that numerous friends have considered it desirable to commemorate the services of this distinguished officer by the erection of a memorial at Haslar. An influential committee has been nominated to carry out this object, and we trust that a memorial will result worthy of that most popular officer.

We spoke last week of the unnecessary fuss that was being made about the so-called tattooing of the young Princes' noses on board the Bacchante, and later intelligence confirms our views. It is not the first time, however, that this question of nose-marking has raised a dust in the Navy, and some fifteen years ago a court of inquiry was assembled to examine the noses of the gun-room mess of a ship commanded by Captain Bythesea, V.C. Some youngsters who had joined for their first trip to sea were playfully marked with the broad arrow, and one, in telling the joke in a letter to his father, who was at the Admiralty, was the means of raising a storm. This official thought it an atrocity, and moved the Board to order an inquiry. But after all, it was mere moonshine, and not one of the boys complained when brought before the court, and the marks had almost faded away before the inquiry took place, although it was ordered by telegraph to be held immediately the news got to Whitehall.

Commander Hubert Grenfell, the Junior Naval Attaché for Europe, will, we hear, be relieved of that duty on February 1st, it having been decided that the services of a second Naval Attaché are not required. We have always held that, as the first maritime Power, we are not sufficiently represented abroad, and that it is impossible for one Naval officer to keep himself alive to all that is going on in Continental yards. Captain Nicholson is most energetic, but if he were to be perpetually on the move from one corner of the Continent to another, he could not see everything, and it is surely the interest of England to be fully alive to the progress of other maritime Powers. The United States of America, too, has been much neglected of late, no Naval Attaché having taken up his duty at Washington since Admiral Gore Jones came home on leave, although Captain Arthur was selected for the post some months ago.

Sub-Lieutenant Charles Stewart Smith, now serving in the London, has been awarded the Beaufort testimonial, and Sub-Lieutenant Sturdee has been complimented by their Lordships on the manner in which he passed his examination at the Royal Naval College.

So "Frou-Frou" is to be restored to the boards of her Majesty's ships, and the rustle of the petticoat, the patter of little feet on the poop, and the spooning of the signalman and nursery-maid will again have their place in the interior economy of our men-of-war. Ten years have made the Admiralty forgetful of those causes which led to a stringent order being issued against the residence of women on board ship, and married commanders of training-ships were recently granted the pleasure of their wives' society. And now the Flag Captains at Portsmouth and Devonport have been given permission to shift their residence and take their wives and families on board the flagships. It is a capital thing for the captains, being equivalent to a very considerable addition to their pay, relieving them as it does of house rent and accompanying expenses, but the system was not found to work well in days gone by, and we fail to see any reason for believing that the former objections will be found to have been removed. The establishment of nurseries afloat will give rise to the belief that there really is a "Pinafore" and "Bib" in her Majesty's Fleet.

We understand that the Admiralty has requested the Treasury to sanction an allowance of 3s. a day extra pay, being made to all officers who were landed for service with the Naval Brigade during the late active operations in Zululand. That they should receive some allowance to cover expenses, to which they were necessarily put in equipping themselves for land service, is no more than just, and we trust no hitch in making the grant may occur at the Treasury.

The Dryad, after having undergone extensive repairs at Devonport, is found to have a defect in her bows, and is in a leaky condition. The leak is by no means alarming, and it is hoped that it will grow less on the passage out, but if it still exists on her arrival at Bombay, she will be docked and have new timbers put in where the defective ones now are.

We are glad to hear that Lieutenant L. H. Cross, R.M.L.I., whose promotion has been suspended for some months in consequence of his having delayed passing his examination, has now passed the Board. He has, however, lost five steps, which, in a seniority corps with an age retirement, is a serious matter, but he now stands first for promotion to captain.

In noticing last week a letter which appeared in a daily paper, respecting the alleged improper handling of the Alberta, we stated that she simply followed the rule of the road in going across the bows of the Ryde packet. Nervous passengers may be excused for rushing into print, but the skipper of the packet must have known that, with the Alberta's superior speed, she could safely cut across the packet's bows without fear of any collision. Captain Thomson, of the Victoria and Albert, happened to be on board the Alberta, and his reputation for judgment and skill is a sufficient guarantee that the Alberta was not guilty of any unseamanlike manœuvres. Under the name of the Alberta will be found a communication on the subject, which we have received from the Admiralty.

Commander James Evans has been selected from a large number of candidates for the command of a mercantile training-ship at Sydney, and we congratulate the management on having secured the services of so able an officer.

Major G. F. Blake, R.M.L.I., officiating Deputy-Judge-Advocate, has been appointed secretary to the Committee now sitting at the Admiralty for considering what is to be the future of the Corps of Royal Marines.

The First Lord of the Admiralty has consented to preside at the Court of the Governors of the Dreadnought Seamen's Hospital, at Willis's Rooms, on Wednesday, February 25.

Rear-Admiral Gough, C.B., on retirement, received from the Atalantic Steam Conference an expression of cordial thanks for his courtesy, &c., during the time he held the office of Emigration Officer at Liverpool, under the Board of Trade. We understand that the case of this officer will be again brought before the House of Commons early next session by Mr. E. Ashley, who, together with Admiral Sir John Hay, has already drawn attention to the treatment he has received at the hands of the Board of Trade.

The next examination of candidates for admission to the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, will commence in London on Thursday, July 1, 1880, the medical examination taking place at the Academy on the previous day. Applications cannot be received unless made in strict accordance with paragraph 4 of the Regulations issued with General Order 89 of 1878. The successful candidates will be required to join the Royal Military Academy about September 24 next.

Lieutenant-Colonel Baker Russell, C.B., 13th Hussars, arrived home on Thursday from the Cape, on vacating commanding of the Transvaal Field Force. Colonel Baker issued the following farewell address previous to his departure :—"The Transvaal Field Force being about to be broken up, the officer commanding desires that the following may be published in regimental and company orders,—Officers and non-commissioned officers of the Transvaal Field Force, you have been called upon to operate in a country the characteristics of which are violent storms, well-nigh a tropical sun, rugged ground, and too often a scarcity of water. You have been opposed by a foe inured to such conditions from childhood, and bold in his own strongholds. You have utterly routed your enemy, and you have surmounted every difficulty with a cheerfulness and an alacrity, that were to be anticipated from those who form a portion of the armed strength of England and her colonies. My share has been the honour of commanding you; I beg to thank you for having rendered this a pleasure.—Signed, B. C. RUSSELL, Lieutenant-Colonel commanding Transvaal Field Force."

We learn from Belfast that Major-General H. D'O. Torrens, C.B., has arrived there, and assumed command of the district, on appointment.

There is a hitch about the new forage cap, and we would advise our readers not to provide themselves with it until they know for certain that it is to be adopted. It has dawned upon somebody at the eleventh hour that the cap is as unsuitable for service as any pattern which could possibly be devised. Why not do away with the peak altogether? The cap in use in Rifle regiments is smart, soldier-like, and —this is after all of first importance in any article of military uniform—it is portable, and can be packed in the smallest possible space.

We regret to state that Colonel R. H. Travers, half-pay, late 48th Regiment, whose resignation of his appointment as Commandant of the School of Musketry, Hythe, and Inspector-General of Musketry, we announced some weeks ago, died yesterday morning, after a long illness, borne with soldierly fortitude. Colonel Travers served the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, and was present with the 10th Regiment during the whole of the siege operations before Mooltan, action of Soorjkoond, and surrender of the fortress of Mooltan; afterwards present at the battle of Goojerat (medal with two clasps). He joined the Army December 9, 1845; became colonel January 12, 1875; and received the Hythe appointment May 1, 1878.

There are good reasons for believing that an Easter Volunteer field-day, on the scale of those inaugurated by Lord Ranelagh at Brighton in the early days of the movement, and continued for many years, will be held on the Sussex Downs on March 29. If it can be successfully arranged, it is anticipated that some 25,000 or 30,000 men will take part in it. A committee of the metropolitan commanding officers has been appointed, to ascertain, and report to a future meeting, if it is practicable. The discussions at the commanding officers' meetings are held with closed doors, and the official report furnished does not indicate the direction in which the committee will commence its work, but there are signs that the Brighton Railway Company is inclined to convey the troops, this spring,

Though the returns of the Volunteer Force do not bear out the anticipations of the Secretary of State for War, in the address delivered to the Liverpool Rifle Brigade, in the early part of last month, they cannot be regarded as otherwise than very satisfactory, for they prove that even a long period of commercial depression, which has affected every industry throughout the kingdom, combined with the disquieting rumours of proposed changes, have not in the slightest degree impeded the vitality of the organisation. On the contrary, the Force exhibits signs of expansion, is now stronger in number and efficiency than at any former period, and has attained a position on which it is much to be congratulated. It is to be regretted that the mounted arms, the necessity of which, in modern warfare, has received constant demonstration, exhibit a further falling-off, as compared with previous years. Roughly taken, they do not number more than 400 efficients. The competition of the Yeomanry may, in some degree, account for this, but we cannot help thinking that the real cause is the inadequacy of the Government grant to meet the heavy expense which must necessarily be incurred in conforming to the qualifications exacted Particularly is it to be deplored that the Mounted Rifles present so poor an appearance. According to the Army List, there are two regiments—the Dumfriesshire and the Roxburgh—both attached to the administrative rifle battalions of those counties. The former returns no efficients, while, curiously, the Roxburgh troop has just as many men who have failed to get through their work as it has efficients. A striking proof of the effect of the "recommendations" is afforded in the fact that the non-efficients of this arm numbered only 14, out of 111 enrolled in 1878, whereas they are now 47. The War-Office Committee received urgent representations on the necessity for an increase of the capitation grant for the Light Horse and Mounted Rifles; but while stating that it was "impossible to make any recommendation which would not involve considerable expenditure," recognised the fact that, in their opinion, the Light Horse could not "be efficiently supported without the assistance of other funds beyond those of the present capitation grant." The reason for the diminished numbers is thus obvious, and we should not be surprised if the force in another year or so was confined to the Artillery, Engineers, and Rifles. The Hertford Light Horse corps still appears in the Army List, but as there are no officers nor efficients, it may be assumed to have no existence. The Fife corps has 84 efficients, the Forfar (attached to the former), 92; the celebrated 1st Hunts, 135; and the Lincoln troop, 62. Altogether, there are in the Light Horse 509 sabres; but the large number of 136 non-efficients brings the arm down to 373. The three other arms exhibit considerable increase in numbers and efficiency; the certificated officers and serjeants of the entire force number 17,079, compared with 16,725, and the inspection attendance has advanced from 168,748 to 173,177. The inspection states have for many years formed an important feature of the returns, but we think an item of equal interest would be a statement of the numbers attending camps of instruction. This is now becoming so important a part of the military training of the year, that much advantage would be gained if the information could be furnished in the returns.

The following appeared in last night's Gazette:—"9th Lancers: Serjeant the Honourable Richard Hamilton Westenra, from the 4th Dragoon Guards, to be Second Lieutenant, vice Bell-Martin, promoted." Second Lieutenant Westenra is a son of the third Baron Rossmore, and brother of the present peer. He was born May 2, 1854, entered the 1st Royal Lancashire Militia as sub-lieutenant, May 9, 1874, and after a year's Militia service enlisted in the Army with a view of qualifying for a commission. It may be noted that a second ex-subaltern of the 1st Lancashire, Colonel Stanley's regiment—Second Lieutenant B. W. R. Ussher, 80th Foot—adopted a similar course, and joined the ranks of a Cavalry regiment in order to obtain his commission. Lord Rossmore was himself in the 9th Lancers previous to his succession to the peerage, he having joined the regiment as a sub-lieutenant, December 4, 1872. He left it for the 1st Life Guards, on his succeeding his brother in the title, and ultimately resigned his commission.

SOUTH AFRICAN NOTES.

(FROM A NON-MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.)

Pretoria, Dec. 17.

The 4th and 80th were to have marched from this for the port of embarkation, 40 days' march to Durban, but the news that the Boers at Wonderfontein had not broken up was considered good grounds for a hasty order to them to stand fast, to their great disappointment, and to the joy of some Pretorians at all events. The measures taken by Sir Garnet Wolseley to prevent a surprise have provoked a great deal of criticism, but we should have looked very small and foolish if the Boers had made a dash—the hot-headed horsemen among them—and got hold of the town, or part of it, for a quarter of an hour even, no matter what punishment they received afterwards; besides, I think the ostentatious parade of grand guards and posts of horse and foot at all the approaches, and the disposition of vedettes and sentries, were made with an eye to prevention and as a wholesome warning. Certain it is that a stranger would have fancied on his arrival here, that an enemy was coming on to attack the British camp and capital of the Transvaal. Between 300 and 400 men are engaged night and day in guarding the roads, but the cavalry have now been called in, and the infantry will probably follow. The field-day on Thursday, which was commenced by rather a slow march-past, was pretty, but there were not many to look at it. It is not often an officer, Royal Engineers, appears in the proud position of command of a complete little army of the three arms, as Colonel Harrison did. You will see it was a respectable display, and it is only to be lamented that there were materials for it in such a remote region. A very interesting part of the proceedings was the ceremony of decorating Commandant D'Arcy with the V.C., and Sir Garnet did his part gracefully well. D'Arcy is a fine, tall, soldierly looking fellow, with a hereditary right to be considered a fighting man, for he comes of a combatant family of Anglo-Irish D'Arcys, some of whom live to be proud of their relatives' honours, and to tell of the old days when they won only honourable scars, ere there were showers of Victoria Crosses over every battle-field. Without any thought of crabbing the acts of the gallant men who have earned the much-prized distinction out here, I may be allowed to express the opinion that not one of them would have lived to get it had they been opposed to any enemy but Kafirs, for the latter are, without exception, the worst shots in the world; and the feats of taking up wounded men, dismounting and helping up fallen comrades, &c., within a few yards of their foes, would simply have been frustrated by a rifle bullet in any other country. If a soldier wants the V.C., he can get it in a South African scrimmage on more easy terms than in any part of the world where British soldiers are called on to serve. Here is what Sir Garnet said:—

> "Commandant D'Arcy, I have to-day to perform a very pleasant duty. It has been my great privilege to affix the Victoria Cross, the honour coveted most of all by a soldier, and the highest which her Majesty can bestow, upon the breast of many a brave soldier since I arrived in South Africa; but upon no former occasion have I experienced greater pleasure or satisfaction in doing so than in now affixing this Victoria Cross upon the breast of one who has conducted himself in the distinguished and signal way in which we have just heard. I am sure, Mr. D'Arcy, that not only in South Africa, but in every other colony of the British Empire, it will now be understood, from the gift of this decoration by her Majesty, that her Majesty does not reserve this honour for the Imperial troops alone, but is anxious to distinguish the courage and devotion of the soldiers of her Colonial Empire."

The 21st, who are coming down by the northern road from the Oliphant Valley, escorting the guns of the disbanded Transvaal Artillery, and the waggons, &c., of the late Secocoeni expedition, have been impeded by the rivers, but they are near at hand, and they will, at some remote period, perhaps, be followed by the 94th, who are now blissfully located in the Leydenburg district; but at present we have one 9-pounder battery, one regiment of heavy cavalry (King's Dragoon Guards), the 4th (Bray's battalion), the 2nd-21st (Hazlerigg in command), the 58th, the 80th, and the 94th in the Transvaal, and a heavy field-train, with medical, commissariat, and ordnance companies, and establishments complete, for which there will be a pretty little bill to pay in this country of most magnificent prices. Sir Garnet's good-luck—the ancients called it by another name, "Est nullum numen, si absit Prudentia"—has been conspicuous in the Secocoeni business, for he has escaped the bad weather and the mortality of man and horse, of which all men's mouths were prophetic; and it is only since he came back the horse-sickness has been much felt, and now the chief himself, Lieutenant-Colonel Brackenbury, Colonel Russell, Dr. Russell, Captain Fraser, Major McCalmont, A.D.C., Lieutenant Creagh, A.D.C., &c., have lost horses which they rode in Secocoeni's country, and in some cases the deaths have been almost instantaneous. Mr. Moore, the Veterinary-Surgeon of the King's Dragoon Guards, has given much care to investigate this mysterious malady, and Surgeon-Major Jackson has not thought it beneath him to assist in the inquiry into this scourge of the equine race in this part of the world. The King's Dragoon Guards are really to be pitied; officers and men are without kits, and cannot get boots or necessaries, and their uniforms, &c., are a mass of rags; nor are some of the other regiments in a much better condition. Fortunately, the Boers in the Transvaal and the Free State are in no mood to encourage desertion, or the Gazette would be fuller than it is. Drunkenness is still a curse to our troops, and the state of things at Heidelberg, where one-half a detachment has been guarding the other half, is disgraceful to any army, and particularly hurtful to our good name at this juncture. I say it advisedly, that it will be quite impossible to maintain discipline if officers are kept in their present state of impotence, and the good people at home must be prepared to hear that fifty per cent. of the troops are in such a state as to need the other fifty per cent. to look after them. Fortunately, this is not always so, but when a battalion marches into a station there is certain to be an outbreak of drink, and officers are obliged to wink at what they cannot punish or prevent. Thanks to the climate and good food, there is not much sickness,—about 5·5 per cent. here, only. With the summer heats and more fruit, I fear there will be higher rates of hospital admissions and more fatal cases. I hear that Lieutenant Cowper, H.M.'s 94th, a young officer of distinguished gallantry and activity, remarkable for strength and stature, has sustained severe injuries by a fall on the rocks in one of Secocoeni's ravines, near the pass where his detachment is stationed.

THE POSITION OF THE VOLUNTEER FORCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—So much has been written lately in the Press about the Volunteers and the effect the recent Committee will have on the Force generally, that I trust you will find space for the following remarks, written by one who can say conscientiously that his one aim for years past has been to maintain his regiment at the highest standard of efficiency, and to officer it by gentlemen, not only socially but professionally qualified to command their men. But what a herculean task, indeed, has mine been. Hard as I have striven, I find at the present moment that half my commissions are vacant, and that it is an utter impossibility to get any men of the proper stamp to accept the appointments, owing to the great expense and vast amount of work that is entailed. The War Office seems to put every possible obstacle in my way; and, instead of decreasing, my troubles have increased tenfold since a couple of Volunteer officers—Lord Bury and Col. Lloyd-Lindsay—joined the Staff in Pall Mall. In every conceivable manner am I handicapped, and not content with driving out those good men I have got, the War Office is for ever at me, trying to induce me to send in the names of others to fill the gaps. There is no assistance vouchsafed; if I want men, I must find them myself. Previous to joining the Volunteers I served for nearly a quarter of a century in a Line regiment, and in a weak moment was induced to accept a Volunteer command. But I little knew when I took the position what my responsibilities were, and I become more convinced each day I live that all that is faulty in the Volunteer organisation is due to the War Office ignorance and War Office ignorance only. The men of the Volunteers are admirable; the officers—at least so my experience teaches me—are very anxious to do all they can to make themselves efficient. But what encouragement have they? Simply none. All they have to do is to put their hands in their pockets seemingly, and to compensate for the want of official encouragement by all sorts of calls upon their purses, which, though they may appear slight in themselves, nevertheless sum up in the course of twelve months, and represent a rather important figure. There was a committee assembled at the War Office lately on Volunteer organisation. And what did that committee do? It issued a report. And I ask any man endowed with the ordinary amount of common-sense who has perused that report,—did he ever read a more disappointing Blue-book? That committee, after deliberating for some months, has done absolutely nothing for the Volunteers, who are in a worse position now than ever they were. Previous to the committee reporting, a commanding officer was enabled to say to an eligible gentleman whom he desired to secure as an officer,—"I believe that in a short time commissions will be sought after, and that you will be glad you joined, for a committee is sitting at the War Office, which will offer all sorts of inducements to men to become officers." But how does the case stand at present? Volunteer officers cannot but see that they occupy a worse position than ever. It was only the other day that a most hard-working captain of my regiment tendered his resignation, and along with it sent in that of his subaltern. I wrote, requesting both gentlemen to dine with me and talk the matter over. They came, and on my asking them the reason for their withdrawal, they both admitted that they could not stand any longer the insults their position as Volunteer officers thrust upon them. In uniform and out of it they were, they said, taunted with being Volunteers. Tom, Dick, and Harry have been accepted as commissioned officers by the War Office, and men of position cannot tolerate the sneers and jeers to which the Volunteer uniform subjects them. Thus the case stands at present, and I do not mind confessing that, hard as I have laboured for some years, I am becoming completely disheartened, and I have it seriously in contemplation to throw up a Service which seems to be associated with hard work and unceasing annoyance; but before doing so, I trust you will afford me an opportunity of making known my views, in hopes that some in office may see them, and endeavour to do something to get the blots removed. Apologising for the length of my letter,—I am, &c.,

A Volunteer C.O., Late a F.O. of the Line.

THE ROYAL MARINES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—With reference to your remarks in your paper of the 17th inst. regarding the Royal Marines "having, in the reign of Queen Anne, contributed to the establishment of the Royal Family on the throne of these realms, as acknowledged by the good old King William IV., in grateful terms," they would, no doubt, be ready to do the same again, if—which God forbid!—it should be necessary, and it is unfortunate that through the whim of any one a change should either be contemplated or permitted in this gallant corps. There are no troops in the world equal in physical strength, appearance, drill, or physical discipline to the Royal Marine Artillery or the Royal Marines. They should not be in any way changed, nor their stations; they were placed there for certain reasons, and after every consideration, and possibly by heads wiser and more experienced, in all probability, than any at the present moment. They should be kept entirely distinct and separate, as at present, and their numerical strength increased if possible. The services of both branches are absolutely necessary in her Majesty's Navy, and no man-of-war ought to be allowed to go to sea without a strong detachment of these admirable men, for no one knows when their services may be required. Nothing need be said about the officers; their scientific attainments are beyond dispute, and equal to those of the most scientific corps. It is the height of folly, in the present state of Europe, to disturb the minds of this corps, composed of men of such a superior class and education, by agitating so momentous a question, and that, too, at a time when there is difficulty in obtaining recruits for the Line or any other branch of the Service. Such men as the Royal Marine Artillery and Royal Marines can never be replaced. It is easier to destroy an edifice than to construct it. All praise is due to the Admiralty for their administration of the corps, and if any changes are made, no doubt they will be to elevate the officers and benefit the men.—I am, &c.,

Royal Marine.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—"A friend in need is a friend indeed," and I trust that in the case to which I now draw your attention you will prove a helper, and thus also move others to action in behalf of those who, for Service reasons, cannot use the ordinary mean to help themselves. I refer to the proceedings of the Admiralty in the promotion of navigating sub-lieutenants. In the recent list of promotions of sub-lieutenants to the Lieutenants' List, there appear the names of two junior officers who were turned over from the navigating class to the naval line, thus placing them over the heads of a considerable number of those who were their seniors in the Navigating branch. Surely it was not their Lordships' original intention to create such glaring anomalies in the Service, as it was in their power to have "grafted in" the whole of the Navigating Sub-lieutenants, or to date such promotions after those senior to them on the Navigating List who may merit promotion. The result now is that a navigating sub-lieutenant, in every respect qualified for promotion, and of seven years' seniority, has (along with several others) has had these two sub-lieutenants—much his juniors—promoted before him. Can the Admiralty believe that such eccentric proceedings are calculated to inspire respect for the Board by the Service over which they preside? Can they expect zeal and carefulness over Government property to be exercised by officers experiencing such treatment at their hands? Ordinary mortals will answer, "Certainly not." The case I have submitted to you resolves itself into the following questions,—What have these senior navigating sub-lieutenants done or left undone, that they should have their juniors preferred before them? What important service had these two sub-lieutenants rendered, that they should thus be promoted over their qualified seniors? It is to be hoped that on the meeting of Parliament, a few Members may be found ready to require an answer to these plain questions.—I am, &c.,

An Interested One.

The Army.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards. The depôt—strength, 2 officers, 87 men—has proceeded to Colchester to assist in the charge of the horses of the 3rd Hussars, to which regiment it is attached.

2nd Dragoon Guards. Capt. Doyle has been ordered to join at Sandhurst on the 1st proximo, to resume his studies at the Staff College, on his return from service in Zululand.

3rd Dragoon Guards. Col. Baker Russell, C.B., in his Sekukuni despatch writes:—"To my Staff officer, Capt. Stewart, 3rd Dragoon Guards, my thanks are most especially due. The energy and power of hard work displayed by him were marvellous, and the skill, tact, and good temper he showed in dealing with the very various and conflicting elements of which the force under my command was composed were beyond praise. I attribute, in great measure, the complete success of the battle of the 28th inst. to the invaluable aid I received from Capt. Stewart."

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers). The regiment started from Umballa on Sept. 30, and the two following days proceeded by rail to Jhelum, then by march to near Attock, which was reached on Oct. 17. After three days' halt, the regiment was ordered on to join Gen. Bright's force in Afghanistan. Peshawur was reached on Oct. 23. Only remaining one day there, to complete equipment, Col. Fryer pushed on through the Khyber and over the frontier. The march through the Khyber Pass was a very hard one, and supplies and water very scarce. The head-quarters are now at Jellalabad, and one squadron, under Capt. Burnley, is stationed at Basawul. On Dec. 3, Col. Fryer marched out with the two head-quarters squadrons as far as Futtehabad, and on the 4th took over the person of Yakoob Khan, the ex-Ameer of Cabul. The escort brought the State prisoner to Jellalabad, Barikhab, and Basawul, where he was handed over to a fresh escort, consisting of Capt. Burnley's squadron and one squadron of 3rd Bengal Cavalry, under Major Mackenzie, By them the ex-Ameer was safely conducted to Dacca and Lundi-Kotal. On Dec. 10 and subsequent days three more State prisoners, including Gihayah, the ex-Ameer's father-in-law, and his Prime Minister, were escorted in like manner by the Carabiniers. Great secrecy was observed during the march, and no attempt at rescue was made, although the country passed through by Yakoob while under the escort of the Carabiniers, has the name of being the most turbulent part of his late dominions. The officers with the head-quarters at Jellalabad are:—Lieut.-Col. Fryer, Major Marriott, Capts. Calvert, Graham, Fife, and Porter; Lieuts. Hallowes, Douglas-Hamilton, and Heywood-Jones; 2nd Lieuts. Des Voeux and Garratt; Lieut. and Adjt. Weston, Qrmr. Tomlinson, and Surg.-Major Davies and Surg. Gormley, A.M.D. The officers at Basawul are—Capt. Burnley, Lieut. Sprot, 2nd Lieuts. Long, Owen, and Twiss. The depôt at Umballa is under the charge of Rdgmr. Mayes.

4th Hussars. Col. Russell writes in his Sekukuni despatch:—"My acting orderly officers for the day, Comy. Reeves; Capt. Spratt, 29th Regt.; Capt. Lawrell, 4th Hussars (killed); and Capt. Christian, Frontier Light Horse, rendered me most valuable assistance, and carried my orders to the different parts of the field under a very heavy fire with the greatest coolness and accuracy. I deeply regret the death of Capt. Lawrell. The Service has to deplore the loss of a most promising cavalry officer." A correspondent writes:—"I am anxious to bring before the authorities, and your readers generally the case of a private soldier now serving in the 4th Hussars at Shorncliffe, who, in the opinion of every officer and man in the regiment, earned the Victoria Cross as fully as any man ever did, It was during the summer of 1876 that this man's heroic conduct gained the admiration of his superior officers, and he was with a few others publicly thanked for the same in General Orders by the Commander-in-Chief in India. At the time referred to, a strong detachment of troops from the Rawul Pindi Brigade was located at a new encampment called Gareal, on the Murree Hills; and cholera of a most virulent type broke out amongst them. The usual measures for isolating the afflicted were at once adopted, and volunteers called for to attend them. To fully appreciate the heroic conduct of those who, like my client, volunteer for such a duty, one should understand the paralysing effect an outbreak of cholera produces on all in its neighbourhood. The inhabitants shut up their houses and betake themselves away to escape from the dread disease. None but those who may be induced to wait upon the sick and dying are allowed in the vicinity; the men who have money in the regimental savings bank draw it out to provide dissipation in which to drown the horrors of 'cholera camp,' and the adoption of various measures of precaution, and the introduction of sports and amusements to divert the minds of the men, only suffice to prevent general demoralisation. The man who at such a critical juncture volunteers to undertake hospital duties, and for a time shuts himself up with the dying and the dead, resigning himself to what most men view as certain death, exhibits courage of a truly genuine kind that should meet with substantial reward from those whose province it is to encourage and foster such gallant and disinterested conduct in the Army. As already stated, this man (who knows nothing whatever of my intention of writing this letter) received the thanks of the Commander-in-Chief, but such a compliment, though highly esteemed, is really of no practical value to a private soldier. The subject of these remarks served in the H.E.I.C.'s Service before and during the Mutiny, and was present with the Bengal Fusiliers at the storming of the Cashmere Gate and subsequent three days' street-fighting, for which he wears the medal with clasp, though, having taken his discharge on the amalgamation, he was not allowed to reckon the service. Surely the time has now arrived when these men, who nearly in every instance re-enlisted, might be allowed to reap the benefit of their former excellent services, rendered, too, at a most critical moment. There cannot be many of them left now, and it would be a graceful way of rewarding those who fought gallantly for their Queen and country."

9th Lancers. Referring to the services of Major Bushman in the Sekukuni campaign, Col. Russell says:—"Major Bushman, 9th Lancers, commanded the eastern column of attack, and though much hampered by the dilatory unpunctuality of the Swazie contingent under his command, yet topped the mountain in good time, and did excellent service."

13th Hussars. Sir Garnet Wolseley writes in his Sekukuni despatch:—"Of Col. Russell, who had his horse shot under him, I cannot speak too highly. The force under his command, which may be roughly estimated as consisting of about 2,200 British and about 10,000 natives, was hastily collected from all sides, and, where native levies are concerned, it is no easy matter to plan and carry out an extensive operation, extending over some miles of a very difficult mountain country, with the skill, accuracy, and success which have characterised Col. Russell's operations here." The correspondent of the Transvaal Argus writes, on Nov. 28, 1879, 4 p.m.:—"This morning, at 3 a.m., under cover of darkness, Col. Baker-Russell's column, consisting of the 21st and 94th Regts., Transvaal Artillery, Ferreira's Horse, Border Light Horse, Transvaal Mounted Rifles, and Rustenburg Contingent, together with the Swazie Contingent, advanced in the direction of the principal stronghold. The resistance displayed by the enemy was most stubborn. Secreted in the fastnesses of the rocky stronghold, and defying the deadly missiles of the Artillery, Sekukuni's faithful adherents held their post steadily and perseveringly, and with a vigour which was worthier of a better cause. Col. Baker-Russell was, up to 11 a.m., still in hopes that the enemy would surrender; but towards noon all hopes of settlement had vanished. At 11.30 the two companies of the 94th Regt., which had throughout the morning engaged successively the front and right faces of the stronghold, moved by the rear, and in company with Capt. McGregor's detachment of Engineers joined the head-quarters, which was drawn up fronting the left face. Towards noon two rockets were exploded, which was the signal to attack. Col. Russell, placing himself at the head of the column, and drawing his sabre, dashed up the precipitous heights, followed by the C company of the 21st Fusiliers. The mounted troops, under Carrington and Ferreira, moved by the rear, and on reaching the rocks, dismounted, and accompanied by a company of the 94th, under Capt. Froom, succeeded in gaining the summit of the stronghold. Col. Russell, who led the attack from the left, had some narrow escapes. His horse was shot under him, his A.D.C., Capt. Lawrell, killed by his side, and his orderly, a soldier of the 94th, dangerously wounded, whilst ascending the heights. On the man calling for assistance, Col. Russell found his revolver useless, but succeeded in dealing with his sword a death-blow to his opponent, and dashing on, reached the summit in safety. A cheer, such as British soldiers only can give, proclaimed to all below that Sekukuni's power was no longer supreme, and that his rugged fastness was in our hands."

14th Hussars. The two officers who have been ordered to join the 9th Lancers at Cabul are Lieuts. Owen and Hamilton. The latter was aide-de-camp to Sir Sam Browne in the last campaign in Afghanistan. Lieut. Hemery is likely to arrange any exchange to a regiment in England.

17th Lancers. Capt. Duke is about to be appointed to the adjutancy of the Suffolk Yeomanry Cavalry.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

An ingenious instrument for measuring the recoil of a gun and recording its speed at every instant of motion has been invented by Capt. H. S. S. Watkin, and has undergone some preliminary tests, prior to completion. The recoil is shown in the shape of a curve on a diagram drawn by an oscillating pendulum.

The Woolwich correspondent of the Morning Post says:—"The important post of Superintendent of the Royal Laboratory here will become vacant on March 1 next by the retirement of Col. G. H. Fraser, R.A., whose five years' tenure of Staff office then expires. His probable successor is Col. F. Lyon, R.A., who was formerly assistant-superintendent of the same department."

Col. Russell, in his Sekukuni despatch, mentions "Capt. Knox, Royal Artillery, commanding Transvaal Artillery, who handled his guns, manned by troops trained to this branch of the service comparatively but a short time, with a skill that was as creditable to himself as to his men;" whilst we are further informed that "Major Carrington speaks in the highest terms of the assistance received from his staff officer, Capt. Maurice, R.A." Sir Garnet Wolseley, in forwarding Col. Russell's despatch, mentions the names of officers who have shown special zeal. He says:—"In the organisation and concentration of the forces engaged in these operations, and in all the many complex arrangements required for supplying them with stores, food, &c., during the campaign, I have received the most efficient and able assistance from Lieut.-Col. H. Brackenbury, Royal Artillery, who is acting as my chief of the staff. Capt. Maurice, Royal Artillery, my camp commandant, acted as Staff officer to one of the attacking columns, and did excellent service until he was unfortunately wounded. My aides-de-camp, Major M'Calmont, 7th Hussars, and Lieut. A. G. Creagh, Royal Artillery, both performed their duties to my entire satisfaction."

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Lieut. J. C. Macgregor is specially mentioned in Col. Russell's Secocoeni despatch.

The head-quarters of the 33rd Company moved from the Citadel, Plymouth, to the Raglan Barracks, Devonport, on Wednesday.

Col. G. S. Tilley arrived home from Mauritius on Thursday in the mail steamer Balmoral Castle, having been relieved in his duties as commanding R.E. at that station by Col. C. W. Barry.

Grenadier Guards. Lieut.-Col. Hon. G. P. H. Villiers arrived home from the Cape on Thursday in the steamer Balmoral Castle, having been on special service since early last year.

4th King's Own. Col. Baker Russell, in his despatch on the taking of Sekukuni's stronghold, writes:—"Lieut. Hutchinson, 4th Regt., in charge of small-arm ammunition train, showed the greatest foresight and common sense in supplying the different attacks wiih ammunition, the supply of which he never allowed to slacken for a moment."

16th Regiment. The detachment of the 1st Batn. at Castlebar, under command of Capt. Young, proceeded by rail to Athlone on Monday, and rejoined head-quarters.

21st Fusiliers. The 2nd Batn. lost three men in the storming of Sekukuni's stronghold, viz.:—Corpl. P. McNally, and Privates W. Reston and H. Donohoe. The following were wounded, viz.:—Colour-Serjt. G. Finch, wound of head; Corpl. J. Seedham, wound of side; Privates T. Brittan, wound of right elbow; B. Barnett, wound of forehead; A. Dale, wound of right knee-cap; W. Durham, wound of left forearm; P. Farrell, wound of right arm and ribs; P. Gray, wound of arm; W. Law, wound of right arm; S. Morrison, J. Rennie, and J. Robinson, sent to duty; A. Wilson, wound of right eye; and A. Witty, wound of both eyes. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Hazlerigg is mentioned in Col. Russell's despatch. Extract of a letter from an officer in the Transvaal, dated Dec. 6, 1879:—"The late fight at the taking of Sekukuni's stronghold was a very dashing affair. It lasted six hours, on the morning of Nov. 28. Col. Baker Russell led the troops up the mountain. Lieut.-Col. Hazelrigg (son-in-law of Mr. Orr Ewing, M.P. for Dumbartonshire), and in command of the 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers gave, in a stentorian voice, the order, 'Form for attack,' and it was done with a will against the 'Fighting Kopie' or hill. The pipes playing, 'Scots wae hae,' skirmishers firing away in front, the 94th in support, the Swazies came on after the red coats; and what with the rattling of the musketry, the artillery fire, the cheering of the men, the defiant yells of the Kaffirs, and the loud music of the pipes, the noise and excitement was tremendous, the smoke rolling also from the burning kraals below. At length Col. Russell and Capt. Miller Gordon, of the 21st, came down the mountain, and reported to Sir Garnet Wolseley below that the Kopie was taken, with some loss of one officer and men, and great loss to the enemy. Sekukuni was captured in a cave."

37th Regiment is under orders of readiness to move from Pembroke to Aldershot.

41st Regiment. The move of the regiment from Aldershot to Chatham is expected to be carried out on Friday next.

ROYAL MARINES.

Lieut. A. H. Des Barres has been promoted to be Captain, vice Despard, removed to half-pay on appointment as Barrackmaster of the Chatham Division, vice Cooper, retired.

Admiral Sir Cooper Key, having long been an advocate for the abolition, or suppression, of the Royal Marine Artillery, in its distinct character, it is by no means surprising that his appointment as chairman of a committee appointed to inquire into the position of this branch of the Royal Marines is looked upon by the corps as ominous. As an old gunnery officer, and one of the originators of the higher training of our naval officers and seamen in gunnery, he has for many years held that the time has gone by for maintaining, at great cost, a special branch of Marine Artillery. Since that corps was established, it has been customary, not only to pass a large proportion of our seamen through a course of gunnery, but even the Light Infantry Marines also have their course at each divisional battery. But Sir Cooper Key is too far-seeing a man to advocate the total abolition of so efficient a corps as the Marine Artillery, and as both officers and men have been brought to their present state of perfection at the cost of the Navy, he is not one to advise their being handed over to the Army, as has been hinted. Far more probable is it that a redistribution of the Artillery will be made, and that the "blue" division will be amalgamated with the "reds." It is true that the Navy has looked upon the splendid barracks at Eastney as being capable of being turned to advantage as the one great central school of Naval gunnery, but it is not unlikely that that idea will have to be abandoned, and that the depôt at Deal will be abolished, and the whole of the Marine corps be blended, the "blues" being merged into the other divisions, their special training being discontinued. If this be so, the result of the committee will be to effect a saving on the course of training, and by the abolition of the Walmer establishment, the whole corps of Royal Marines being quartered at Chatham, Portsmouth, Gosport, and Plymouth. Any large reduction in the numbers to be borne will not, I may feel assured, be advocated by the committee.—Western Morning News.

57th Regiment. The London correspondent of the Irish Times writes:—"Lord Gifford, who brought home the despatches from Sir Garnet Wolseley announcing the capture, after an eighteen days' hunt, of Cetewayo, has received the reduced honorarium of £300. Weeks ago I mentioned that the War Office and the Treasury concurred in opinion that the time had arrived for cutting down, if not altogether abolishing, the old standard solatium of £500, and in future the bearer of despatches conveying important intelligence need not start from the scene of action with an impression that any pecuniary emolument awaits his arrival at the English War Office. Lord Gifford, however, won't fare so badly after all. Arrangements are in progress to secure him an appointment under the Colonial Office. While in Cyprus, as one of Sir Garnet Wolseley's aides-de-camp, he was offered by the Colonial Secretary an advantageous and lucrative berth, but hearing of the Isandula disaster and of his old regiment, the 57th, being ordered to the Cape, he telegraphed to Sir M. H. Beach, declining the appointment, and rejoining the comrades of his younger days, he took second in command of Barrow's Horse on the frontier, and when Sir Garnet Wolseley arrived there was again taken on the staff."

61st Regiment. Lieut. Tatham is exchanging to the 1st West India Regiment.

67th Regiment. The Standard says:—"Owing to the restriction as to the presence of special correspondents with the troops in Afghanistan, many very gallant actions on the part of our soldiers have been passed over with the barest of official mention. Among them was the defence of a convoy by sixty men of the 67th Regiment against an attack by upwards of a thousand Afghans, a defence which has been characterised by some of the Indian papers as not unworthy of a place by the side of Rorke's Drift. We have received the following particulars from a correspondent. On Nov. 10 a party of Major-Gen. Macpherson's brigade, consisting of a lieutenant, four serjeants, and 56 men of the 67th Regt., four sepoys, 28th Punjabee, and a trooper of the 12th Bengal Cavalry, a mounted orderly, under the command of Capt. Poole, 67th Regt., were proceeding with 40 camels to the village of Doaba, in the 'Tagao country,' after forage. When in sight of the village they were prevented from advancing with the camels on account of an immense convoy of Afghan camels laden with merchandise being in the pass. A more precipitous pass, or a more awkward place in which to attack, it would be impossible to conceive. All sharp rocks and cliffs, towering away with scarcely a foot-hold for a mule, and utterly impossible for animals to pass each other. The force had no sooner entered, and Capt. Poole with about twenty men climbed the hill to look ahead, when they were attacked by about 1,000 or more of the enemy. The little party at once scattered on either side to guard the camels, and as the Afghans pressed forward a heavy fire was opened on both sides. The fight was of a most exciting character, each man fighting for his own hand, taking advantage of a rock here and there, ascending and descending in order to avoid falling over precipices, with great-coat and 70 rounds of ammunition belted on. It was a most severe test on the men, but they kept up a sharp fire every time an Afghan showed his head or any part of his body. Several times the Afghans plucked up heart and charged forward to within thirty yards of our skirmishers, and had they pressed forward, must have overpowered our men by sheer might. But the fire to which they were exposed quelled their courage, and for two long hours this little body of Englishmen kept them back until the convoy had safely emerged from the other side of the pass. The bodies of those of our men who fell were afterwards found horribly mutilated, and our correspondent protests strongly against the accusation of cruelty against our troops, while no word is said as to the horrible mutilation executed by the Afghans against any wounded or stragglers who may fall into their hands, brutalities which, when the bodies are discovered, almost madden their comrades. Our loss in this gallant affair consisted of three men of the 67th killed, and Capt. Poole, three serjeants, and one private of the 67th wounded."

72nd Highlanders. The London correspondent of the Irish Times has the following:—"The 72nd Highlanders complain that, while they have had most of the fighting to do in Afghanistan, from the battle of Charasiab to that of Sherpur, they have been most unhandsomely treated in the distribution of honours and rewards. The grumble of this gallant corps is backed up by a comparison of the promotions and decorations bestowed on them and others, and it certainly does seem as if the Gael were left at a disadvantage by the side of his Saxon or even Hindoo comrade. The regiment, however, is about to have the amende made to it in a manner which suggests that, if it has been hitherto apparently overlooked, it has in reality been reserved for special distinction. There are to be several promotions among both commissioned and non-commissioned officers of the corps. But the grand feature will be the bestowal of the Victoria Cross, for which Gen. Roberts has recommended Pte. Patrick MacMahon, in recognition of the conspicuous gallantry displayed by him in the recent operations before Cabul. MacMahon, like many another comrade in the historic 72nd, is only half a Scotchman, being an Irishman born and bred. He is, as the term goes in the Army, a 'towny' of the General, having seen the light, I understand, not far from Reginald's tower in Waterford City. He has worn the trews for three or four years among his Scottish kindred, and has been the pink of a good soldier in all respects. MacMahon's behaviour during the three days' fighting which ended in the relief of the Sherpur and the rout of the enemy was, I hear, that of a hero. He was one of half a dozen men, a mere corporal's guard, who held the redoubt crowning the hill which commanded the Sherpur. Had the Afghans got footing here, they could have given the British garrison beneath them much trouble, especially as they had cannon. The non-commissioned officer in charge was disabled by a broken knee-cap during Mahomed Jan's advance, and in the somewhat hasty British retreat into the Sherpur no thought was taken to strengthen the six or eight privates left in the redoubt. His comrades, finding themselves isolated and without guidance, were for abandoning the height, with the hut and the ordnance survey instruments, but MacMahon persuaded them to remain. He had the two mountain guns in the redoubt trained to sweep an attacking front, and the Afghans gave him one opening by sending five or six hundred men against it. MacMahon let them have one greeting, which proved as much as they could stomach, for they left him unmolested for twenty-four hours longer, when the redoubt being remembered a hundred men were at once despatched from the Sherpur to relieve the little garrison. During the fighting, which ended in what I may call the raising of the siege, Paddy MacMahon fought at once like a devil and a Christian. He tackled half a dozen of the enemy single-handed, shot one and bayonetted two, and brought away the Queen's Sepoy they had wounded and would have killed, but for the Irish Highlander. I understand MacMahon's name was returned by the unanimous suffrages of his brothers-in-arms." Lieut. Gore-Langton, the Duke of Buckingham's nephew, and A.D.C., has been ordered to rejoin his regiment in Afghanistan, and had left Madras.

74th Highlanders. The head-quarters and service companies arrived at Greenock on Thursday, en route from Singapore, in H.M.S. Orontes, and have taken over quarters at Glasgow.

77th Regiment. The move of the regiment from Ireland to Dover, is to be carried out in the course of a few days. The application of Brevet Lieut.-Col. Colquhoun to retire from the Service by the sale of his commission has been approved.

80th Regiment. A Reuter's telegram, dated Capetown, Jan. 6, says:—"The 80th Regiment, which was on the march to Capetown, has been detained at Potchefstroom." "Expectans" writes:—"A day or two ago I read in the Naval and Military Intelligence of the Times, that the 80th Regt. (Staffordshire Volunteers) were, on its arrival from Natal, to be quartered in Ireland. Now, Sir, if there is one regiment that has hard work in Africa of late, that regiment is the 80th. It was engaged in the Kaffir war; next it was in the Zulu war. When at Ulundi, it being one of the senior regiments, it had the post of honour, and latterly, a part of the regiment was engaged at the storming of Sekukuni's stronghold in the Transvaal. And the reward for all this is to be quartered at the Curragh. The only reason assigned is that it has the misfortune to be linked to the 38th Regt.; and as this regiment is under orders for foreign service, I believe, and is in want of recruits, the 80th, nolens volens, is to furnish the required numbers. Whilst Highland regiments, such as the 42nd from Cyprus, the 71st from Gibraltar, and the 74th from the Straits Settlements, are sent to recruit their health at Parkhurst, Edinburgh, and Glasgow, the 80th is to be ordered to Ireland, where, in the coming elections, it will probably see some severe fighting."

85th Light Infantry. The enclosed extract from a letter, received this week from an officer of the regiment, may interest our readers:—"Dec. 20.—Just a line till I have time to write a long letter of our doings. We left British Kheyl on Dec. 8, and have had grilling hard work ever since. Never a moment to myself. Even with our light equipment of kits and tents, our luggage train is enormous. All food and grain for both men and animals have to be brought for the whole expedition. We have made several expeditions from the camps. On the 13th and 14th we carried the Zaimukt stronghold. The place ought to be simply impregnable; I never saw such a gorge and heights. I was with our right wing on the night attack, and we led; we carried two hills in succession, and at the third had to wait until it was turned. The climbing was very hard, and the men worked splendidly. The whole way up the snowhill we were under heavy fire, but miraculously did not lose a man, although there were several close shaves. The last bit of the third hill was an almost perpendicular cliff of about 50 feet, and we had to scramble up, holding on 'by our eyelids.' We bivouacked for the night on the hill-side with great coats. We had no water at all from leaving camp in the morning till ten o'clock the next morning; it could not be brought up. Some of the men suffered severely from thirst after such a hard day, but stood it right well. Having crowned the heights with the right's attack, the left entered the gorge and carried it, burning the villages in the valley with little loss. I went down from the heights with two companies in support, and it was a most awful place to attack. We bivouacked again, and next day marched back to camp. We present rather a ragged appearance, half our boots have no soles left, and there is not a coat or pair of trousers in the regiment without holes. Our things from Balesh Khegl will be here in about eight days, when we shall be better off."

86th Regiment proceeds from Chatham to Dover on Friday next, as at present arranged.

94th Regiment. Col. Baker Russell, in his Sekukuni despatch, writes:—"I would venture to bring to your notice the names of the following officers, all of whom rendered me most valuable assistance:—Lieut.-Col. Murray, 94th Regiment, commanding the central column, rendered me the greatest aid, and showed a power of commanding men that was most marked." Mention is also made of Major Anstruther, commanding 94th Regiment. The following men were wounded in the taking of Sekukuni's stronghold, viz.:—Privates J. Woods, wound of right shoulder; J. Robinson, wound of shoulder-joint (bullet extracted); J. Mulloy, wound of right leg; J. Wigley, wound of right shoulder-joint; H. Lyon, wound of back; T. Finn, penetrating wound of abdomen; W. Griffin, wound of arm; H. Higgins, wound of left shoulder; H. Bingham, wound of left thigh; E. Hart, wound of right thigh. Lieut. MacSwiney commanded the detachment which brought Sekukuni into head-quarters, Dec. 2. Lieut-Col. Murray was in command of the regiment during the whole of the Sekukuni campaign, and was at the head of it on the day of the assault, Major Anstruther and Capt. Browne being each in command of a half-battalion. All these officers were through the Zulu war, and were present at the battle of Ulundi. Capt. Froom, who led his company across the plain to the right attack, was one of the first on that side to scale the walls of the Fighting Koppie at Sekukuni's town.

91st Highlanders. Capt. Chater will shortly be seconded on rejoining the Staff of the Marquis of Lorne in Canada.

95th Regiment, on removal from Ireland shortly, is to proceed to Aldershot. Lieut. Evans has applied for permission to resign his appointment as adjutant.

102nd Fusiliers. Lieut. Scott has been ordered home from Ceylon to join the depôt, in place of Lieut. Lysaght, who has embarked to join the service companies. The order for Lieut. Oates to join has been cancelled.

105th Light Infantry. Capt. Ferrier, who is a candidate for appointment to the Pay Department, has been placed on probation in the pay office of the 63rd Brigade Depôt, at Belfast.

Rifle Brigade. The Standard says:—"The command of the 3rd Batn. is about to become vacant, Col. Godfrey Clerk having been selected for the military attachéship at St. Petersburg. Col. Clerk's successor will be Major Wood, lately employed with the 4th Batn. in Afghanistan. Col. Newdigate, C.B., has just been selected for a brigade command of the Afghan expedition—Peshawur Valley Force. Col. Newdigate is a brother of Major-Gen. Newdigate, C.B., who held command of a column in Zululand, and led his battalion in last winter's operations under Sir Samuel Browne."

Commissariat and Transport Department. Comy. H. S. E. Reeves acted as orderly officer to Col. Russell, C.B., in the operations against Sekukuni, and is mentioned in despatches for his coolness under fire and valuable service.

Ordnance Store Department. Assist.-Comy.-Gen. H. F. Travers, now in charge of the Chatham District, is under orders to embark for Malta next month. Deputy-Comy. W. C. Gordon arrived home from the Cape on Thursday.

Medical Department. Surg.-Major J. H. Finnemore is about to retire on half-pay. Col. Russell, C.B., writes in his Sekukuni despatch:—"The medical arrangements were excellent, and I am deeply grateful to Surg.-Major Kerr, principal medical officer, as also to Surg.-Major Hector, in charge of Bearer Company, and Surg.-Major Johnston, in charge of first dressing station, for the great celerity with which all wounded were removed, and for the care bestowed on them on arrival." Sir Garnet Wolseley in his despatch says:—"Surg.-Major Jackson, C.B., who is attached to my head-quarters, did good work during the action in attending to the wounded, many of whom he dressed under fire." The Secretary of the Association writes to us as follows:—"The Central Committee of the St. John Ambulance Association has sustained a severe loss by the death of one of its most active members, Dr. J. H. Porter, A.M.D., principal medical officer to the Cabul Field Force, the news of which has just been received from Afghanistan. This distinguished officer, who served through the Crimean, Indian Mutiny, and Franco-German wars, was awarded a few years back the prize offered by the Empress of Germany for the best essay on surgery, the competition being open to all Europe."

Veterinary Department. Col. Baker Russell in his Sekukuni despatch mentions "Vet.-Surg. Moore, who attended to wounded horses on the field with great coolness."

THE CANADIAN MILITIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Mr. Masson, the new Minister of Militia, has been winning for himself golden opinions, and it is only fair that he should receive credit for his good deeds, as, in a recent communication in your world-wide journal, the heads of the Canadian Militia Department were exhibited in not a very favourable light. Mr. Masson has authorised the opening of three military schools, one each in St. John's, Montreal, and Toronto, and though the period is very short, and the number limited, the move is in the right direction. He has also authorised the formation of drill classes in the different high schools and collegiate institutions in Quebec and Ontario, and while a difference of opinion exists as to their utility (many holding the belief that the cost of equipment and instruction of those classes would be better invested, if the amount was appropriated to giving a few more days' drill in the year to the active Militia), still, the Minister deserves credit for the good intention; and good, it is to be hoped, will be the result. Next, though a Frenchman himself, at least a French Canadian, he has put his foot down on a movement for the organisation of a Zouave Militia battalion, composed exclusively of French Canadians, saying,—"He could not encourage the idea that the Canadian Militia was a British organisation, wearing British uniform, that the country would not tolerate the foreign dress, nor the Government the necessary expense, and that he could not support the scheme." Lastly, he has put a stopper on the international Militia visiting, inaugurated by the visit of the 13th N.Y. State Militia to Montreal on May 24. Some of our city corps were desirous of returning the compliment, but Mr. Masson wisely said, "No." Every man who knows anything of New York or Brooklyn knows there is an Irish mob in both cities, who would be delighted, by either insult or assault, to provoke a row, and produce a complication that might cause no end of difficulty. The Americans themselves, I really believe, would extend every courtesy and hospitality to their visitors; but the Hibernian, Fenian, and religious elements are there in strength, and as they are all sound Dimmycrats, they have to be not only tolerated, but conciliated. The general sentiment entertained by the Militia is that more interest has been exhibited in the force by Mr. Masson during the past twelve months, than has been shown by his predecessors in office for the past seven years; that his moves have all been good ones, and what he has done he has done well. The time now is most auspicious for the consideration of the Colonial Militia question generally, and that of Canada particularly. We are not at all satisfied with our relation to, or our position in, the defensive forces of the Empire, and it is the hope of all that before the Army Commission again adjourns some understanding will be arrived at. Just take up the last Army List, and glance over the Canadian Militia. There you will see that for a force of some 40,000 men enrolled, there is just one General, and he at ~~head-quarters in Ottawa~~. Then look over the District Staff, and you will see it is composed of officers not one of whom held a higher rank in the Army than captain and lieutenant (one exception only, in Ontario). Why cannot there be a few of your spare Generals, who are rusting at home for want of something to do, detailed for duty in Canada? Their advent here would be hailed with joy, except by the few whose toes they might touch; and there is plenty of work cut out for them, in organising brigades, divisions, movable columns, or corps.—I am, &c., CANADIAN RIFLEMAN.

ROYAL MARINES AFLOAT.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—Permit me through your columns to suggest that the Committee now sitting, or about to sit, may be authorised to discuss why Marine officers do not like going to sea, after it has decided upon the course it proposes to see adopted with regard to the Marine Artillery. And allow me, as an individual member of the corps, to point out some of the grounds on which Marine officers base their grievances:—1. A captain of Marines embarked in command of a detachment is a a loser of 2s. a day, while his expenses, if he is married, are nearly doubled. He loses 1s. a day for commanding a company, and 1s. a day in lieu of coals, &c. 2. Though nominally in command of the detachment, he no sooner sets his foot upon the deck, than the actual command is taken out of his hands. The commander or the first lieutenant inspects his men's messes, orders the men about in any manner he thinks fit, without consulting him, and punishes his men for all offences except those of a trivial nature committed on guard. 3. It frequently happens that on the one day in the week when the Marine officer is supposed to have his men for inspection and military exercises, he either is told he cannot have them, or when in the middle of his drill, is told that his men are wanted to haul on a rope, or some such trivial duty, and he has to hastily dismiss them, though there are probably 200 or 300 Blue-jackets who might be made use of for the purpose, without inconvenience to anybody. 4. Marine officers of all grades, with the exception of those subalterns going to sea for the first time, are very unfairly treated with regard to cabin accommodation. Subalterns are frequently older men than the first lieutenants, and may have been 14 or 15 years' in the Service, yet every officer in the ward-room entitled to a cabin has a prior choice. 5. The power of a disagreeable Naval officer to inflict annoyance upon a Marine officer is very great, and might with advantage be reduced. As an instance, I may refer to the custom prevailing in some ships of compelling one subaltern always to be on board, the captain not being allowed to count. I would suggest that the following reforms should be recommended by the Committee—1. Give to all officers in command of detachments 1s. a day company allowance, and in addition to this, 1s. a day to captains and 6d. a day to subalterns for stationery and other small expenses which they often incur. 2. Give to officers commanding detachments a real power, instead of a fictitious one. Let them have entire charge of their men's "barracks," as the messes are sometimes called, and give them the power to deal with their men as the senior naval executive officer has the power to deal with his. What can be more humiliating than for an old major, of perhaps 45 years of age, to have to bring his men up before a man sometimes 15 years his junior, for disposal? Let him be responsible to the captain of the ship, and no one else, for the discipline of his men. 3. Let it be distinctly understood that when he is drilling his men, they are not to be unnecessarily taken away from him. 4. Let captains rank with lieutenants R.N. of over 3 years and up to 8 years' service; subalterns of over 10 years' service to rank with lieutenants of under 3 years' service. In conclusion, permit me to suggest that if the Commission is called upon to consider these matters, it may allow itself to be guided by Gen. Adair, a staunch supporter of the Navy, and one who has the best interests of the Service at heart. He will, I am sure, assist it in making the officers and men contented and the Service thoroughly efficient. At present, there is little or no esprit de corps, a misfortune I attribute in a great measure to the number of masters we have to serve under, and the abuse of the power entrusted to some of them.—I am, &c., PATIENCE.

TIC-SANO is a vegetable remedy; can be taken by both young and old, and by persons of the most delicate constitution without change of diet.

TIC-SANO is the ORIGINAL SPECIFIC for the above complaints; it has been tried and approved of by the Medical Profession, and has been spoken favourably of by the Public Press.

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879:—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

TIC-SANO purifies the blood, strengthens the system, and so wards off one-half the diseases the flesh is heir to.

THE "CARMICHAEL"
PORTABLE BOOT-TREE.

A want long felt has just been supplied by this most important invention. All sportsmen and military men know the great advantage of having both their long and short boots treed up every day, especially after they have been wet, but there is often great inconvenience in carrying about the boot-trees.

An officer in the 5th Lancers has lately hit upon the idea that an India-rubber tree, which, with ease, can be carried in the pocket, can, when put inside the boot, be inflated, filling out the boot tightly, and so making it an impossibility to shrink.

For officers on active service, autumn manœuvres, or whenever it is impossible to carry wooden trees, this invention will be invaluable.

This invention is patented for Great Britain and other countries.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

CAPTAIN, R.N., Lyme Regis.—The appointment not being a Government one, the notice of the officer's services and attainments was set aside for more pressing matter, and was thus crowded out.

ROQUELLE.—Very glad to hear from you. Page 789 of the new "Instructions" shall have due notice. There is just the shadow of a prospect of something being done, but money is "tight" at Headquarters. Thanks for further particulars, which may lead to the identification of the late officer. Naval and Military Club, Piccadilly.

A. W., Yokohama.—Have noted the points raised, and will take an opportunity of calling attention to the matter. Very glad of a letter from an old friend, at any time.

R.N.A.V.—Write to the Office of Naval Reserves, New Street, Spring Gardens, if you think there is any prospect of your being able to organise a small corps at your port.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 24, 1880.

AN officer of high rank points out that some change in the method of training infantry soldiers has been rendered necessary by the adoption of the short-service system. Formerly, about 30 recruits joined a regiment in the course of the year. Under these circumstances, the arrangement under which these were trained to the use of the rifle by the musketry-instructor answered very well. Now, the state of affairs is quite changed; a regiment often gets as many recruits in a month as formerly joined in a year. Consequently, the task of training all the recruits of a regiment by the musketry-instructor cannot be carried out efficiently. It would be much better were the recruits trained by their captain. Not only would the training be more individual, and consequently more thorough, but there would no longer be that hurry, which now exists, to push the recruits as rapidly as possibly through musketry, in order that they may "join the column." Too much of a mystery has been made of ordinary musketry instruction, which the captain ought to be able to impart as well as any other instruction. Indeed it is open to argument whether the captain should not be practically, as he is theoretically, responsible for all the training, drilling, and discipline of his company. Such a system would certainly stimulate the captain's zeal and give him a more intimate knowledge of his men, a knowledge under short service now so difficult to obtain. The Germans are most minute and particular as regards both drill and musketry instruction, yet both are taught by the company officers under the supervision of the captain. Indeed, with such young non-commissioned officers as we now possess, it will become daily more difficult to persist in the time-honoured method. Again, with young soldiers and non-commissioned officers, it is very desirable that drill should be simplified as much as possible. There are many movements which are alike intricate and devoid of practical utility. Yet these movements are called for by the General at his yearly inspection, and commanding officers are therefore bound to practice them. Our correspondent asserts that the present drill-book is more intricate than its predecessor, and contains, in addition, the attack formation. As an instance of difficult movements of no practical utility, we may mention forming square from line on the two centre companies. In this movement there are no words of command for the company, and confusion and mistakes invariably take place. Evidently, both in drill and other matters, we fail to economise the little time available for instruction, and on which such numerous and daily-increasing demands are made.

A letter has been addressed to Sir Garnet Wolseley by the Secretary of State for War informing him that a grant of £300 has been made to Captain Lord Gifford, V.C., 57th Regiment, for bringing home despatches announcing the successful termination of the Zulu war, but stating at the same time that such grants are no longer to be considered as a custom.

We learn from the Cape that the Zululand Boundary Commissioners (Lieutenant-Colonel Hon. G. Villiers, Grenadier Guards; Captain Alleyne, Royal Artillery, and Captain Moore, 4th Regiment), having completed their labours in Zululand and established the thirteen chiefs in their kingdoms, have returned to Natal, to await the orders of the High Commissioner. Some districts of Zululand are very unhealthy at this season of the year, and there has been much rain during the past three months; but with the exception of one European soldier who died of fever, there was little or no sickness amongst the party.

A suggestion has been made, and it has obtained favour in many quarters, as to the practicability and propriety of calling out the Militia in the west and south of Ireland. The suggestion is not without value, although there are some obvious objections to such a step. If the men were to be called out for the annual training now, instead of at a later period of the season, it would be a material help to their families; while the men themselves would be provided with far better food, lodging, and clothing, than they would in all probability obtain from any civil employment likely to be opened to them. Practically considered, the cost to the country would be insignificantly small, and it might be the means of inducing a number of men to volunteer for the regular Service.

Captain A. C. M'Kean, 6th Dragoons, has been appointed Aide-de-Camp to Lieutenant-General Sir F. F. Maude, V.C., K.C.B., commanding a division of the Bengal Army.

We learn from India that the Report of the Army Commission which has been sitting at Simla has now been printed, and sent in to Government. It is almost certain that, in future, an officer drawing Colonel's allowances will have to resign them, if actively employed. At present, if an officer succeeds to Colonel's allowances while serving on the Staff, he may retain his appointment until the completion of his period, and he may also be reappointed, or "employed in some other capacity." As these allowances are, in reality, a retiring pension, it is manifestly inconsistent, and injurious to some junior officer, that an officer should draw them and Staff pay at the same time. When this subject was brought before the Commission, a worthy member, who happens to be in the above incongruous position, immediately exclaimed against any interference in the matter; but when he was told that it was not proposed to touch existing claims, he candidly remarked, "Well, if you won't interfere with me, I am not prepared to say that it is not a job."

The Warrant for the reorganisation of the Commissariat and Transport Department is not permanently shelved, but no information can be given as to its probable date of issue.

We regret to hear there is some probability of the Royal Commission on the Scientific Corps not being appointed at all, owing to the strong opposition it has met with in high quarters. The names of the members of this Commission were practically settled last August, when the completion of the final arrangements was delayed, owing to the accident that occurred to Lord Winmarleigh. We understand that notice will be given in Parliament at an early date of a question that will tend to throw light on the action intended to be taken by the War-Office authorities, in disregarding a vote of the House of Commons.

An Order which is about to be issued from the Office of the Deputy-Adjutant-General of Artillery in Pall Mall will be interesting to artillery officers. In future, regimental Colonels appointed to commands will either have to accept them, or, on being passed by a medical board, retire. Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels wishing to exchange will have to do so within a year after their promotion, These are steps in the right direction, if they are not treated, like many other well-meaning Circulars and Orders already in existence, as dead-letters. For it to be found necessary to issue any at all shows, we fear, the maladministration that has crept into this branch of the Army.

In our last issue, we pleaded for justice in the case of the widow of the late Captain Younghusband, 24th Regiment, who was killed in the glorious defeat sustained by the British arms on January 22 last, at Isandula; and we feel sure that the claim, as represented by us, and as felt by all, only has to be brought to the notice of her Majesty, her advisers, and the public, to be at once recognised; but it should be known that Mrs. Younghusband is not the only sufferer by this discreditable regulation, the widow of Captain W. Degacher having been refused repayment of his commission-money, because, forsooth, he left his wife and child comfortably provided for. We trust that when Parliament assembles, the military Members in a body will take up this question, and compel the Government to do justice to those whose friendless position should have placed them beyond the reach of legislative dishonesty

The Royal Warrant of November 27, 1879, has sanctioned exchanges in the Army Medical Department, but the conditions and regulations have not yet been made known. It is only fair to so large a body as the Medical Officers of the Army that these rules should be promulgated without delay. Ever since the introduction of that horrible word "unification," there have been doubt and worry. That word has been anglicised by the regimental medical officers having been forced to disappear, but report says that because medical officers are not regimental, they therefore must be Staff, and the Authorities will only allow them their bare expenses on exchange. This is simply a quibble. The Medical Officers are a corps, having different ranks and different stations, and men under them, and they have a just cause of complaint, if not allowed to carry out their exchanges from one station to another upon the same declarations as required from the Engineers and Royal Artillery (see General Order 57, of 1875). We are quite sure this anomaly only requires to be brought to the notice of H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, and it would be rectified.

Under what Act of Parliament, or other authority, we wonder, is it that the Secretary of State for War has claimed power to himself to stop the promulgation of a Royal Warrant signed by the Queen? The act seems at first sight to be unconstitutional, and is to be made the subject of inquiry early in the Session, on the part of the friends of the unfortunate Commissariat officers.

The Cape Government, or rather its officials in East Griqualand, are doing their very best to bring on a war with the Pondos, and as the Cape Mounted Riflemen have been ordered from Moirosi's Mountain to Kokstadt, to "support the Resident," a collision is all but inevitable, unless, as is most unlikely, the Government comes to its senses, and sends up at once an unprejudiced man—say, an officer of the Imperial Army—with power to square matters with the Pondos forthwith. The Pondos are entirely in the right. They have no desire whatever to fight with us. They only ask to be let alone. There is some fine country in Pondoland, and the Pondos have enormous herds of cattle, all of which, both cattle and land, will, no doubt, soon be divided between us and the Bacas, Xeribes, and others, our sable and (with land and cattle in view) staunch and loyal allies.

The authorities who so tenderly govern and watch over the interests of the officers of the Royal Regiment of Artillery have, we fear, some difficulty in providing places for those in the senior grades. In addition to the numerous colonels and lieutenant-colonels of the regiment drawing full pay and performing no duty, living, in some cases, abroad, we find no less than two lieutenant-colonels of Horse Artillery at Aldershot, where there are not two service batteries; again, two lieutenant-colonels of Field Artillery at Sheffield, where there is not one service battery. Such over-officering as this points out the urgent need that exists for an inquiry into the whole organisation of the Royal Regiment.

We are much mistaken, if the coming great question is not the relations of our colonies with the mother-country and each other. Mr. Thomas Brassey, therefore, merits gratitude for his endeavours to enlighten the public by addressing the Bradford Chamber of Commerce on the subject. The lecture is too long to be dealt with exhaustively in our columns, but there are in it one or two points to which, as a military organ, we feel bound to call attention. Our Colonial Empire is vast in extent, and possessed of enormous resources in men, money, coal, iron, and food. For want, however, of any scheme for concerted action, these resources would not be turned to account, and the very size of our Empire, scattered as it is, becomes a source of weakness. Our colonies have been taught to consider that their only duty is self-defence; but isolated, each colony would easily fall a victim to any one first-class Power. Again, so closely united are the colonies with each other and the British Isles by commercial ties, that a wound inflicted on one affects all the others. Finally, as a mere matter of existence, if the communication between our colonies and ourselves were cut off, the people of England would simply starve. These facts are all clearly brought out by Mr. Brassey, and he deserves thanks for trying to substitute a system of Imperial defence for the haphazard rule-of-thumb method, in which we have hitherto sought to protect the different fragments of her Majesty's dominions from aggression.

Both officers and men of the 93rd Sutherland Highlanders will learn with regret that Captain J. A. MacVicar, who sold out about fourteen months ago, died at Rome last Wednesday from bronchitis. He was extremely popular with all ranks in the regiment, on account of his many amiable qualities. Ever sympathetic, liberal, kind-hearted, clever, and thorough-bred, to know him was to love him, and the news of his untimely and sudden death will, we are sure, cast a shadow of sadness over the hearts of many besides his old comrades of the Sutherland Highlanders.

The officers of the Ordnance Store and Veterinary Departments have good reason for feeling aggrieved that not a single promotion or reward has been conferred on those amongst them who took part in the Zulu campaign. It is obvious that much of the success was due to their zeal, energy, and ability, yet they have been completely ignored, save as regards barren thanks. The omission to mark a sense of their merits is all the more unaccountable when it is remembered what has been done for the Commissariat and Transport, and Medical Departments. There are, however, many omissions yet to be supplied, especially the omission to grant Colonel Collingwood a C.B., and we therefore trust tardy justice will yet be done to the Ordnance Store and Veterinary Department.

Captain Vernon Chater, 91st Highlanders, has left for Ottawa in the suite of H.R.H. the Princess Louise, to rejoin the Staff of the Marquis of Lorne, as aide-de-camp. Captain Chater was selected for the post of aide-de-camp on his Excellency's first appointment, and proceeded with the Marquis to Canada in 1878, but was recalled to England on the 91st being placed under orders for the Cape last spring. He followed his regiment to Zululand, and served throughout the operations under Lord Chelmsford, and was ultimately invalided home, where he has since been on leave.

When are the Horse Guards going to publish a new Cavalry Brigade Drill Book? The last was published in August, 1863, when cavalry worked in "Threes."

The principal items of intelligence from Afghanistan this week may be summed up as follows:— General Hugh Gough has been appointed to the charge of the whole line of communications from Jumrud to Cabul, with Colonels Low and Heathcote as deputies. With regard to the feeling among the Afghans, the Gandamak correspondent of the Times writes:—"At present the whole line of country between the Khyber and Cabul may be described as being in an intensely expectant, not to say feverish, condition, and the opinion begins to grow very strong that longer delay on our part in adopting a definite policy may be productive of grave difficulties and complications. Colonel Macgregor, chief of the Staff, has been sent express towards the scene of the Momund excitement, while Colonel Tweedie has been telegraphed for by General Roberts to join him at once at Cabul. Messengers from Herat are understood to have arrived the other day in this neighbourhood, with letters for certain local chiefs. Probably the same kind of thing is going on just now in other parts. A strong expedition by the Russians in the spring against the Turkomans, which is being talked of, is probably the cause of a rumour running through Afghanistan that the Russians are coming to help them to drive us out of the country. Convoys with all kinds of stores are being forwarded to Cabul. All is quiet between this and General Roberts's post." The Standard's Bombay representative telegraphs:—"It is reported that all the Bengal troops will be withdrawn from southern Afghanistan, and that Bombay troops will take their places. The 3rd Cavalry, the 2nd Sinde Horse, the Poonah Horse, and the 9th and 10th Native Infantry are likely to be the first to go forward. It is believed that General Phayre will replace General Stewart in the command." Telegrams giving the following items of information have been received by the Daily News from its Lahore correspondent:—"Private information of a trustworthy character states that General Roberts means to abolish martial law in the Cabul district. The officers generally are of opinion that the General is over-sanguine, and expect a renewed outbreak of the enemy. The project of a railway to Jellalabad is abandoned. The terminus will be Jumrud. The Pindi-Kohat line will be continued from Thul to Peiwar."

Alberta, Staff Capt. Balliston. We have received from the Admiralty, in reference to a letter published in the Daily News of Jan. 13, and a leading article in the same paper of Jan. 15, upon which we commented last week, the following extract of a letter from the Captain of the Royal Yacht, who was on board the Alberta on the occasion referred to:—"The Alberta left Cowes, for Portsmouth, about 9.45 a.m. on Jan. 9, and passing under the stern of the Princess of Wales (the Ryde packet-boat), on entering the Swash, ranged ahead on her starboard hand, and crossed her bow into the harbour channel, the Princess of Wales being bound to Southsea Pier. The speed of the Alberta was nearly double that of the Ryde boat, and at no point of the passage in the Narrows were the vessels nearer than 20 yards. Very frequently the packets which ply between this and the Isle of Wight have less than five yards in which to clear each other. The master of the Princess of Wales could see the impossibility of his vessel being touched by the Alberta, and his knowledge of the speed of his own vessel must have freed him from anxiety regarding the chance of the Princess of Wales doing damage to the Alberta. Had not my attention been called to it, the passage on the 9th inst. would not have been marked in my mind as different from others, or as presenting any novel incident in the navigation of the Swash and the harbour channel."

Belleisle, Capt. H. Phillimore, C.B. The Belleisle recently parted her cables in heavy weather, and this being a serious matter, it is not surprising that the Admiralty should ask the reason why. The answer has not been satisfactory, as far as the ship is concerned, although it has removed all doubt as to the ability of the cables, if properly handled.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Charybdis, Capt. Hotham, was at Yokohama as senior officer on Dec. 17.

Cockatrice, Com. H. T. Grenfell, was inspected at Malta by Capt. FitzRoy on Jan. 9. Her condition is reported as very defective and leaky, and a thorough examination of her hull is being made by the dockyard officers as to her fitness for further service.

Condor, Com. E. F. Day, left Tyas Bay on Jan. 6 for Alexandretta, arriving on the evening of the 6th. Left Alexandretta on the 8th, and arrived at Famagousta on the 9th, where she was relieved by the Bittern, and left on the same day for Larnaca, arriving there in the evening. Left Larnaca on the 11th for Limasol, and after a short stay left for Malta.

Cormorant, Com. James Bruce, was at Auckland on Dec. 9, and was to leave this month for a cruise to other ports, returning to Auckland in March, and probably leaving for Sydney in April.

Crocodile, Capt. Doughty, arrived at Port Said on the 18th inst.

Dryad, Com. J. Hext, left Plymouth Sound on Wednesday morning for Aden, viâ the Suez Canal, calling at Gibraltar and Malta. The commanding officer, in receiving orders for the East Indies, has been informed that on arrival at Bombay he is to report to the commander-in-chief the condition of the leak which exists in her bows, and should there be any increase in the amount of water taken in on the passage she will be docked at Bombay, and have the faulty timbers replaced by others. The leak is by no means a serious one, or the ship would not be despatched to a foreign station in her present condition, instead of being docked and repaired at Devonport. The Dryad on her passage out will call at several ports in the Red Sea, and will not reach Bombay until some time after the usual period necessary for making the voyage, her movements in the Red Sea being uncertain.—Western Morning News.

Egeria, Com. A. L. Douglas, returned to Hong Kong in company with the flagship on Dec. 15.

Fantôme, Com. W. C. Karslake, has been into the Channel for a six hours' steam trial, which did not result satisfactorily, in consequence of defects in one of the piston-rods.

Flirt has been handed over to the Steam Reserve at Devonport, by the dockyard authorities, to be prepared for commission for the North American and West Indies station.

Goshawk, Lieut.-Com. Suckling, left Queenstown on the 18th inst. for Galway.

Growler, Com. C. E. D. Wiicox, has been ordered to Hong Kong, and will be sent to Singapore.

Industry, Staff Com. Tregidgo, was at Ascension on Jan. 8.

Invincible, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle, C.B., was to sail for Alexandria and the Piræus of Athens about the 19th inst. She will probably remain at the latter port for a while, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle assuming the duties of senior officer in Greek waters.

Iris is reported ready for sea. At a trial on Monday, although 9 in. deeper than her proper load-line in the water, she made over 16 knots per hour.

Iron Duke, Capt. H. Cleveland, flagship of Vice-Admiral Coote, C.B., was at Hong Kong on Dec. 17, having arrived on Dec. 15, with the Egeria in company.

Jumna, Capt. G. Parsons, arrived at Bombay on the 18th inst.

Lively, Lieut.-Com. Charles Le Strange, arrived at Liverpool on Wednesday, and will leave for Bristol with Rear-Admiral His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh to-morrow. In consideration of the Lively being attached to the flagship of the Coastguard for duty, when required with the Admiral-Superintendent, H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, the engineers' mess of the ship has been allowed additional mess traps to the value of £20, it being arranged that Coastguard officers shall join that mess when embarked.

Malabar, Capt. J. F. Grant, sailed for Natal on the 18th inst.

Nelson. Mr. N. Barnaby, C.B., and Mr. Wright, Engineer-in-Chief, have made an inspection of the Nelson, which is being brought forward for sea at Chatham.

Orontes, Capt. Kinahan, arrived at Greenock on Jan. 21, from Gibraltar, with the 74th Highlanders. The following naval officers have taken passage home from Malta:—Lieuts. Hewitt, Clarke, Stanhope, and Stokes, on promotion, and Mr. J. Morgan, carpenter of the Invincible, invalided.

Pegasus, Com. Hon. H. N. Hood, was at Yokohama at the end of November, and it is probable that she would spend the winter in Japanese waters.

Prince Albert is to be prepared for commission at Devonport early next month. She was thoroughly repaired two years ago, at a cost of £11,750, and with the exception of four months' commission under Capt. L. F. Jones, during the war scare in 1878, has not seen service for the past eight years. After Capt. Jones paid her off, £1,700 was spent in making her again fit for service. No repairs whatever are therefore needed previous to the pendant being hoisted.

Serapis, Capt. D. Davidson, arrived at Malta on the 17th inst., and sailed on the 18th for Port Said and Bombay.

Sheldrake, Lieut.-Com. Marcus Bridger, was at Hong Kong on Dec. 17.

Superb, which came down from Chatham to Sheerness nearly a fortnight ago for a preliminary trial of engines and machinery, is still lying in the harbour. At the conclusion of her late trial it was found that her metal bearings had run, and it will probably be some seven or eight days before she can again proceed on trial.

Thunderer, Capt. Philip Colomb, has gone into dock at Malta, to have her gun-sights fitted by the War Department. Her turret is nearly completed, and she will be ready for sea about the first week in February.

Triumph, Capt. A. H. Markham, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Frederick H. Stirling, was at Callao on Dec. 15, preparing to go south, and would probably return to Callao about the last week in January.

Tyne, Com. J. E. Stokes, arrived at Colombo on the 19th inst., and was to sail on the 20th for Singapore and Hong Kong.

Vigilant, Lieut.-Com. Annesley, was to leave Hong Kong about the middle of Jan. with the Admiral on board, on a visit to the southern part of the station. She would return to Hong Kong about the middle of March.

Wivern, Com. J. G. Jones, was taken into dock at Devonport on Jan. 22.

Wye, Staff Com. H. D. Sarratt, having undergone extensive repairs at Sheerness, directions have been given for her to be prepared for a run to the Mediterranean with stores, and also some ratings required by ships on the station. She will, according to present arrangements, return to England immediately on carrying out this duty.

Those serving at Bermuda, or rather their friends at home, will be glad to hear that on the representation of the Admiralty, the Postmaster-General has been pleased to approve of the previous arrangement respecting seamen's letter sent via New York, being reverted to, and the former rates will be allowed instead of an increased postage, which was proposed, even if not put in force.—Western Morning News.

The Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company notify that there will be a reduction in the rates of passage-money by their steamers to Adelaide, Melbourne, and Sydney, commencing with the mail steamer leaving Southampton on Feb. 19 next, and Brindisi on March 1.

"A RELIC OF THE ORPHEUS."

Under this heading, we gave last week an account of the finding of the body of an officer of the Orpheus, and we now append further particulars, which have been forwarded to us from Auckland.

Dr. W. G. Scott, of Onehunga, who made an examination of the remains, forwarded the following particulars of his examination to Com. Bruce, of the Cormorant:—"From an examination of the skeleton found at the Manukau Heads, I find that the probable age of the deceased was from 20 to 25 years, which is borne out by the fact that there were no wisdom teeth in the lower jaw. Height, about 5 ft. 8 in. He wore elastic-side boots or shoes, size seven. The upper teeth in front are regular, and medium size. The first double tooth on right-hand side has been drawn. The lower teeth in front are remarkably small and regular, while the back teeth have some spaces between them and are irregular, which may indicate that some of the back milk teeth were shed later than usual, so displacing the permanent teeth. Half of the double teeth are stopped in the crown with silver, one in two places. The jaws met well, not overlapping. The other bones are regular, none broken. The chin is narrow, and rather pointed."

From the foregoing, it is evident that the remains must be that of a lieutenant, as at the time of the disaster sub-lieutenants did not wear lace of one-half inch in width. The names of the executive officers who perished were:—W. T. F. Mudge, lieutenant; A. Jekyll, lieutenant; W. D. Strong, master; and the commander was R. H. Burton. Whether it was either of these is a matter which the firm of Adams and Son, Fore Street, Devonport, could aid in finding out; and Mr. Edward Amphlett, district paymaster at Liverpool, might be able to afford information regarding his late messmates.

It is a credit to the feeling of esprit de corps of the British Navy that such a scene as that witnessed on Nov. 24 could be possible in the Colonies, under the peculiar circumstances which led up to the circumstance. A few bones, a few buttons (which were stamped with the name of Batten and Adams, of Devonport), a few remnants of past humanity were found at the Manukau Heads, close to the scene of the wreck of the ill-fated Orpheus, lost over 16 years ago. The "remains," and such they were in reality, were brought to Auckland for interment, after their long resting in the bleak sands of the Manukau beach. Particulars and details were forwarded to Com. Bruce, and arrangements were made for a naval funeral. The remains, which were enclosed in an ordinary coffin, and enveloped in the Union Jack, were brought from the Albert Barracks, and placed on a gun-carriage belonging to the Artillery Volunteer Company. A detachment of 64 of a firing-party of marines and seamen of the Cormorant, and an escort of 40 men attended, as well as the major portion of the officers of the ship, including the captain. On emerging from the barracks the firing-party took the lead, and the Engineer Band, who, as soon as the coffin was placed, commenced to sound the solemn notes of the "Dead March" in Saul, took position immediately before the carriage. The funeral service was read by the Right Rev. Bishop of Auckland, and the Rev. H. Glasson, St. Matthew's. Com. Bruce has written to Major Burns expressing his acknowledgments, on behalf of the Navy, for the kind feeling evinced by the Auckland Volunteers on the occasion of the funeral.

A general quarterly meeting of the Royal Naval Benevolent Society was held at Willis's Rooms on the 19th inst., the President, Admiral Sir Michael Seymour, G.C.B. (Vice-Admiral of the United Kingdom), occupying the chair. The annual report of the Committee was read by Mr. John St. John Wagstaffe, the secretary, and it shows that during the past year 249 applicants have been relieved, by the distribution among them of £1,656, but owing to the great loss the Society sustained in 1878 by the death of its late President, Admiral of the Fleet the Right. Hon. the Earl of Lauderdale, G.C.B. (who contributed the munificent sum of £306 a year to its funds), it was not able to give away in 1879 as much as it did in 1878 by £258, and the Committee earnestly appeal for new subscriptions to make up for this serious decrease of income. Admiral the Most Hon. the Marquis of Northampton was elected a vice-president of the Society, in the room of Admiral Edward Barnett, deceased. The court then proceeded to distribute the funds at their disposal, which resulted in grants to 68 applicants, amounting to £445, and after a vote of thanks to the gallant chairman, the proceedings terminated.

The smoke-helmet recently invented by Mr. Richard Jenkins, boatswain, of Devonport Dockyard, was subjected to a severe test on Tuesday at the dockyard, Devonport. The helmet, which is of tin and weighs about 7lbs., fits upon shoulder pads, which prevent its becoming burdensome and also guards against smoke penetrating. The only other special article of dress is a tight-fitting canvas jacket. At the side of the helmet the screwed end of the air hose is inserted. The piping is of the specially stout make used for diving apparatus, and with a man treading on every foot of it would be in no danger of collapsing. The Admiralty have adopted Mr. Jenkins's invention, and seven of the helmets are now ordered for Devonport.

On Thursday a court of governors of the Royal Alfred Aged Merchant Seamen's Institution was held at the Cannon Street Hotel, the occasion being for the election of 15 aged seamen to the benefits of the institution—five for admission into the house and 10 out-pensioners. Capt. the Hon. Francis Maude, R.N., presided, and, in opening the poll, observed that the charity very much needed funds to enable it to carry on its operations. They would be very glad to double the number of pensioners to be elected, but the state of their finances precluded such an idea.

Painted windows as memorials of departed worth and gallantry have more than ordinary interest in the eyes of all. Mr. W. G. Taylor (late O. Connor) has at all times pleasure in showing his various works for church and hall in progress; the introduction of likenesses in windows being a special study. Designs and estimates free. Medal awarded to works in the Paris Exhibition. The "Art" Works, 4 Berners Street, London.

THE HUASCAR.

The following extract from the log of the Huascar, published by the New York Army and Navy Journal of Dec. 27 places on record the damage sustained by that vessel in her action with the Shah and the Amethyst:—"The monitor was found to be damaged as follows:—To port a ball in the armour and some injury done to the bulwarks and woodwork; to starboard a ball had perforated the armour and entered the officers' mess-room; another in the armour towards the bows; a knee broken and other damages to the woodwork. In the interior of the ship, part of the quarter-deck was destroyed by a ball; a ball had penetrated the turret about 2½ in.; the funnel of the engines and of the galley were perforated in several places; the shrouds of the mainmast to starboard were completely destroyed, as was the round-top; the spanker-boom was on deck with its halliards cut; the mainmast was perforated by a ball; the topmast was much damaged; two cabin-doors were completely destroyed, and the cabins and turret were in complete disorder. The crew were employed the whole day in cleaning away fragments and in putting the cabins in order. Four boats were utterly destroyed."

Rear-Admiral Rodgers, U.S. Navy, having ordered a board of U.S. Naval officers, composed of Capt. Breese, three lieutenants, and a chief engineer, to inspect the Huascar immediately after her capture by the Chilians, has forwarded an exhaustive report of the damages sustained by the Huascar to the Washington Navy Department. This report, together with explanatory diagrams, is also published by the New York Army and Navy Journal, but, being too voluminous for us to publish in extenso, we confine ourselves to taking the following extracts therefrom:—"From the official reports, it seems that the Almirante Cochrane was struck three times, suffering no material damage. The Blanco Encalada was not hit at all. The description and number of projectiles fired by the vessels engaged, so far as reported, is as follows: The Almirante Cochrane fired 45 250-pounder Palliser chilled armour-piercing shell, 50 lb. charge; 12 20-pounder shell, 2½ lb. charge; 16 7-pounders; 450 7-in. Nordenfeldt; 1,000 rifle balls. The Blanco Encalada fired 31 250-pounder Palliser chilled armour-piercing shell, 50 lb. charge; 6 20-pounder shell, 2½ lb. charge; 4 9-pounders; 2 7-pounders; 350 7-in. Nordenfeldt; 1,000 rifle balls. The Huascar fired 40 300-pounder Palliser chilled armour-piercing shell, 50 lb. charge. Total number of 250-pounders fired at the Huascar, 76. One shell pierced Huascar's armour on starboard quarter 2½ ft. from the water-line and nearly abreast the break of the poop-deck, and burst in the armour-backing; destroying a state-room on that side; making an irregular hole in the backing and inner skin 4 ft. by 3 ft.; breaking three deck-beams; starting the spar-deck, and carrying away the iron leading-block for tiller chains, which led to the fighting-wheel under the conning-tower. Another shell entered near stern-post on starboard side, exploded in the backing, breaking off the head of the stern-post, breaking three deck-beams, and carrying away blocks of relieving tackles, which were in use after the damage to the leading-block, and killed the men stationed at the relieving tackles. A 250-pounder shell entered just abaft the forward bulkhead of turret chamber, and burst in the wood backing, destroying the boatswain's room on that side; while another struck the plate which formed half the right gun-port. The hole is 2 ft. from the port, and is generally oval in shape on the outside, 12 in. by 9 in., and 15 in. from the deck line. The hole through the plate is quite smooth and almost circular in shape, about 9 in. in diameter. The shell evidently exploded in the backing, making a jagged hole 2 ft. high by 1 ft. 6 in. wide in its maximum dimensions, and bending and tearing the skin. The fragments struck the right trunnion of the right gun, injuring it, the cap-square, the rim-base, and the corner of the carriage. There are also several scores on the gun and on the beams overhead. The left edge of the plate was driven back 2 in., and the upper right-hand corner over the centre of the port started out about 1 in. A bolt over the port is started out 1 in. This shot entered at about an angle of 30 deg. with a normal to the surface of the turret. Another 250-pounder struck the turret near the right side of the breech of the right gun, 3 ft. above the deck, and near the left edge of the plate. The hole is about 15 in. by 12 in. on the outside, quite irregular, and oblique to the surface of the turret. The plate is driven back along the left side and top 1¾ in., and the upper right-hand corner started a little. The plate was split by the shot into three layers, giving it the appearance of laminated armour. The ring around the top of the turret, 1 in. thick by 3 in. wide, is broken and bent up. None of the bolts in this plate are started on the outside. It evidently burst on passing through the backing, as the hole on the inside is very jagged, about 2ft. by 1 ft. 8 in., and the skin is badly torn. Some of the pieces of the projectile struck the right side of the breech of the left gun, scoring it very much, in some places an inch deep, and smashing the sight-bar. The greater portion of the shell struck in the sighting-hole to the left of the left gun, tearing the iron beams and backing around it to a great extent. A 250-pounder shell struck an angle of the conning-tower on the port side, aft, breaking the 3-in. iron plate on its edge, and burst, destroying the fire-room ventilators and the forward part of the smoke-pipe casing above the deck, since temporarily repaired. Yet another 250-pounder shell pierced the after armour-plate of the conning-tower on the port side, about 2 ft. above the deck, making an irregular hole in the plate about 12 in. in diameter, and burst in the teak backing of the forward plate on the opposite side, forcing off that plate so that it fell on deck, while another 250-pounder raking shot from aft struck the after-thwartship plate of conning-tower near its top, making an irregular hole. A 250-pounder shell pierced the armour abreast of the engines, 2½ ft. above the water-line, and entering just above the engine-room gallery, burst in the armour-backing, tearing an irregular hole, 4 ft. by 3 ft. 2 in. in its greatest dimensions, and curling up the inner iron plating. The explosion destroyed the engineers' state-room on that side, carried away a portion of the engine-room gallery rail, and fragments of shell and splinters riddled the bulkheads on the port side. No injury resulted to the machinery. The Huascar, when surrendered, was temporarily disabled in her steering-gear, the conning-tower completely destroyed, the crew driven from the spar-deck, and the principal officers and fighting part of the crew killed. After the engagement the Huascar was towed into the Bay of Mexlilones, on account of her steering-gear being disabled. The shot-holes in the hull, which admitted water when the vessel rolled, were then effectually patched by the Chilians, as follows:—The patches were made of 2-in. oak plank, cut according to size of holes. Two or three thicknesses of blankets were placed between them and the armour-plating. A long bolt passing through the centre of each patch and through a piece of timber extending across the opening on the inside was set up by a nut, and made the patch secure. Twenty-four hours after the fight, the Huascar, in charge of a prize crew, commenced her voyage along the coast to Valparaiso, using her own motive-power and without convoy. The tubes in one of the main boilers were found to be leaking so badly that this boiler could not be used. It is supposed to have been caused by low water during the engagement. The bottom of the vessel was somewhat foul."

These results should be a warning to all maritime nations, not to expose valuable lives in thinly armoured vessels when there is the slightest possibility of their having to defend those vessels under conditions in any way similar to those under which the Huascar found herself forced to fight. Had the Huascar had no other opponent than the Almirante Cochrane, the results would have been the same. The latter vessel, it appears, could steam eleven knots. The Blanco Encalada, however, can only steam eight knots. In speed, therefore, the Huascar is superior to the Chilian ironclads to whom she surrendered. We have never yet seen a return of the total amount of ammunition expended by the Shah and the Amethyst in their attempt to capture the Huascar.

THE ROYAL UNITED SERVICE INSTITUTION.

At this Institution yesterday afternoon, Major Orde Brown, late R.A., read a paper entitled, "Lessons to be Learned from Krupp's Meppen Experiments of 1879." Lieut.-General Sir J. Henry Lefroy, K.C.M.G., R.A., presided. The principal feature in the Meppen programme was the trial of Krupp's 40-centimetre (15·75 inch) breechloading gun, weighing about 70 tons 17 cwt., known commonly as the 71 ton-gun. The trial was specially important for three reasons. It was the first breechloader whose power approached that of the 100 and 80-ton guns made in this country; it was a steel gun, and its proportions ware based upon results obtained during the last few years. It was mounted as for coast defence, and was easily worked by a detachment of 15 men. Ten rounds with chilled projectiles were first fired, the time occupied by the last five rounds being 24 minutes. The charge was made up in four cartridges, each containing 110 lb. of prismatic powder. The least satisfactory part of the service of the gun was the difficulty experienced in the ignition of the charge, and in remedying misfires. A more important question was the shooting of the gun as regarded power and accuracy. Diagrams were exhibited showing a remarkable degree of accuracy, chiefly in the vertical direction, which argued well for the regularity of the charge, and must surely be attributed to the prismatic powder employed. The bore of Krupp's gun was relatively rather longer and the chamber less enlarged than in the 100-ton gun, while in the 80-ton gun the bore was actually the shortest, and the enlargement of the chamber actually the greatest of the three. Looking to the endurance of the gun rather than the expenditure of powder, the basis of comparison should be proportionate pressures. Having compared the results of the trials of the three guns, the lecturer claimed that the 71-ton gun was a much better weapon than the 80-ton gun, beating it in every respect. It fired a heavier projectile with a higher velocity, which had therefore more energy or stored-up work, and an inch and a half more penetration, and all this was done with less pressure on the bore of the gun. The reason was that it was a better-proportioned gun, its main advantage being its greater length. The main difference in the guns depended on the difference in the length, and the question naturally arose,—How was it that our Government should be now completing and issuing 80-ton guns so inferior in power to Krupp's 71-ton gun? The answer was that the guns were designed for the Inflexible, and that, being muzzle-loaders, the vessel had to be made with portions of the deck corresponding to the length of the gun, to make provision for its loading. We found ourselves, in the case of the Inflexible, issuing new guns of obsolete proportions for a new ship, with an impatient public wanting to know why our new guns did not beat Krupp's. It was clear that every increase in length was in favour of the breechloader, because the labour and inconvenience of muzzle-loading increased in an increasing ratio; and in the case of turret-guns, and probably some guns in casemates and cupolas, muzzle-loading became eventually almost impossible. Having dwelt upon the minor experiments at Meppen, Major Browne summed up as follows:—1. The success of the breech-loading system. 2. The great results obtained as to power and accuracy of fire. 3. The muzzle-pivoting and non-recoil systems.

In the discussion which followed, Mr. Rendel remarked that it was hardly fair to compare the results of German artillery experiments with those of Elswick or Woolwich, instead of the entire country. Capt. Bridge referred to the courtesy with which British officers were received at Meppen last year to witness the experiments. Col. Curtis, R.E., said he was perfectly certain that we could produce a muzzle-loader to produce every single result which could be obtained by a breechloader. He was rather astonished to hear Major Browne say that the Government of this country were backward in adopting improvements, and contended that we were always making experiments with the view to improving the Service. Artillerists were now trying to burst the Thunderer gun, and there was not a suggestion of note that was not acted upon. Com. Dawson and other speakers continued the discussion, and the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to Major Orde Browne.

A fancy-dress ball was given on Tuesday evening, the 6th inst., by Admiral Sir Geoffrey and Lady Phipps Hornby, at the Admiralty House in Valetta, Malta, which was attended by a large number of the principal people in the island, Naval, Military, and civilian, and was a great success, the dresses being particularly choice and effective; and as the uniform of the present day was tabooed in the case of officers, there was a pleasing relief from the well-known blue and red coats of the sister Services.

At a recent meeting of the Royal Humane Society, the society's silver medallion was given to Com. Lang, R.N., commander of the Chinese gunboats, for saving Charles Squires from drowning in Plymouth Sound, on July 26 last; and to Frederick Knight, first-class boy of the Ready, for saving Thomas Davies, a stoker of the same ship, who fell overboard in a helpless state of drunkenness at Jask, on the Indian station, on Aug. 17 last.

Sir William Palliser's 64-pounder Navy rifled gun has been fired nine times doubly loaded, the last round having been with two charges of 10lb. of pebble powder and two 66lb. shot, and the test was then given up; the weights and proportions of the gun and the charges, as compared with the doubly-loaded Thunderer gun, having been exceeded. The gun was considered too strong for the experiment. This gun is now being converted into a breechloader. The result, however, of the test of this Palliser gun will no doubt be satisfactory to the officers and men of the Royal Navy. It appears that there are many ways of leaving wads in the bore of guns when handled by soldiers and seamen gunners. Sir William Palliser will use his light 64-pounder rifled gun for testing the result, and firing will commence with wads jammed in the bore as soon as the extra preparations for safety have been concluded. This gun completed its test of double-loading with pebble powder. On the test à outrance being applied with R.L.G. powder, or poudre brutale, some slight cracks appeared on the outside,—the hard skin of the cast iron had cracked. This has been turned off in a lathe and a coil of iron substituted, otherwise the gun appears to be quite sound. It is very satisfactory that no explosion took place, and no doubt much new information has been gained by these important experiments.

According to the list just published by the Imperial Admiralty of Berlin, the German Navy at the present time comprises the following vessels:—12 fighting ships, viz. 8 iron armour-plated frigates and 4 iron armour-plated corvettes; 25 cruisers, viz., 16 corvettes, 2 gunboats, of the German Albatross class, and 7 of the first class; and 19 vessels for coast defence, viz., 1 iron armour-plated vessel, 8 iron armour-plated gunboats, 6 torpedo boats, and 4 gunboats of the second class. In addition, there are 7 despatch-boats, 2 transport ships, and 10 school-ships; and engaged in harbour service—9 steamers, 3 barrack-ships, and 8 pilot boats and fire ships, making a grand total of 95. There are also building 1 iron-plated corvette, 3 iron-plated gunboats, and 4 wooden corvettes. Among the 8 fighting armour-plated frigates, the German Admiralty, singularly enough, still includes the Grosser Kurfürst, which sank more than a year and a half ago off Folkestone.

At their meeting on Tuesday, the Royal Humane Society awarded their honorary bronze medal to Midshipman Alexis Odintzoff, of the Russian corvette Razboynik, for having saved the life of one of the seamen in British waters. As the vessel was returning to her anchorage after a trial at the mile in Stokes Bay, the man fell overboard, and young Odintzoff leaped from the forecastle into the water, and held him up. The man was unable to swim, and both had on their heavy winter clothing.

In the Battle of this Life, Eno's Fruit Salt is an important Hygienic Need, or necessary adjunct. It keeps the blood pure, prevents fevers and acute inflammatory diseases, removes the injurious effects of Stimulants and Narcotics, such as alcohol, tobacco, tea, coffee, by natural means, thus restoring the nervous system to its normal condition by preventing the great danger of poisoned blood and over cerebal activity, sleeplessness, irritability, worry, &c. Caution.—Examine each bottle, and seethe capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt." Without it. you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all Chemists. Price 2s 9d and 4s 6d.

Agricultural Depression is by no means confined to the growers of corn, the hops of Kent have failed, and so have those remarkable Cherries which impart the charm to Grant's Morella Cherry Brandy. That delicious liqueur can, however, still be procured at all Bars, Restaurants, and Wine Stores; also at the Crystal and Alexandra Palaces, and the Westminster Aquarium.—Manufacturer: Thomas Grant, Distiller, Maidstone.

ISANDULA WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—It is customary about the present time to turn for a while from the bustle and excitement of public life, in order to direct our thoughts, in the first place, to our own family circles; secondly, to the friends that are dear to us; and lastly, to the suffering poor, that all may find "peace and plenty" during this season of festivity. England has experienced many reverses of fortune during the past year. Week after week the public expectation has alternately been roused and disappointed. What an unprecedented gloom spread itself throughout the entire country when the sinister intelligence of the Isandula disaster reached our shores! In a few hours, hundreds of women and children were bereft of their sole support in life. Now, we ask the question, "How fare these unfortunate widows and orphans, whose husbands and fathers lie mouldering far away in African sands?" Whilst we sincerely trust that such as have required aid have received it, we would ask in particular, "How fare the unfortunate widows and orphans of the quartermasters that fell with their comrades, a prey to savages at Isandula?" These poor widows have not had the poor consolation to see recorded in any public journal any memoir of their husbands, and even in the illustrated papers, where the photograph of every commissioned officer that fell in that most lamentable affray appeared, for some mysterious reason, the two quartermasters failed to appear. Have these poor widows been awarded the small pensions to which existing regulations entitled them? Have they received a share of the common funds contributed by a grateful nation? These are questions which brother-officers and the British public at large would like to see answered.—I am, &c., A Sympathiser.

OLIVER ACCOUTREMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—I have recently seen a copy of the intructions for the improved Oliver Equipment, with the appendix attached, describing the admirable system he proposes for the supply of reserve ammunition and entrenching tools in the field, and which altogether seems to be very perfect; but there is one article omitted from his kit, which, if added to it, on service especially, would be found of the greatest comfort and benefit to the soldier, and that is a pair, not of shoes (as are now being introduced into use by other countries), but slippers, composed of strong flax canvas dyed black, and capped with leather at the toes, and having moderately strong leather or vulcanite soles without heels. The advantages they possess over the shoe (leather or waterproof canvas) are, that in addition to being lighter and cheaper, they admit of free evaporation, and exercise a corresponding cooling, refreshing effect on the feet after the march, and act as one of the best curative or preventive agents for blistered or swollen feet, soft corns, &c., while they, at the same time, are as efficient as the shoe in enabling the soldier to be temporarily detached (as he recommends), from his second pair of boots, and have a change of socks while he removes and dries the boots and socks in which he marched. For barrack-room wear in peace-time, also, I feel sure they would be much used and appreciated by the men.—I am, Sir, &c., Observer.

A solicitor, writing to the Law Times, says:—"Can you inform me why it is that we have seen from time to time during the past year or two accounts of Naval courts-martial held at Sheerness which are illegally constituted? As an instance, I observe in the Army and Navy Gazette of the Dec. 27 a report of two courts-martial held there on seamen, and as there were not three ships present, Capt. Hunt-Grubbe, of the Pembroke, presided, although his ship is stationed at Chatham. The Act of Parliament known as the Naval Discipline Act, 1866, enacts by sect. 58 (3) that a court-martial shall not be held unless at least three of her Majesty's ships are together at the time. This wise provision is to prevent a court being packed, as was the case in May last, when the commanding officer of a tender was tried at Sheerness for running his vessel on shore. The captain of his own ship, having sat at a court to inquire into the case, and deeming a court-martial requisite, the commander of the same ship was called upon to sit at the trial; and as there were only two ships present, the captain of a ship at Chatham was also ordered to sit as a member of the court. The lieutenant's 'friend,' a solicitor of Portsmouth, informed the officiating Judge-Advocate that, as the court would be illegally constituted, being contrary to sect. 58 (3), which directs that at least three of her Majesty's ships shall be together at the time, and also to sect. 58 (16), which enacts that all the officers next in seniority to the president present at the place where the court-martial shall be held are to be summoned to sit, it was his intention to object to the constitution of the court. The officiating Judge-Advocate, however, who was also the secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, informed him that his doing so would interfere with the public service by causing a ship to be ordered from Chatham to Sheerness (to make up the requisite number of three), and would probably in consequence prejudice the case of his client; so he was induced to forego his objection. The trial was held, and the officer found guilty and reprimanded; and it was at the time considered at Sheerness and elsewhere that his trial was unjust at well as illegal, as regarded the constitution of the court. Up to the year before last the firm of Essell and Knight, solicitors, officiated as Judge-Advocate (by direction of the Admiralty) in all courts-martial at Sheerness, and then such unjust and illegal practices were never resorted to; but since then it appears to have been found convenient to ignore the provisions of the Act of Parliament as regards the constitution of courts, trusting to there being no one who would discover the illegality, or, at any rate, who would take official notice of it. It is high time that the attention of the Admiralty should be called to this, for seamen under trial cannot be supposed to know that they ought to object to the constitution of such courts, and if they did, they would probably be told they would only prejudice their case and inconvenience the Service."

Reviews.

Letts's Popular Atlas. (Letts, Son, and Co.)—Knowledge is power. Nothing contributes in a greater degree to the attainment of knowledge than the study of geography, and we are glad to notice that Messrs. Letts are issuing a new atlas, in monthly parts, each part containing three highly finished maps, at the small sum of 7d. a month. Messrs. Letts have produced a most useful work, and one of great merit, at a remarkably low price. The maps are clear, the points of interest are well selected, and the geographical accuracy compares favourably with far more costly productions. If the student cares to follow Cameron or Major Pinto through the great African continent, he can do so, or he can accompany Nordenskjöld round the north coast of Asia, and find even this new coast-line well laid out. The Council of the Royal Geographical Society has, we are glad to learn, expressed itself favourably towards Messrs. Letts's scheme of furthering the attainment of geographical knowledge by opening a prize competition for students.

Among the novelties of the season, attention may be drawn to an ingenious and useful little instrument, called "The Popular Paper Knife." It is of the ordinary size, and is made of paper, which takes a high polish and resembles ivory. It is really astonishing what an amount of useful information is afforded by this little toy. Everything requisite to know regarding foreign postage, money-orders, our colonial possessions, &c., is set out in due order on one side; while the other speaks to us of our inland postage, and contains a scale of English, and, still more valuable, one of French, measurement, such as metres, centimetres, and kilometres. "The popular paper knife" is the invention of Mr. R. Marston, of 188 Fleet Street, and may be purchased for the not excessive price of one shilling.

Obituary.

Capt. Augustus John Burton, R.N., of Carisbrooke Road St. Leonard's-on-Sea, died on the 17th inst. He was born on Christmas Day, 1818, and was second son of the late Capt. Thomas Burton, R.N., of Guestling Lodge, Sussex. He entered the Navy in August, 1831, on board the Magicienne, 24, Capt. J. H. Plumridge, and after serving in the East Indies, joined the Barham, 50, Capt. A. L. Corry, in the Mediterranean; and on the night of April 12, 1838, a few weeks after he had been lent to the Rapid, 10, Lieut.-Com. the Hon. Graham Hay St. Vincent de Ros Kinnaird, was wrecked on a reef of rocks off Cape Bon, near Tunis. He subsequently returned to the Barham, and in March, 1839, removed into the Winchester, 50, fitting for the flag of Sir Thomas Harvey, commander-in-chief in the West Indies and North America, and on Nov. 13, 1841, was promoted to be lieutenant and acting commander of the Romney, 30, depôt at the Havannah, for liberated African slaves. He afterwards served in the Pilot, 16, Capt. W. Houstoun, from June, 1842, until May, 1843, and in the Excellent at Portsmouth from June, 1843, until Jan., 1845. He was next employed in the Vindictive, 50, bearing the flag, on the North America and West Indies station, of Sir F. W. Austen, from Jan., 1845, until paid off, June 16, 1848, and from July, 1849, until promoted to commander, Oct. 22, 1853; was senior in the Dædalus, 70, Capt. G. G. Wellesley, in the Pacific. He became retired captain, Oct. 22, 1868.

The death is announced by telegraph from India of Col. G. P. B. Sherrard, Madras S.C., Judge-Advocate-General, Madras Army, which has occurred at Madras, at the age of 57. Col. Sherrard served in the Burmese war in 1852-53, and was present at the defence of Martaban and recapture of Billing (medal with clasp for Pegu). He joined the Army Feb. 3, 1844, and became col. Feb. 3, 1875.

Towards the end of December a highly sensational prosecution was concluded by the Naval Tribunal at St. Petersburg. The accused was Capt. Baranoff, naval aide-de-camp to the Czar, who commanded the steam corvette Vesta during the late Russo-Turkish war, and the prosecution was instituted by the Russian Ministry of Marine. Those who followed the narrative of the war, as it was told from day to day in the newspapers, will remember an engagement which was fought out in the Black Sea between the Vesta and the large Turkish war steamer Fedji-Bulend, and, according to the official accounts, ended by the Vesta's complete victory. The victors, and especially Capt. Baranoff, received great ovations in Russia, and unprecedented rewards and distinctions both from the Russian people and the Czar. The German Emperor conferred on Baronoff the Cross for Military Merit, and the Shar of Persia gave him the Order of the Lion and the Sun. The second officer, also, of the Vesta, Capt. and Lieut. Roshdestvensky, was amply rewarded and decorated. It would seem that all the parties might have been content to rest on their laurels; but it fell out otherwise. Suddenly St. Petersburg society was surprised by a series of articles in the Novoye Vremya, written by Lieut. Roshdestvensky, in which he declared that there had been no fight at all between the Vesta and the Fedji-Bulend, but that the Russian corvette had simply saved herself from capture by a hasty flight and greater speed, &c. Capt. Baronoff naturally felt himself aggrieved by such statements (or disclosures), and brought his lieutenant before the Naval Tribunal. But this Court, after keeping the matter in suspense for eleven months, dismissed Baranoff's complaint as without foundation. The captain addressed a memorial to the Ministry of Marine complaining of this decision, and accusing the Naval Tribunal of partiality and prejudice. But the Marine Department, having considered the whole matter, came to the conclusion that itself had been ill-treated by Baranoff, and directed him to be tried by court-martial. The sentence was that Baranoff was dismissed the Service. He is 42 years of age, and was chief of the Naval Museum, with an annual salary of 5,280 roubles (about £790). He had no less than nine Russian and four foreign Orders.—Times.

NAVAL UNIFORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—Referring to p. 485 of the quarterly Navy List for January, 1880, respecting Naval uniforms, I find the uniform cap laid down by their Lordships for Naval schoolmasters and ships' stewards to be the same pattern as master-at-arms. Can you inform me why the two last mentioned ratings throughout the Service do not wear the device, or is it a mistake of the publishers? If you will kindly insert it, with an answer, in your valuable paper, you will greatly oblige.—I am, &c., A Trooper.

[An elaborate volume, containing plates of almost every uniform of the Navy, has recently been published by Admiralty authority, and a copy is supplied to each Commander-in-Chief, for reference.—Ed. A. & N. G.]

Amusements.

Fog, frost, and snow never having seriously impeded the locomotion of playgoers for a single night since the year, commenced the most serious drawbacks to theatrical prosperity at this season have not been encountered, and the result is shown in an increase of receipts at the different establishments greatly in excess of those taken during the corresponding period of several previous seasons.

Her Majesty's Theatre has been nightly thronged, and the Carl Rosa opera season promises to be productive of very satisfactory results. Balfe's opera of "The Bohemian Girl," sustaining the popularity originally acquired thirty-seven years ago, has been revived with Miss Georgina Burns as Arline and Mr. Maas as Thaddeus. The vocal powers of the graceful representative of the heroine, and the tasteful style and sympathetic quality of tone displayed by Mr. Moss, now holding a foremost position in his department of operatic art, received enthusiastic recognition. The choral and orchestral accompaniments have been given with an effect never surpassed. Later in the week, Goetz's opera of "The Taming of the Shrew," hitherto only known to the country by a hasty representation at Drury Lane, has been successfully brought forward. Mdlle. MinnieHauk made her first appearance on the English stage as Katherine, originally played by her when the opera was first produced. Mr. Walter Bolton was the Petruchio, and in other respects a very efficient cast was provided.

At the Olympic has been acted "Brighton," Mr. Frank Marshall's version of Mr. Bronson Howard's farcical comedy of "Saratoga," originally introduced to a London public at the Court Theatre in May, 1874, and afterwards transferred to the Criterion, where a successful run was prolonged. Mr. Charles Wyndham now resumes the part of the valuable and irrepressible Bob Sackett, with which he was formerly identified, and his butterfly gaiety and exhilarating display of animal spirits are as prominently noteworthy as heretofore. The farcical extravaganza, for the piece can claim no higher designation, has the advantage of receiving in its transfer to this establishment the aid of Mr. Graham as Jack Benedict, and of Mr. Righton as the deaf old Mr. Vanderpump, while Miss Amalia as the lively Mrs. Carter, and Mr. Maclean, Mr. W. S. Penley, and Mr. F. Charles in the other prominent characters, maintain the diversion of a thoroughly hilarious performance manifestly suited to the taste of the spectators. A two-act farce, called "My Enemy," written by Mr. R. Reece, on the foundation of an old French vaudeville, enables Mr. Righton, as a victim to superstitious impressions, to extend his command over the laughter of the audience by showing the ludicrous positions he is compelled to assume through the machinations of a rival blessed with a much happier destiny.

The Folly has continued the series of Mr. Byron's comedies, by adding to the list "Cyril's Success," standing prominently forth as among the best of that industrious dramatist's productions. It was with this brightly-written and carefully-constructed play that the Globe Theatre was first opened in November, 1868. Mr. H. J. Byron now plays for the first time in London Matthew Pincher, the cynical literary hack, and makes the lines, originally delivered by Mr. John Clarke, tell with the utmost emphasis. Miss Lilian Cavalier as Mrs. Cuthbert, and Mr. Ward as Cyril Cuthbert, strengthen the favourable opinions already formed of their talents, and with Miss Emily Thorne as the starched schoolmistress, Miss Grennett, Miss Roland Phillips as the Hon. Fred Titeboy, and Mr. Billington as Major Treherne, the principal characters are most effectively embodied. Mr. J. L. Toole has so far recovered that he is expected to re-appear next week, when he will probably present "Paul Pry," before testing his energies with the character Mr. Byron has written for him in the new comedy to be called "The Upper Crust."

The opening night of the Italian Opera is now fixed for Tuesday, April 13.

On the ground formerly occupied by Savile Palace, occupying the north side of Leicester Square, vacant since the building was burned down on Feb. 28, 1865, a circular building, intended for dioramic representations, is about to be erected.

The Investment Registry and Stock Exchange (Limited) has been incorporated under the Companies' Acts, 1862 to 1879, with limited liability, for the purpose of applying the reciprocal benefits of co-operative trading to the sale and purchase of stocks, shares, mortgages, and other securities, by means of an agency, through which vendors and purchasers will be enabled to transact business directly, at a greatly reduced cost, upon the principle recommended in the report of the Royal Commission appointed in 1878 to inquire into the constitution of the London Stock Exchange.

The list of applications for shares in the Grosvenor Library (Limited) will close on the 31st inst. for London, and on Feb. 4 for the country and abroad.

It will save the expense of two out of the three commissions now payable on each transaction. In the words of the Royal Commissioners:—"By the exclusion of the middle-man, for whose services there is no need, it possesses the great advantage of saving to the parties the profits, sometimes unreasonably large, which he secures to himself."

Dog Licences must be renewed at the same time, and whenever any additional Dog is kept, a Licence must be immediately obtained.

Farmers and Shepherds may obtain exemptions for a limited number of Dogs kept and used solely for tending sheep or cattle on a farm, but a Declaration that the dogs are so used must be made to the Supervisor of Excise for the District, who alone can issue the exemptions.

Licences or exemptions are not transferable from one person to another, and the penalty for keeping a Dog without Licence or exemption is £5, and for making an untrue Declaration, £20.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' 'Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

These Hotels, containing upwards of 200 Rooms, have been for many years largely patronised by Members of Parliament, the Clergy, and by Military and Naval Officers and their Families, by reason of their central, but retired localities, affording all the comforts and luxuries of high-class Hotels.

THE Select Committee appointed to inquire into, and report upon, the relative merits of various systems of machine guns, entered to compete at trials organised by the War Office at Shoeburyness, met there last Monday week, and commenced what was intended to be an elaborate series of experiments, laid down in a programme drawn up at the War Office, setting forth the numerous tests to which each gun would be subjected. The first condition laid down was that each weapon should fire a minimum of 400 rounds per minute, and the first day was devoted, in consequence, to rapid firing. The guns under trial were the Nordenfeldt and the Gatling. Since then, little or no progress has been made, and, on Tuesday last, Colonel Hastings was somewhat astonished on most unexpectedly receiving orders from the Secretary of State for War, by telegraph, to adjourn both the Select Committee and the trials, "sine die." It is impossible to say what are the reasons which have led to the issuing of this order. Mr. Nordenfeldt has for a lengthened period been preparing for this trial of his invention, and is on the spot; while the Gatling Gun Company have sent Dr. Gatling to this country to watch the trials on their behalf, the Company having received but a few weeks' notice that the War Office had decided to use the Boxer Martini-Henry service ammunition at this trial, for which the Gatling gun is not adapted. The arrival in England of Dr. Gatling was unexpected, and rumour has it that his turning-up so suddenly was anything but a pleasant surprise to the organisers of these trials, and that they have therefore been abandoned,—at least, for the present. This is not as it should be. It is a well known fact that Mr. Nordenfeldt has been busily engaged for nearly two years converting his gun so as to enable it to fire the Boxer cartridge, but it appears from inquiries we have made on the spot, that the notice to the Gatling Gun Company to adapt their weapon to the use of this inferior cartridge was extremely short. The consequence was that the gun first sent to Shoeburyness having been designed to fire the solid drawn cartridge, it had to be sent at a moment's notice to Elswick to be converted, so as to comply with the conditions laid down in the programme of the Committee issued by the War Office. Having been hastily altered, Sir William Armstrong's firm returned the Gatling to Woolwich to undergo a preliminary trial; but before it was fired, Captain Bainbridge, a member of the Committee, gauged the chambers, and finding that they varied slightly from the regulation standard, suggested that they should be reamed. This was done; but, strange to say, the reaming spoiled the working of the gun. It was at once sent back to Elswick, where new barrels and chambers had to be fitted to it. Hearing of these contretemps, the Gatling Gun Company sent over Dr. Gatling to superintend whatever alterations the War Office might still further require. In the meantime, Sir William Armstrong's firm, pushed for time, hurriedly got the gun ready, to avoid its being excluded from the competitive trials. The intricacies of red-tape are certainly difficult to unravel, and more difficult still is it to understand the principles or motives which influence those who pull the official wires behind the scenes. At the present moment, after having fairly tried the Boxer cartridge, wrapped in thin brass foil and brown paper, all Governments except our own have rejected it, adopting in its stead the solid drawn brass case, which is as smooth as the Boxer casing is rough and wrinkled. That some unseen influence is at work, endeavouring to have the obsolete Boxer cartridge retained as the Service pattern in this country, cannot for a moment be doubted, or else why decide on rather decreasing the efficiency of the machine gun than abandon the use of the Boxer cartridge? With the solid drawn brass cartridge used by all other Governments, the new Gatling gun fires about 1,000 rounds per minute. This fact has been thoroughly established, and is well known at the War Office, and yet, sooner than give up the Boxer cartridge, the standard of efficiency of the gun is reduced by 600 rounds a minute! This is necessitated by the fact that the rough exterior surface of the Boxer cartridge prevents its rolling home as smoothly in loading as is the case with the solid drawn cartridge. The friction set up retards, while the wrinkles and shoulder which often obtain in the Boxer cartridge after a day or two of service intermit the loading. These facts being known at the War Office, the standard of efficiency of the gun is reduced. And the first condition laid down in the programme is that each gun shall fire at least—only—four hundred rounds a minute, when it is well known that the Gatling Gun Company are prepared to supply mitrailleuses throwing one thousand rounds in the same space of time. These facts challenge contradiction. We refrain from making any comments, beyond reminding the officials who are responsible for the adjournment of the trials, that they are showing but scant courtesy to the strangers their own acts have brought to our shores. The opening proceedings of the Select Committee last Monday week consisted in testing the Nordenfeldt and Gatling guns in rapid firing. No targets were used, the ammunition being simply fired away as fast as those serving the guns could succeed in discharging them. When discussing the results, however, it must not be forgotten that a much longer period had been occupied in converting the Nordenfeldt than the Gatling, and that, whereas the former had ten barrels, the latter had but six; and as its conversion was hurriedly executed, it cannot be said either to be a fair sample of what the Gatling Gun Company can produce, or to do justice to the system invented by Dr. Gatling, a system peculiarly adapted to fire the solid drawn brass case cartridge adopted by all foreign Governments. Hence the fault due to the cartridge should not be attributed to the gun. The difference between the two systems under trial, in addition to the number of barrels to each gun, consists in that the Nordenfeldt is a volley-firing weapon, discharging ten rounds at a time; while the Gatling fires each round separately, but in rapid succession, when it is essential to maintain a heavy fire. The great fault of the French mitrailleuse was that it was a volley-firing gun, and we remember on more than one occasion having had our attention called during the Franco-German war to the bodies of German soldiers which had received nearly the whole discharge. On one occasion, we heard of a soldier receiving seventeen bullets in his body. Such a waste of ammunition is impossible with the Gatling. It will be observed, however, that the conditions under which these two guns were being tried were unequal. Nevertheless, the Nordenfeldt, with its ten barrels discharging ten rounds at a time, fired about 500 rounds in the minute; the Gatling, with its six barrels, firing about 400 rounds in the same time, including stoppages due to defects in the Boxer ammunition supplied by the War Office. But, in discussing these results, we should not confine ourselves to a comparison in this case of the relative number of rounds fired, should we honestly desire to secure for the British Army the very best weapon it is possible to produce, as, in other points, the Gatling showed great advantages over the Nordenfeldt. Firing, as does the latter gun, ten rounds in a volley, its recoil is great, and necessitates the re-sighting of the gun with each round fired. This causes a serious loss of time, and diminishes the effectiveness of its fire. Not so, however, with the Gatling, which, firing but one shot at a time, although these are fired in rapid succession, it receives but the constant shock of one explosion or discharge, and is therefore neither moved nor displaced by any recoil. The difference in the effect of the fire of these two guns was somewhat curiously forced upon our notice last Monday week. A stray dog, observing the shot striking the shallow sheet of water spread over the sands, rushed at the spot while the Nordenfeldt gun was being fired. To cease firing on account of the dog was not to be thought of. Strange to say, the recoil of this gun, resulting in an increase of elevation at each discharge, saved the animal's life. Each successive discharge passed over the dog, and struck the water a few yards farther off than did its predecessor, when on rushed the dog to seek where the water was last disturbed. When the firing ceased the dog was unhurt. Far different, however, would have been the fate of this poor brute, had he appeared on the scene when the Gatling was being fired, for the aim of that gun remaining unaltered throughout, each shot, in rapid succession, struck approximately in the same place as did its predecessor. It is, therefore, not astonishing to find that the target practice of the Gatling is far superior to that of the Nordenfeldt gun, a fact Mr. Nordenfeldt has admitted to obtain, when the performance of the new Gatling is compared with that of the Nordenfeldt gun as at present constructed. This defect, however, Mr. Nordenfeldt is sanguine he can remedy. Far more serious, however, is the defect caused in the Nordenfeldt by the magazine system of loading adopted in that gun. The magazine fits over the barrels, and is made to contain a very large number of rounds. Should these be struck in action by one of the enemy's shots, a serious explosion, endangering the lives of those serving the gun, can scarcely fail to ensue. The Gatling, on the other hand, is loaded with cartridges extracted from single-feed cases, so that in the event of a case being struck by a shot, no wholesale explosion can possibly obtain. Another source of danger in the Nordenfeldt gun lies in its numerous extractors, one being required for each barrel. These happen to be so constructed that, by the simple process known as "the fatigue of metal," they must infallibly give way at some period in the life of the gun; and should one of these extractors break while the gun is in action, the result would most assuredly be an explosion of all the ammunition, both in the gun and in the magazine, on the new cartridge being forcibly jammed by the action of the lever against the non-extracted shell of the one just fired, for at that instant the passage to the magazine would be open. Then, again, the cocking and firing device is defective, and has already led to an accident, attended with fatal results, on board the Comus. In the Gatling gun this is so arranged that it is impossible for a cartridge to be fired, except when the lock has all the cartridges full home in the chambers of the barrels, and this obtains only when the breech is perfectly closed. In other words, in the Gatling it is impossible to fire a cartridge except when the lock is occupying all the space from the firing surface to the cam, be those serving the gun never so careless; and it is on these parts that the recoil is received, they receiving the rear end of the barrels. On board the Comus all was open when the cartridge exploded, and killed the man who was showing off the gun. This feature in the Gatling makes the gun perfectly safe to the men serving it, while another marked advantage of this weapon over others is that its locks are interchangeable, and in case of injury can be quickly removed and be as expeditiously replaced, or the gun can be fired with one or more locks taken out. All the working parts of the gun, too, as well as the barrels, are cased in bronze, to afford protection from rust and dirt. The great advantage this device confers upon the Gatling would have been clearly demonstrated, had the War Office allowed the trials to have been concluded, for one of the tests laid down in the programme was that of digging up and throwing sand in large quantities over the guns while they were being fired. Through this ordeal the Gatling gun has already successfully passed in America and elsewhere, and no fear was entertained of its doing the same at Shoeburyness, although, from its having to fire cartridges other than those best adapted to the system, we understand it was thought possible that this converted weapon might have appeared to some disadvantage before the Select Committee. The defects, if any, in the converted gun should not, however, be allowed to militate against the system, than which it is universally admitted a better has not yet been invented; and if the War Office persist in their determination to leave no stone unturned in the attempt to retain the Boxer cartridge in use in our Service, the least that can be done is to give the manufacturers of all machine guns fair notice of the fact, so as to give them time to adapt the weapons they are called upon to produce to the defective ammunition the War Office seems determined to have fired at all costs, and even at the risk of seriously reducing the efficiency of the British Army, hazarding thereby its fate, should it be called upon in the future to maintain British rights abroad against the better armed forces of European Governments.

It may be remembered that a few months ago we announced that a young recruit at Chatham, the son of an optician in Germany, had invented a new range-finder which had been examined by a preliminary board of officers, and found to be superior to any other instrument of the kind at present in use. Our readers will doubtless be interested in learning what the fate of this young man and his invention has been since our notice appeared. The accuracy of the following statement is vouched for by one who has had every means of ascertaining facts, and who considers, as every officer in her Majesty's Service will do, that a cruel hardship has been inflicted upon one whose case well deserved to be treated with leniency, and would have been, had that good friend of the British soldier, H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, had the whole truth brought to his notice. A few days after the paragraph appeared in our columns, Private Hensoldt was put under arrest, and kept for 16 days in a guard-room in Chatham. He was then sent under escort to Manchester, to be handed over to the 20th Hussars, from which regiment he was accused of being a deserter. The 20th Hussars being at the time on point of moving to Ireland, the man was kept for another eight days in the guard-room in Manchester, and was finally sent as a prisoner with the dismounted party to Ireland. After 18 days' further confinement at Newbridge, he was at last tried by court-martial under the following charges:—1st, fraudulent enlistment; 2nd, losing part of his kit through neglect. He produced a written statement in defence, the purport of which was as follows:—"I came from America in July, 1878, and after my arrival in England enlisted in the 20th Hussars, then stationed in Leeds. It was not inclination for a military career, nor extreme poverty which caused me to take this step. My reason for entering the British Army was peculiar in its kind. I had invented an instrument for the determination of distances for military purposes, an instrument which I was convinced would supersede all others of a similar nature. I intended to bring the invention into notice, and, in case of its being approved of, to sell it, or rather the secret of its principle, to the War Office. My means were too limited to apply direct to the Government, and I had no influential friends to assist me in the matter. I, therefore, seized the only opportunity which presented itself, viz., I enlisted in an English regiment. A few weeks after my enlistment I wrote a letter to the officer commanding the 20th Hussars, stating the particulars of my case, and humbly requesting him to grant me an opportunity of making a trial with my instrument in the presence of himself and other officers. The colonel at first seemed to take an interest in the matter, and promised to have it tried on the next day; but to my disappointment, the experiments did not take place, and, after they had been postponed from one week to another, the matter seemed to be neglected or abandoned altogether. Nearly two months had elapsed from the date of my first application, and not the least step had been taken towards the realisation of my wishes. At last, when I discovered that I had failed in the chief object of my enlistment, I resolved to leave the regiment, and was at that time firmly convinced that it was for the good of the Service that I should do so. If I had had the means, I should have purchased my discharge rather than have left thus illegally; but I had not, and the circumstances compelled me to act as I did. After this I lived for nearly three months with a friend in Sheffield, a portion of which time I used in further improving my instrument; and about three months ago, I resolved to make one more effort to bring a highly important invention into notice. I enlisted in the 2nd Battalion 5th Fusiliers, and succeeded in interesting the commanding officer, and a great many influential men, in the subject. Several experiments took place, which proved highly successful. Last September, when the Duke of Cambridge visited Chatham to inspect the troops, I was even brought before his Royal Highness, who conversed for nearly fifteen minutes with me about my invention, and seemed to take a great interest in the matter. A few weeks after this, and when everything was progressing favourably, the publicity which the case had attained led to the discovery that I had deserted from the 20th Hussars, and I was put under arrest, and charged with fraudulent enlistment. The commanding officer of the 5th Fusiliers tried to obtain a pardon for me, and for sixteen days I was kept in the guard-room in Chatham, expecting every day to be liberated; but finally I heard, to my sorrow, that I was to be sent back to the 20th Hussars. And now, President and Gentlemen of the Honourable Court, I humbly beseech you to take the peculiar circumstances of my case into consideration, and deal leniently with me; for, although I am well aware that they did not justify me in committing the offences I am charged with, yet I sincerely hope that you will be generous enough not to inflict on me a severe penance, and thus add another heavy burden on a life already bowed down by a course of afflictions and disappointments not ordinarily to be met with. My character, both in the 5th Fusiliers and in the 20th Hussars, was unblemished. I further humbly beg to state that I cannot well soldier in a cavalry regiment, and beg to be permitted to serve in the 5th Fusiliers." This was the prisoner's defence, as far as can be ascertained. The result of the court-martial was that the prisoner was sentenced to fifty-six days' hard labour, of which, however, fourteen days were remitted by the General of the District, in consideration of the prisoner's long term of imprisonment. He further was sentenced to be placed under stoppages till he had made good the articles of his kit, which had been lost through his neglect. We ask,—Is not the treatment this man has received a disgrace to our military administration? We do not complain of the sentence of the court-martial, for it was lenient, considering the serious nature of the offence with which the prisoner was charged; but was it necessary to proceed with all the severity of military justice against a man who was about to present a military invention of the highest importance to the War Office, and whose only crime consisted in struggling hard to obtain a fair trial for his invention before competent authorities? All must commend the action of the commanding officer of the 2nd Battalion 5th Fusiliers, whose treatment of the man was marked by that sound sense which has earned for Colonel Bigge the confidence alike of the Authorities—it will be remembered that he was selected recently to sit on Lord Airey's Committee on Army Organisation—and the Service generally. But what is to become of the invention now? Are those who have seen the instrument and tested its qualities going to allow the matter to drop entirely? The secret is still, we believe, in the hands of him to whom is due the credit of having originated it, and whose anxiety to serve the British Government has brought him into so much and such unnecessary trouble. One thing is certain, the man ought not to be allowed to remain in the ranks of the 20th Hussars, where there will naturally exist a certain amount of prejudice against him. To be sure, the present lieutenant-colonel of that regiment is an officer who is not likely to be guilty of the same error of judgment which marked the conduct of his predecessor; but still it is to the advantage of the public service that every possible facility should be afforded the inventor to develop his instrument, and the issue of range-finders should be stopped, pending a decision as to the merits of the idea which the War Office is indebted to Colonel Bigge, of the 5th Fusiliers, for having brought to its notice, when another officer had, in effect, refused to put himself to any trouble in the matter. The great advantage of the instrument referred to consists in its requiring no base-line whatever. One man alone can work it, and determine any distance from 100 to nearly 4,000 yards, with the greatest exactness and without any calculation or straining of the mental faculties. The time required for judging a distance with it is only about thirty seconds; but by a little practice, distances may be easily determined, within four or five seconds. The instrument further is small, and very easy of conveyance, so that it can be carried in a case to hang by one's side without inconvenience. Of what immense benefit such an instrument would be in case of its introduction in the Army may be imagined. The only instruments used at present in our Army are the Stereometer and Watkins's Range-finder, both of which require extensive base-lines, several people to work them, give very incorrect results, and are absolutely useless in warfare. The subject is one of great importance, as we are now spending large sums on range-finders on the Watkins' system, which, after all, may prove utterly useless. With a captain of the 20th Hussars acting as Assistant Private Secretary at the War Office, we draw attention to the matter, in full confidence that steps will ere long be taken to reparate Private Hensoldt for the injustice he has suffered, and that the man will have extended to him that official encouragement which he has hitherto looked for in vain.

A series of experiments, on the surviving 38-ton gun of the Thunderer, was concluded on the 16th inst., in the presence of the members of the Committee on Ordnance and others. The last two rounds were fired under conditions similar to those to which the companion gun was supposed by many to have yielded, and the results almost prove that the finding of the Malta Committee is correct. The experiments, so far as they go, have been exhaustive, and are highly instructive, not only to those who have devoted special attention to the structure of artillery, but also to every intelligent officer, who naturally takes a deep interest in the subject. They have shown conclusively that the effect of an air-space between the charge and the projectile is generally to diminish the strain on the gun when fired and the velocity of the shot, these varying in general with the amount of the space; and further, that there is great reason to believe that a slight obstruction in advance of the projectile, such as that of a wad jammed in the bore, does not produce abnormal results when the charge is exploded. Whether the Committee will be instructed to carry the trial to the condition of double-loading remains to be seen; it is more than probable that, under such circumstances, the gun would share the fate of its late companion; and since there is admittedly no advantage in double-loading, the interests of science do not seem to call loudly for the great expense which would necessarily attend such a course. The gist of the report of the Malta Committee is that the gun was fired when loaded with a battering charge, Palliser shell, full charge, and common shell, consecutively; and the evidence adduced went to show that the only way in which this could have been the case was by the gun being placed in the loading position, after having missed fire the previous round, when the second charge and projectile were rammed (not) home. The Thunderer's 38-ton guns were mounted side by side in the fore turret, and were fitted with hydraulic gear, enabling them to be worked either singly or simultaneously, on Mr. Rendel's system. The arrangement for loading is the following:—The gun being placed in a certain position, the muzzle is so depressed that a fixed hydraulic rammer in the turret-room is in prolongation of the axis of the bore, a loading port in the lower part of the turret affording the means of passage for the charge, which, when the gun is ready to receive it, is placed by a bearer between the muzzle and the rammer-head; it is then rammed home, an arrangement attached to the rammer indicating when that is accomplished; the rammer is withdrawn, the muzzle now elevated, and the gun, run out, is ready for use. After firing, the operation is repeated, preceded, however, by a process of sponging, performed by the rammer, which is so constructed that, when home, a jet of water washes out the chamber of the bore. The Thunderer's guns, being long in the chase, did not recoil, when fired, to the loading position, and in consequence, the hydraulic gear for running in had to be brought into use, and in practice the working of this gear probably followed immediately on the firing of the gun. At the time when the accident happened, the guns were being fired and worked simultaneously, and though it will for ever be impossible to say what actually took place, adopting the finding of the Malta Committee as the true cause of the disaster, an explanation of some sort may be attempted. The guns were fired simultaneously, and the man attending the hydraulic gear for running-in, hearing the report and feeling the concussion, may have brought it into action without observing that one gun had missed fire. This being the case, both guns would be sponged and loaded for the next round; but neither the sponging nor the loading of the one that missed fire could have been properly performed, for in neither case could the rammer have reached its proper position. There were, therefore, two distinct failures in either the gun's gear or its crew. 1st. It could not have been sufficiently apparent that the gun had missed fire. 2nd. The means of indicating the position of the rammer when in use were ineffective, or not properly attended to. With a perfectly trained crew, the fault, if fault there be, would necessarily fall on the gun gear; but should it so happen that the men working the guns should not have had sufficient practice to enable them to stand with indifference the demoralising tendency of the force of the concussion, some slight neglect on their part is very excusable in either case. The concussion attending the firing of a 38-ton gun is so great as to be painful to those unaccustomed to it, and it is just possible that he who attended the running-in gear in the turret turned his back to the muzzles of the guns, and put his fingers in his ears; the smoke in the turret might also assist to prevent the discovery that the gun had missed fire. The working of the hydraulic rammer is less easy to explain, for though undoubtedly the light in the turret-room could not have been too brilliant, it would seem that the details of the operation could have been accurately followed, if the gear were in thorough working order. The error, if it were committed, must be laid on the demoralisation of the loading party. It does not follow that any of the turret's crew were in the least to be blamed, and it is but charitable to believe that some unknown cause produced the sad disaster with which the year of 1879 opened to the Mediterranean Fleet. Still, if properly considered, and the consideration strictly acted upon, that which at the time seemed a grievous calamity, may be turned to ultimate good. Whether the future weapon of the Navy be a gun loading at the breech or the muzzle, whether it be the ram, gun, or torpedo, the present generation of Naval officers must turn their attention, and the greater part of their attention, to the efficient working of that weapon. The Service, as a whole, may be said to pay too little heed to those exercises which, though so important, have little chance of being brought before the observation of their companion ships. Thus it happens that a commander will devote money, time, and right hard work—which would be invaluable if spent in the proper sphere—to the appearance of his ship, "alow and aloft," and to the exercising of the ship's company at sail drill, &c., the only advantage of so doing being that the esprit de corps of the ship is kept up to a point that occasionally creates bad feeling, and that the ship herself, at any rate, looks as if she were fit for any service at a moment's notice. This can only be done at the expense of the real efficiency of the ship as a man-of-war; and so it often occurs that the commanding officer who grudges twenty or thirty men an hour's drill at the guns, will spend the best part of a forenoon exercising the whole ship's company at "stations," &c., and in general preparation for the next day of "general exercise aloft." The position of the gunnery officer, who, under the captain, has charge of the fighting department of the ship's organisation, as principal instructor, &c., is as often as not most disagreeable. His drills necessarily interfere with the comfort of some on board; they not only occasion the soiling of the decks, but also make it a matter of increased difficulty to keep the bright gear of the guns in that state of mirror-like splendour so much in vogue, and the number of men under instruction or at practice necessarily reduces the strength of those available for decorative and other purposes. It has not been suggested that the accident on board the Thunderer is at all attributable to the imperfection of the training of the crew, nor can the system of loading or working be condemned because the gun burst; but the occurrence may serve to show those responsible for such matters that with the monster guns, with gear more or less complicated now used on board a ship, the first, the most important of all duties, is to train the ship's company to work them thoroughly, safely, and well, and to preserve them in perfect working order. Until the position of the gunnery officer is improved and strengthened, until his brother officers learn to work in concert with him, until a man-of-war is regarded chiefly as a moveable park of heavy Artillery, no system of loading will prevent accidents—no purely mechanical arrangement can be expected to produce its full effect. The time has passed when it was the duty of a ship to "walk the waters like a thing of life," so to speak. The beauty of a man-of-war of the present day lies in offensive aud defensive weapons, and the true test of the smartness of a ship's company is the manner in which they work them. If it ever become fashionable to regard these as the criterions of beauty and smartness, then we may hope that "shift topsails" will cease to be one of the chief joys of the Commander, or spotless decks the pride of the First Lieutenant.

The Times of Thursday contains an interesting headed article on the military struggle of Russia in Central Asia. The strength of the army of Turkestan—reinforced by 10,000 men, ordered to join it from Orenburg—amounts to about 70,000 men, with 80 guns. Of these, some 42,000 men, with 30 guns, will, the writer in the Times considers, be needed to maintain Russian rule in Turkestan, and watch the Chinese frontier. This leaves 28,000 men, with 50 guns, and 5,000 military settlers, for operations beyond the frontier. Making a moderate deduction for sick and deficiencies in the establishment, the effective force of General Kaufmann will be only some 28,000 men. Of these, it is believed that 10,000 will take up a strong position near Balkh and Badakshan, leaving 18,000 men and 30 guns for the advance on Merv. This advance will probably be made by several columns, moving respectively from Charqui, Tlchak, Narezin, and Burdalik, all on the Oxus. From Charqui to Merv is 142 miles, and the distances from the other three places are but little longer. There is also an idea of moving a column from Khiva across the desert, by a route followed by a Khivan army in 1832. The distance by this road is 200 miles, but General Ivanoff, the Governor of the Amu-Darya district, believes that the distance could be accomplished by a lightly equipped column in ten days. In addition to the troops we have enumerated, there is the Bokharan contingent, of from 10,000 to 20,000 men. These, however, are untrustworthy, especially in the event of a disaster. It is assumed by the writer in the Times that the Russians will leave their auxiliaries on the frontier to guard the communications, but such an arrangement strikes us as being somewhat rash. At all events, these Bokharans cannot be counted as adding largely to the fighting strength of the expedition, and 28,000 Russian troops, of whom 5,000 are military settlers, will be by no means too great a force for so difficult an undertaking as a campaign against Merv. Besides, great allowances must be made for wear-and-tear during the marches of concentration, and for the garrisons of posts on the lines of communication. In addition, we should doubt very much whether the Army of Turkestan, nominally 70,000 strong, can really turn out more than 50,000 effective fighting-men. In all armies there is a great discrepancy between the paper and the real strength, and this is particularly the case in Russia. Turkestan is a long way from the Russian Ministry of War, and the army is broken up into numerous widely separated detachments. There is thus every opportunity for Russian Colonels to follow their traditional practice of increasing their emoluments by keeping on the muster-roll men who have died, or placing there men who were never enrolled. As to the idea of sending troops from Europe, the idea is absurd, for it would take nearly a twelvemonth to transport any considerable body to the banks of the Oxus. The chief difficulty of the expedition will be water and transport, and when we remember how nearly the Khuram expedition failed, we cannot but think that General Kaufmann will do well not to be over-sanguine with regard to the new campaign.

H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh inspected the training-ship Indefatigable at Liverpool on Saturday morning, and was received on board by Mr. T. H. Ismay (chairman of the institution), Captain Thrupp, R.N., Mr. Wm. Inman, and other gentlemen. The boys went through their drill in a thoroughly efficient manner, and at the close of the inspection his Royal Highness expressed his pleasure at their smartness and intelligence. In the afternoon his Royal Highness completed his official duties by inspecting the Naval Artillery Volunteers on board the Eagle in the King's Dock, a report of which we give elsewhere. The Duke left Liverpool by a night train for London, and proceeded for Paris at once, having postponed his intended visit to Bristol.

Rear-Admiral Stirling was in the Triumph at Callao on December 26. He left on December 30 for Coquimbo, but returned from Mollendo on receiving information that a revolution had broken out.

Rear-Admiral Gore Jones was in the Ruby at Bombay on January 10, having shifted his flag from the Vulture, which sailed on the 7th January for Muscat.

Appointment to a seat on an Admiralty committee has recently proved a preliminary step to a command, for the vacancies caused by the transfer of Captain Chatfield from the Thunderer to the Indus, and the promotion of Rear-Admiral Watson from the Téméraire, have both been filled by officers engaged on committees,—namely, Captains Colomb and Hopkins.

The retirement of Assistant-Paymaster Wenman Green has, we regret to hear, been caused by the unfitness of his health for further service.

The recent torpedo accident at Portsmouth has been the cause of some discussion across the Atlantic among American electricians and torpedo officers. They assert that the English system of instruction is at fault. They maintain that the first thing to be taught in naval torpedo schools is that salt water is a good "return," and needs no "return wire." At the time of the accident in Portsmouth Harbour, a wire was connected to the positive pole of the battery in the leading boat. This should only have been done when all was ready. A return wire is never necessary, excepting in fresh or brackish water, and, in the present case, an "earth," they conclude, must have been trailing overboard. The sea water would have made the "return," and as this fact appears to have been overlooked at the inquiry, being unnoticed in any of the evidence, American officers assume that in England it is unknown. This is a mistake. It is well known in this country that salt water is a "good return," but the officer in the leading boat, in which was the battery, appears to have overlooked the fact. This seems to show that no precautions are too great when dealing with electricity.

An addition has been made to the Fleet by the launch from the shipbuilding yard of Messrs. Elder and Co., Glasgow, of the Rambler. Her length is 157 ft.; breadth, 29 ft. 6 in.; and depth, 14 ft. 5 in. She will be fitted with two 64-pounder guns, one in the bow and one astern, and a broadside gun of 20 cwt. Her engines are to be 750 horse-power.

The Greenwich Hospital pension of £50 a year, vacant by the death of Retired Deputy-Inspector John Dunlop, has been awarded to Retired Fleet Surgeon Robert C. Scott.

We regret to learn than an epidemic of a virulent description of measles has for some weeks been prevalent in Plymouth, and especially in the Royal Marine Barracks at Stonehouse, where a number of children have already died, and several families are still in quarantine.

Rear-Admiral Hood, in the Minotaur, with the Agincourt and Achilles, left Lisbon on Thursday for a cruise westward. The ships will call off Lisbon on February 4, and then sail to Vigo, returning about March 4, and afterwards leave for Gibraltar.

We understand that Dr. John Watt Reid, whose intended transfer from the Hospital at Haslar to the Medical Department in Spring Gardens we recently announced, will next week assume the duties of Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy. This appointment will, we are convinced, give general satisfaction throughout the Service, as whereever Dr. Reid has been employed during his long career, he has won golden opinions from those with whom he has served, and from all who chanced to come under his care. While on board the Nile, then bearing the flag of Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, the professional knowledge and skill of Dr. Reid were made manifest during the outbreaks of yellow-fever which occurred.

We regret to hear that a telegram has been received at the Admiralty announcing the death of Dr. Gibson, B.A., surgeon at the Naval hospital at Jamaica.

An exchange has, we understand, been sanctioned between the chaplains of the Boadicea and the Dido, at the request of the chaplain of the first-named ship. His wish to leave the Commodore's ship was, we regret to hear, a want of harmony between the Commodore and himself, and it was thought advisable that "one should leave the ship."

Rear-Admiral Boys has been appointed president of the Committee on Machine Guns, in the vacancy caused by the removal of Captain Colomb to the command of the Thunderer.

Captain Bradshaw, C.B., has not been allowed to remain idle for any length of time since he returned from the Cape, and as his last command was a disjointed one, taking out one ship to the Pacific and bringing home another, varied, as fortune had it, by unexpected service at the Cape, he was certainly a deserving claimant for a command. To place so popular an officer, and one whose name is so well known throughout the land, at the head of the Naval training establishments, is also a matter of policy.

In the next Navy List the Spartan and Plover will be included among the ships ordered home, it having been arranged that the Eclipse shall relieve the Spartan on the East Indies station, and the Fantôme shall perform a like service for the Plover in the West Indies. Both these ships have run more than the generally recognised term of a commission, having been commissioned in June, 1876.

Lieutenant Eardley Wilmot has returned to his duties on board the Vernon after the long absence caused by the serious injuries received from the explosion of a fuze, and we are glad to learn that this officer, who so narrowly escaped with his life, is now quite himself again.

Lieutenant Le Strange is to be sympathised with in the mishap that has befallen his command on his first putting to sea, and it is to be hoped that inquiry will elicit the fact that the collision was purely an accident, attributable more to the difficulty in handling the Lively, than to any fault of those on board the vessel.

Rear-Admiral Hickley is the fifth captain who has been advanced to flag-rank during the present month, but this exceptional rush to the senior list will be followed by an intense lull, seeing that the limit of promotions to the active list of Rear-Admirals in any one year has been fixed at seven.

From the description we gave last week of the discovery of the remains of an officer of the ill-fated Orpheus, we hear that there is good reason to believe that the remains found are those of Lieutenant Arthur Jekyll, R.N., who was appointed to that ship as "additional for disposal."

Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., will, in a few days, leave England in the Inconstant for Malta, to relieve Sir Geoffrey Hornby of the Mediterranean command. Sir Beauchamp Seymour has selected Lord Walter Kerr as flag captain, the Hon. Hedworth Lambton as flag lieutenant, Paymaster Lewis Kirkness as secretary, with a staff consisting of Assistant-Paymasters Waller Braddon, Maurice Fenwick, and Henry Paul.

The telegram from Reuter's agent at Ottawa on Wednesday, stating that H.R.H. Princess Louise would be met in the Sarmatian by the Bellerophon, Northampton, and Bacchante, is undoubtedly wrong. The Bellerophon is homeward bound, the Northampton is at Barbadoes, and the Bacchante at Grenada.

Lieutenant Stockton, U.S. Navy, has received permission to pay a visit of inspection to Portsmouth Yard, and directions have also been given to receive him on board the torpedo-ship Vernon.

Vice-Admiral Sir F. L. M'Clintock was in the Northampton, at Bermuda, on January 7. He would leave about January 20 for a cruise among the West Indian Islands. His movements being :—Barbadoes, January 31, leaving on February 8; Trinidad, February 9, leaving on February 16; St. Thomas, March 1, leaving on March 3; Jamaica, March 9, leaving on March 16; Bermuda, March 22, unless he should call at Havannah.

The Arsenal course for lieutenants, R.N., qualifying for gunnery officers, will, we hear, commence at Woolwich on February 2. Accommodation will, if possible, be found for these officers at the Royal Naval College.

Commander Cheyne was most enthusiastically greeted by those assembled at the Mansion House on Wednesday to consider the proposed Arctic expedition. This officer has worked long and zealously in the hope of seeing his pet scheme carried out; and if the enthusiasm with which his views were met on Wednesday may be taken for anything, the expedition is in a fair way of being equipped, notwithstanding the opposition with which its promoter has met in more than one direction. There are now sixty Arctic Committees formed throughout the United Kingdom.

The Naval pensions of £50 a year, vacant by the deaths of Retired Commanders Lewis D. Mitchell and James Irwin, have been awarded to Retired Commanders C. J. Slaughter and G. R. Bell.

We are informed that it is not a mercantile training ship at Sydney to the command of which Commander James Evans has been appointed, but a reformatory ship at Ballarat.

Captain Bickford, R.M.A., will, we hear, proceed to Aldershot on May 1, to complete his Staff College course. Lieutenant Leefe, R.M.A., who has been studying at the Royal Naval College for some time, has submitted his name as a candidate for the June examination for admission to the Staff College.

In consequence of the reorganisation of the Transport Department at the Admiralty, Mr. Rowley Richardson, who has for the last 13 years held the post of Superintendent of the India Branch, and Mr. R. G. J. T. Collings, senior clerk, have been superannuated.

Orders have been given for the Flirt to be commissioned at Devonport on Feb. 10, for service on the West Coast of Africa and Cape of Good Hope station.

Lieutenant Sleeman, R.N., on the Retired List, who served under the Ottoman flag as commander during the Russo-Turkish war, has just published an admirable work on torpedoes and torpedo warfare, of which we give a detailed notice elsewhere.

Lieutenant L. Barrett, Royal Artillery, has been appointed Garrison-Adjutant at Jamaica, vice Lieutenant H. A. S. Barkworth, 1st West India Regiment.

Captain M. F. Thrupp, 45th Regiment, has been appointed to succeed Major F. A. Le Mesurier, R.E., as Inspector of Army Signalling at Aldershot.

An Indian Good Service Pension is placed at the disposal of the Government of India by the death, at Aberdeen, on the 23rd inst., of Major-General R. J. Shaw, on the Retired List, late of the Bombay Staff Corps.

The Daily News understands that Sir Henry Bulwer, Lieutenant-Governor of Natal, and Major-General Sir H. Clifford, commander of the troops in that colony, have both intimated their desire to the Home Government to be relieved of their functions. A telegram from Cape Town, dated the 29th inst., states that General Clifford has been appointed to the military command of the Transvaal.

If evidence was wanting of the unfairness which occasionally marks the conduct of affairs in the Army Medical Department, it may fairly be said to be furnished by the following paragraph, which appeared in the Standard of Thursday :—"The Secretary of State for War, on the recommendation of the Director-General of the Army Medical Department, has consented to allow Surgeon-General J. H. Kerr-Innes, C.B., to retain his appointment as Principal Medical Officer of the Army in India beyond the period when retirement is rendered compulsory. Mr. Innes attained the age of 60 years on Tuesday last, and should, therefore, at once retire; but his exceptional ability has brought him so frequently to notice, that it is considered for the good of the Service that he should be retained." A more disgraceful job than this never was perpetrated, and it is not, perhaps, to be wondered at that the senior officers of the Department are adopting measures to bring the matter before Parliament, in a form which is likely to prove most discomforting to those—whoever they may be—who have been the principal movers in obtaining the sanction of the War Office to the arrangement. We have all along been ready to extend support to the authorities in Whitehall Yard, believing them to be actuated by the best motives; but no man of any integrity could for a moment uphold them in the present instance, and we certainly had hoped to have been able to give a flat denial to the statement of our contemporary. On inquiry, however, we find that the announcement is only too true, and that Mr. Innes is being retained with the sanction, it must be presumed, of the Director-General, contrary to the terms of the Royal Warrant. The retention of Mr. Innes will scarcely tend to raise the Military Medical Service in the eyes of the profession, and in the interests of an all-important Department, and of the Army generally, we hope that Colonel Stanley may be influenced to put a stop at once to a scandal which could not fail to reflect seriously upon his administration of the War Office.

It certainly appears strange that we have received no particulars of the cavalry actions before Cabul on December 11 and 13 last. The relatives and friends of the officers who have been killed are naturally anxious for the fullest details, but these are denied them. We presume a court of inquiry has been assembled at Cabul to ascertain who was responsible for three weak squadrons of cavalry, with four guns, attacking thousands of Afghans in position, armed with Snider rifles. The ground, from all accounts, was very bad for cavalry to advance over, it being intersected with water-courses. The guns, therefore, soon became disabled and useless, and in trying to save these, the Cavalry were sacrificed :—One officer, Royal Horse Artillery, killed; three officers, 9th Lancers, killed; 20 non-commissioned officers and men, killed; 4 officers, 9th Lancers, wounded; 17 non-commissioned officers and men. In fact, the 9th Lancers suffered more among the officers than during the two years of the Indian Mutiny. It is only too evident that a serious blunder was committed by somebody, and who that somebody was the public have a right to know, after the disgraceful treatment to which the best-known Indian Commanders have lately been subjected at the hands of Lord Lytton, the would-be Commander-in-Chief at Simla.

It is announced that General Sir Edwin Johnson, K.C.B., has declined the offer of the chief command of the Madras Army on the approaching retirement of Sir Neville Chamberlain, preferring to remain in his present appointment as Military Member of the Viceregal Council. This statement, we learn on inquiry, is perfectly correct. General Johnson, when he went to India, did so on the full understanding that he was to be the next Commander-in-Chief, and that he should decline to receive the Madras appointment is therefore but natural. True, there is a report that Sir Garnet Wolseley is to be Sir Frederick Haines's successor, but General Johnson's selection for Madras is the best possible refutation of this report, for it is evident that Sir Garnet could not hold the chief command whilst Sir Edwin Johnson, who is a full General of October, 1871, was acting in a junior capacity. The anomaly would be too great, even for India, under the Lytton régime.

Messrs. Bowering and Co., of Plymouth, have published another useful little card, designed by Captain S. P. L. Konarski, 25th Regiment, for the use of Army signallers, which will supply a long existing want. As the object of the design has been to promote the welfare of the Army, by facilitating, as far as possible, instruction in signalling, he has arranged with Messrs. Bowering to supply the cards on special terms to regiments, taking them by the dozen or hundred.

Lieutenant-General E. A. Whitmore, C.B., is at Malta, where he will spend a few weeks for the benefit of his health, before taking up his appointment as Military Secretary.

With regard to the employment of the electric light for military and maritime purposes, viz., for lighting up the terraces fronting besieged fortresses, for illuminating ships, for light signalling, and especially for submarine works, it is stated that successful experiments have been made. A transparent bell, containing an electric lamp, has been submerged nearly 200 ft., and the electric machine being placed at a distance of 300 ft., a constant light, with a large circle of light, has been steadily maintained under water for a long time. At present, experiments are still being made, with a view of practically applying the light for Naval and torpedo purposes.

An announcement lately appeared in the Standard to the effect that those departmental officers who were ordered out to Natal during the Zulu war are not, upon returning home again, to count such time spent in the field towards a tour of regular foreign service. Now, this is a very hard case, as it is a fact that many officers of the Commissariat, Ordnance, Store, and Army Pay Departments were summarily, and at exceedingly short notice, ordered out, greatly, in many instances, to their inconvenience. Under ordinary circumstances, many of them would not have had to leave England for several years. The following facts will show at once the unfairness of the treatment to which the officers are subjected :—About four months ago, a surgeon was ordered to embark on board a troopship bound for China. She was to call at several places on her voyage out and home. The officer was permitted to take his wife and family. After an exceedingly pleasant trip to various parts of the world, our medico returns to the bosom of his family, and for several years will be located in England, his voyage round the world, according to regulation, counting as a regular tour of foreign service. Why is the sauce for the goose not considered good enough for the gander? When officers were urgently required for Natal, they were promised plenty of good things, amongst others, that of reckoning the time spent in Zululand as a tour of service abroad; but now the war is over, they are informed that the promises were only pie-crusts.

A correspondent points out that the existing regulations for admission to the Indian Staff Corps may be at times productive of considerable injustice and hardship. In support of this assertion he gives a case, not theoretical, but which actually happened not long ago. A subaltern of a regiment in India, under orders for England, applied for permission to become a probationer for the Staff Corps. His application was entertained, and on the departure of the regiment for home, he remained behind, receiving Indian pay and allowances. Two years were allowed him to pass in the languages, but before the expiration of the two years in question he became senior lieutenant, and a vacancy occurring among the captains he obtained his company. On this, he rejoined his regiment, and shortly afterwards exchanged. Under any circumstances, he would have reverted to his regiment had he failed to pass the required examination in the allotted time. We agree with our correspondent that it is very hard that A, should he be idle, stupid, or promoted in the meanwhile, is able to remain in India on Indian pay, while B, C, and D, his brother subalterns, are doing duty on English pay, and, after all, retains his chances of a regimental promotion. It would be only fair that A should complete his two years' probation, and if he fails to pass in the languages revert to his regiment in exactly the same position as that which he occupied on becoming a probationer. For example, if on becoming a probationer he was then senior lieutenant, he should return to his regiment as then senior lieutenant.

The exceptional manner in which the Army Medical Warrant of November 27, 1879, deals with Medical officers of the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery (vide Clause 14 of the Warrant in question) makes it interesting to inquire what position that corps really occupies in her Majesty's Service. The Warrant is issued to govern the appointment, promotion, and retirement of the Medical officers of her Majesty's Regular Forces. But the Pay and Promotion Warrants of October 27, 1870 (Article 204), and May 1, 1878 (Article 260), both classify the Malta Fencibles as a colonial corps; and the Warrant of 1878 (Article 1, par. 6), also by direct implication, excludes the Fencible Artillery from the class indicated by the expression, "our Army." Again, on the other hand, the official monthly Army List classifies the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery as a battalion of the Line of the regular Army. Finally, the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1879, the authority which presumably should determine the point, makes confusion worse confounded. Section 181 of the Act declares that "Regular Forces" means officers and soldiers who, by their commissions, terms of enlistment, or otherwise, are liable to render continued service in any part of the world. The Royal Malta Fencible Artillery is not liable to render service out of Malta, and, therefore, is not part of her Majesty's Regular Forces in respect of the Discipline Act. Neither is it part of the Reserve Forces, established under the Reserve or Militia Force Act of 1867; nor is it part of the "Auxiliary Forces," included under Militia, Yeomanry, and Volunteers; nor can it be considered local Militia, in the sense that "Militia" is universally used throughout the Discipline Act. Neither is it a "corps," in the sense defined by the Discipline Act—viz., part of her Majesty's Regular Forces or part of her Majesty's Auxiliary Forces. Moreover, under the same section (181) of the Discipline Act, the expression "officer" is defined to mean, in the Act, an officer commissioned in her Majesty's Regular, Reserve, or Auxiliary Forces, or any department thereof; and Section 50 of the Act, introducing a change, rules that the officers sitting on a court-martial may belong to the same or different corps, or may be unattached to any corps, and may try persons attached to any corps. Now, were it not that the terms "corps" and "officer" are defined in the Discipline Act, so as not to include the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery and its officers, any military man would read the 50th Section of the Act as empowering the officers of the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery to sit on courts-martial with officers of her Majesty's Regular Forces. Under Section 168, par. 4, it is quite clear that the Malta Fencible Artillery are made subject to military law as administered by officers of her Majesty's Regular Forces; but it is not equally clear that the Regular Forces are made subject to military law, as administered by officers of the Royal Malta Fencible Artillery. These are, without doubt, embraced in the description given in par. 4 of Section 168 of the Discipline Act, of those subject to military law, namely, "persons occupying the position of officers of troops raised by order of her Majesty,"—or, it is to be presumed, by her Majesty's predecessors and successors—"beyond the limits of the United Kingdom and of India, and serving under an officer of the Regular Forces,"—in other words, officers of a special colonial corps, which happens to be neither part of her Majesty's Regular Forces nor of her Auxiliary Forces. But it is not equally clear that these persons, occupying the positions of officers, are empowered to administer the laws as against the Regular Forces or even amongst themselves.

Referring to the claim of Mrs. Younghusband for a pension, or for the value of her late husband's commission, perhaps the following particulars of an extraordinary circumstance may in some sense serve to strengthen her hands:—A few years since a captain of a certain regiment fell sick, and during his illness he sent in his papers. The doctor naturally refused to give the usual certificate, though repeatedly pressed to do so. Within the prescribed six weeks allowed to intervene between sending in papers and an officer's name appearing in the gazette, this captain died. Now, mark. The step went in the regiment by purchase, and the widow got the money. The then adjutant went over the heads of several old subalterns. Interest was apparently then, as now, paramount in the Service. The senior subaltern, feeling naturally aggrieved, remonstrated, and the authorities, to pacify him, promoted him to a company in another regiment. The officer who purchased a dead man's step is still alive, and will be able doubtless to vouch for the truth of this account. Mrs. Younghusband should bring her case before the House, for it is high time the officers of the Army who risk their lives in every part of the world should receive liberal treatment, and that their widows, no matter whether well or badly off, should, as a matter of right and justice, obtain the pension of their late husband's rank, or at least the full value of their commissions.

We desire to call attention to the system which prevails in some, we believe in many regiments, of providing for the charge of a company during the absence of the captain on leave, or while employed otherwise than regimentally, but not seconded. The Queen's Regulations and common-sense point to the lieutenant of the company as the proper person in such a case to take command of the company, provided he has sufficient service and experience to do so. Instead of this, when Captain A (we mean the captain of A company) is temporarily absent from his regiment, Lieutenant B, who is senior to Lieutenant A, is put in command of A company, and Lieutenant A is attached temporarily to Captain B's company, so that Lieutenant A is left alone in command of a company in which, perhaps, he does not know the names of half-a-dozen men. Again, it is assumed that the senior captains are entitled to the assistance of a subaltern, and that if their own subalterns are not available, a junior captain or lieutenant in temporary command of a company must lend them one, so that it becomes the exception, not the rule, to find a subaltern with his own company. We know an instance in which a subaltern was attached to three different companies in the short space of four months. Under this system a subaltern cannot possibly possess that personal knowledge of the men which is expected of him, nor can he be expected to take the same interest in those with whom he is brought into temporary association as he would in the men of his own company. We have no hesitation in saying that this system weakens discipline and frequently produces crime.

The Artillery are certainly unfortunate in one respect. Promotion in the higher grades is with them proverbially slow. Only one step has passed to the Colonels since October 1, 1877, and for one year and eight months Major-General J. R. Gibbon, C.B., headed the list of Colonels. Fortunately, there are three General officers who will have to retire under the age clause within the next two years or so,—viz., Generals Sir J. St. George, K.C.B., Sir E. C. Warde, K.C.B., and Sir D. E. Wood, G.C.B. These retirements will, however, only clear the Colonels' List down to the end of 1866, giving promotion to Colonels Barry, C.B., Hon. D. M'D. Fraser, C.B., and Grant, C.B. There would then be the following heading the list, all being officers who have already been many times superseded by the Linesmen, viz., Colonels C. T. Du Plat, H. P. Yates, C.B., J. E. Michell, C.B., N. O. S. Turner, C.B., A. C. Hawkins, C.B., E. A. Williams, C.B., G. V. Johnson, J. F. Pennycuick, C.B., P. G. Pipon, and G. T. Field. These ten officers all hold positions on the List before Colonel the Hon. R. Monck, who stands first for General's rank on the Line List. The prospects are not encouraging, it must be admitted, and the grievance is one that Colonel Arbuthnot's Committee might go into with advantage.

A branch of the "Girls' Friendly Society" has just been started in the parish of Holy Trinity, Brompton, Kent. This society is intended for the advantage and benefit, both religious and moral, of young servants and work-girls, and this branch of it will, we venture to think, be found especially useful in a neighbourhood like Chatham, with its dependencies of Old and New Brompton, &c., abounding in a population of small householders among the residents, and an ever-shifting society of Naval and Military officers with their families. In such a locality, servants must, of necessity, frequently change their places, and hence their being watched over by the vicar of the parish, assisted by the lady associates, and being helped to get into desirable service, cared for when sick, and aided and instructed in many ways, will prove a great boon to a large number of often nearly friendless young women. The Society, will, no doubt, commend itself to the countenance and support of most of the Naval and Military element residing for longer or shorter periods thereabouts, as nearly all the poorer classes in that part, from whom, of course, domestic servants are chiefly drawn, are, or have been, connected with one or other of the Services. We congratulate the Rev. D. Cooke, long the highly-respected vicar of Holy Trinity parish, on his happy commencement of an excellent work, and we offer our best wishes to the ladies, wives of either the clergy or the Military, who are helping on this branch of the Girls' Friendly Society.

Not very long ago, when Marshal MacMahon was President of the French Republic, and the Duc de Broglie his Prime Minister, the Clericals obtained the nomination of chaplains to the various corps which had hitherto been deprived of all spiritual comfort. No sooner did the Liberals return to power than they proceeded to protest against the military chaplains, and in all probability the French Army will soon revert to its former Godless condition. As a general rule, the soul of the piou-piou has for many years been sadly neglected, and it has been remarked that the Army of Occupation in Rome, which supported Pius IX. on his throne, or in his chair, never went to mass. After the Revolution, and when Napoleon concluded his Concordat, he had the greatest possible difficulty in getting his Marshals to join in the ceremonies of the Church. He said, when in St. Helena, that few people had any idea of the trouble he had to re-establish the Catholic religion in France, which was much more inclined to become Protestant than to return to the old religion whose shackles had so recently been shaken off. Under the Restoration, the Church once more had it all her own way, and to such extent was clerical influence carried, that it was much better for an officer to be on good terms with the Bishop of his diocese than the General commanding the district. Unfortunately, the religious and the political questions are mixed up in France, and at present all the chaplains are opposed to the Government. In the armies of the Commonwealth, it was not rare, as Macaulay says, for a God-fearing corporal to ascend the pulpit and to rebuke a backsliding major, but in the forces of Cromwell religion and politics went hand in hand, moving in a similar direction. It being the very reverse in France, we are not surprised to find a Radical deputy commencing an article in a Radical journal in such terms as these:—

> "There was a time when the Army was entirely free-thinking, and when Generals laughed at capucinades. Soldiers only entered the churches to encamp and make their soup there [also to carry off the sacred vessels, as in Spain]. No one when dying experienced the necessity of religious consolation, and it would have appeared quite as funny to have gone into action with a priest and with a pretty girl. When Bonaparte signed the Concordat, the whole Army was indignant. Angereau spoke out in its name, and used strong language. The Generals who were present at Notre Dame did nothing but laugh with the women during the ceremony, and hum other airs than the Te Deum. Nothing appeared so humiliating as soldiers playing the part of figurants in a religious fête. This was the time when the French Army repulsed the foreigner, invaded Europe, and took Vienna, Berlin, Madrid, and Moscow, [also Rome, Naples, Florence, &c.] It was the time of great warlike adventures which made France more formidable than the Roman Empire."

M. Lockroy then points out that during the Franco-German war several of the most Catholic Generals came to great grief, and that the days of miracles have evidently passed.

Will the long-fought-over controversy regarding the respective shares of the English and German arms in the overthrow of Napoleon I. at Waterloo ever be settled to the satisfaction of both parties concerned? We are afraid it will not. Another contribution to the dispute is contained in an article in the Jahrbücher für die Deutsche Armee und Marine, on "The Events of June 16, 17, and 18, 1815." The author, to do him justice, has succeeded in giving, in a space of 26 octavo pages, a clear description of the memorable events of those days, to read which is as instructive as it is interesting. But what we specially wish to bring to the attention of our readers is the way in which the long-pending controversy is disposed of from a Prussian point of view. The writer, Colonel Ebeling, says in conclusion:—

> "The two victors, Wellington and Blucher, met at Belle-Alliance, nomen et omen, and greeted each other most heartily. At this moment there existed no doubt as to the great things performed by the English and the Prussians. But to pursue the enemy the English were no longer able. The pursuit was left entirely to the Prussians, and it is well known with what energy it was conducted under the personal leadership of Gneisenau. Excepting Grouchy's corps, no organised troops returned to France. The great conqueror and the French army had succumbed to a catastrophe up to that time unequalled. It was reserved to our age to produce greater. The French state their direct loss at 32,000 men, with 200 guns; probably it was larger. The English lost 15,000 men; the 40,000 Prussians who took part in the battle, 6,500 men."

Finally, a few words respecting the help rendered by the Prussians:—

> "The glory of Wellington and his brave troops is by no means lessened if we say that the Prussian aid already in the course of the battle was of great importance. Independent of the successful participation of parts of the First Army Corps, the Fourth Corps alone engaged 16,000 of the best troops, under a most excellent leader, and beat them completely. Certainly the English Army had defended its position with extraordinary bravery and endurance; but is it likely that it could have withstood such another onset as Lobau was executing with those 16,000 men? Would, then, an ordered retreat have been probable? But quite apart from this, we must claim for the Prussians the much greater honour, that they in reality caused the catastrophe; that to them is due the 'Sauve qui peut!'—the entire dissolution of the French Army, the complete utilisation of the victory. But this acknowledgment our ancestors were unable to obtain. The report of Wellington is characteristic in this respect. The latter contains two utterly untrue assertions,—that the English had fought uninterruptedly for twelve hours, and that they had continued the pursuit long after darkness set in. The Prussian aid is then acknowledged as something very pleasant, in cool, extremely stiff words, but as something which really was not necessary for the gain of the battle. This view has been held in England as the correct one for many years, and was taught in English schools."

The article concludes as follows:—

> "We, the descendants, may hope and wish that we in future shall never be again in want of other allies than our own—the other German races, which, nine years ago, fought so bravely on our side, and have co-operated so effectually in the foundation of the German Empire. Let us rejoice that they now form with us the German Army, cast in the Prussian mould—this Imperial Army, of which an eminent English writer [Chesney] says, that it will be a match even for an allied France and Russia."

The Army.

1st Dragoon Guards. Writing from Pretoria on Dec. 29, the Times' correspondent says:—"Five troops of the King's Dragoon Guards marched this morning for Wakkerstroom, where the head-quarters of the regiment will be." A Cape paper says:—"A rumour has prevailed that a large number of Dragoons had deserted in the Transvaal—some say forty or fifty—but we suspect that the story is merely an exaggeration of the fact that two or three desertions, as notified in the Gazette, had taken place."

3rd Hussars. There is no truth, we believe, in the report which has been for some time in circulation as to the probable exchange between Lieut.-Col. Vincent and Lieut.-Col. Chaplin, V.C., 8th Hussars. Lieut. Rant is arranging an exchange to India, and will probably join the King's Dragoon Guards.

8th Hussars. The report as to the probability of an exchange being arranged between Lieut.-Col. Chaplin, V.C., and Lieut.-Col. Vincent, 3rd Hussars, is, we understand, quite unfounded.

13th Hussars. The Natal Mercury has the following:—"Col. Baker Russell, leader of the attack on Sekukuni, goes home at once, crowned with well-won laurels. He will take with him a record of which any officer might well be proud. In the pursuit of Langalibalele, in the rooting out and chastisement of Mayonyoba's tribe, and lastly in the investment and storming of Sekukuni's stronghold, Col. Baker Russell has been uniformly successful. Like his illustrious chief, he possesses in rare measure the faculty of leading and captivating men. The people of Natal will watch the gallant officer's career with warm personal interest."

17th Lancers. Capt. Kevill-Davies, Lieut. Steele, and 150 men arrived home from the Cape in the hired steamer Galatea.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

We learn from Singapore that "Major-Gen. Anson, C.M.G., accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Anson, arrived in Penang on Dec. 23, in the Pluto. We regret to hear that so great is the impaired condition of the health of the Administrator, that he has been advised by his medical attendants to abstain from active participation in the affairs of the Government as far as he possibly can, and we are given to understand that the object of his visit to Penang is to spend a few weeks strictly incognito on the Hill."

Col. C. B. O. Evans, 3rd Brig., is to succeed to the command of the brigade at Gundamuk, which will be vacated by Brigdr. Arbuthnot, C.B.

Capt. W. G. Knox, 10th Brig., and E. F. Brackenbury, 4th Brig., who have been employed with the Transvaal artillery, are ordered to England, their services being no longer required. The artillery which these two officers formed and served with did good work in the attack on Sekukuni's stronghold.

The regt. is upwards of 80 subalterns below its establishment, and the Academy is unequal to meet the demand.

The Times of India says:—"Lieut. Liddell, R.A., formerly aide-de-camp to Lord Lytton, who proceeded to Cabul about six weeks ago to act as special correspondent for one of our contemporaries, has been temporarily attached to the Royal Horse Artillery."

E and D Batys. B Brig., R.H.A., and C and F Batys. 2nd Brig. are reported to have been selected for service with the expedition which is to advance on Herat in the spring.

The Standard says:—"Major F. C. H. Clarke, Royal Artillery, completes eight years' service—three years over the usual term—on the Staff of the Intelligence Department on April 9 next, but it has been proposed to allow him to retain his appointment to enable him to complete the translation of the German official account of the Franco-German war, on which he has been engaged for some years past. Major Clarke has lately been performing valuable service for the Government on the Asiatic Boundary Commission under the Treaty of Berlin."

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

A telegram to the Times, dated Calcutta, Jan. 24, says:—"Sir Andrew Clarke, who is about to leave India, has been entertained at dinner by the officers of the Royal Engineers. Replying to the toast of his health, he alluded to the peculiar position of the members of the Indian Government in being obliged to sink all individuality, and to act only as a homogeneous body. He then went on to say that of all that has been done by the Public Works Department during his term of office, nothing gave him greater satisfaction than the service that department had rendered towards the prevention and mitigation of famine."

It is semi-officially announced that "the Queen has been pleased to approve of the appointment of Sir William C. F. Robinson, K.C.M.G., Governor of the Straits Settlements,—whose health requires a change of climate—to be Governor of Western Australia, in the place of Major-Gen. Sir Harry Ord, R.E., K.C.M.G., C.B., who has resigned that Government, having completed the time for which he was appointed."

A Daily Chronicle Pera correspondent hears on good authority that the Sultan has invited "Chinese" Gordon, the ex-Governor of the Soudan, to enter the Turkish army to assist Baker Pasha in reorganising the gendarmerie.

Brevet Major J. R. M. Chard, V.C., is ordered to join at Devonport to-morrow for duty in the Western District.

The death is announced of Lieut. J. T. Rice, as having occurred at Kohat on Dec. 23, from typhoid fever, contracted at Thall. The deceased entered the Army Dec. 15, 1871.

5th Fusiliers. The Pioneer says:—"The 1st Batn. 5th have been ordered up to the front from Hussan Abdal, and were due at Peshawur on the 22nd ult. The two companies at Kohat will rejoin head-quarters immediately on being relieved by the Rifle Brigade from Rawul Pindi." Capt. (Major) Mahony, C.M.G., 2nd Batn., have proceeded to Gibraltar, viâ Bermuda, in H.M.S. Himalaya, with the 99th Regt. from the Cape. Lieut.-Col. 71st Highland Light Infantry. The colonelcy is vacant, by the death of Gen. the Hon. Sir George Cadogan, K.C.B., which occurred on Tuesday, at his residence in Park-place, St. James's. The deceased was the second son of George, third Earl of Cadogan, by his marriage with Louisa Honoria, daughter of the late Mr. J. Blake, and sister of Joseph, first Lord Wallscourt. He was born in Dec., 1814, and was educated at Eton. He entered the Army in 1833 as lieut. in the Grenadier Guards, became capt. in 1838, was promoted to lieut.-col. in 1847, and obtained a colonelcy in 1854. He served in the Eastern campaign of 1854, and was present at the battles of the Alma, Balaklava, and Inkerman, and at the siege of Sebastopol; and he was employed as the Queen's Commissioner to the Sardinian Army in the Crimea from April, 1855, until its withdrawal in May of the following year (medal and four clasps, Commander 2nd Class of the Order of St. Maurice and St. Lazarus of Italy, 3rd Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). He became major-gen. in 1862, lieut.-gen. in 1871, and gen. in 1877. He was appointed colonel of the 106th Foot in 1870, and transferred to the 71st in 1874. He was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour in 1857, and was promoted K.C.B. in 1875. The General, who was the author of Letters from Head-Quarters in the Crimea, by a Staff Officer, was twice married,—first, in 1846, to Sophia, daughter of the late Col. Armstrong; and secondly, in 1857, to Emily, eldest daughter of the late Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Ashworth.

80th Regiment. The Times' correspondent writes from Pretoria on Dec. 29:—"The 80th Regiment, on the 26th inst., started on its march to Cape Town. This fine regiment, which has been almost continually on the march in South Africa for three years, and which has been engaged in the Zulu and Sekukuni campaigns, will complete the long term of arduous service it has so well borne by marching through Kimberley to Beaufort West, whence it will be taken by train to the Cape. The march, it is calculated, will occupy sixty days." A telegram, dated Cape Town, Jan. 6, however, says:—"The 80th Regt. left Pretoria on its march to Cape Town last week, but has since been detained at Potchefstroom."

81st Regiment. Capt. Lindoe has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate.

99th Regiment. The regiment, after a stay of nine weeks in Pinetown, embarked on board H.M.S. Himalaya for Bermuda on Dec. 30. It was accompanied by several officers of the 2nd Batn. 24th, including Lieut.-Col. MacMullin will proceed in the same ship to England, for duty with the depôt. The regiment furnished, prior to embarkation, a large draft to the 62nd, its linked battalion in India, and Lieut. Alexander remained in Pinetown in charge of the draft, and to accompany it to its destination. After handing it over to the 62nd, he will return to England for duty at the depôt.

103rd Fusiliers. The Irish Times has the following:—"A gallant rescue was effected at Cork recently by Lieuts. Gray and Pentland, of the 103rd Fusiliers. A cattle-dealer named Cahill fell into the river near Patrick's Bridge, and these officers saw the man struggling in the water. Lieut. Pentland jumped in and appeared to be in danger of being drowned with Cahill, when Lieut. Gray jumped in to their assistance, and after a struggle the three were taken out of the water and landed by a boat. The tide was running out at the time and both officers jumped from the quay, a distance of fifteen feet from the water."

Angell, on promotion to Assist.-Comy.-Gen., now serving at the Royal Arsenal. Comy. R. Mead has been ordered to hold himself in readiness to proceed to Hong Kong.

Medical Department. Surg.-Major W. Creagh has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate. The Agra paper tells us that "Surg.-Major H.

Waghorn is going to England shortly, leaving India, most likely, not to return. He is known to many of our readers as the enthusiastic and successful sportsman of the jungles of Rajpootana. Last hot weather he bagged fourteen tigers, eight bears, and many large deer. As we chronicled at the time, one tiger was a man-eater in the jungle of Mandelghur, near Deolie, about equally distant from Neemuch and Nusseerabad. This tiger killed Capt. Bolden of the 68th Light Infantry in 1877."

The Auxiliary Forces.

YEOMANRY CAVALRY.

STAFFORDSHIRE YEOMANRY. The Times of India says: —"Travelling baronets seem to be in luck's way. Sir Thomas Hesketh happened to be in Zululand when British officers were wanted, and at once joined Col. Buller, afterwards getting himself transferred to the staff of Sir Evelyn Wood, and taking part in the battle of Ulundi. Now we see that Sir Charles Wolseley, who lately went on a "visit" to Cabul, has, on the strength of the knowledge of soldiering he has acquired as an officer of the Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry, been attached to the 9th Lancers."

WESTMORELAND AND CUMBERLAND. Lieut.-Col. Burn, on resigning command of the regiment, has issued the following regimental order:—"Regimental orders by Lieut.-Col. R. Burn.—Penrith, Nov. 25, 1879.—Lieut.-Col. Burn, on resigning the command of the regiment in which he has had the honour and pleasure to hold a commission for more than forty-seven years, wishes to express his grateful appreciation of the attention and kindness he has received from his brother-officers, as well as from the non-commissioned officers and men, especially of the assistance on all occasions so willingly afforded by the officers, the valuable and constant help of the excellent regimental surgeon; and the very important service of the adjutants, past and present, which have been the means of maintaining the high character and efficiency of the corps; and to the very satisfactory reports that her Majesty's Inspectors of Auxiliary Cavalry have been enabled to make. Lieut.-Col. Burn has great pleasure in feeling that the efficiency of the regiment will be fully maintained under the able command of his successor, and he begs to assure all connected with the corps that the strong interest he has always taken in it will not cease with his retirement.—By order, W. H. MACGEORGE, Capt. and Adjt. W. and C. Y. C."

INDIA.

A telegram from the Standard's Bombay correspondent gives the following particulars with regard to the spring campaign:—"It is stated that Gen. Haines, the Commander-in-Chief, will personally command the campaign in the spring. The Army Corps of the Bombay Army starting for Candahar will be under the command of Gen. Phayre. It is generally believed that the division will advance to Herat, and that that city will be handed over to Persia. The Bengal troops now at Candahar under Gen. Stewart will, it is believed, march viâ Ghuzni to Cabul. All officers of the Cabul Division absent on leave are ordered to rejoin on March 15, when renewed operations throughout Afghanistan will commence. The Bombay Corps consists of E and D Batys. of B Brig. R.H.A., C and F Batys. 2nd Brig. R.A.; the 2nd Batn. 7th Fusiliers, the 66th, the 2nd Batn. 11th, the 2nd Batn. 15th, the 4th Batn. Rifle Brigade, the Poonah Horse, the 3rd Light Cavalry, the 1st and 2nd Sind Horse, and one other Cavalry regiment, not as yet definitely named, and the 3rd, 5th, 9th, 10th, 16th, 23rd, 24th, and 28th N.I."

Four members of the Viceroy's staff are on field service, namely Brig.-Gen. Baker, C.B., Military Secretary; Capt. Lord William Beresford, V.C., 9th Lancers, A.D.C.; Capt. Brabazon, 10th Hussars, and Capt. Pole-Carew, Coldstream Guards, extra A.D.C.'s.

The remarkable position assigned to the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Army during the recent struggle in Afghanistan is attracting notice in India. The Pioneer has the following significant allusion to Sir Frederick Haines:—"A brilliant idea has been thrown out by a correspondent in connection with the unsatisfactory aspect of affairs in Afghanistan. Suppose the Government were to appoint a Commander-in-Chief for India? Some credulous persons may reply that we have got a Commander-in-Chief already, but there will be no 'Historic Doubts' on this subject for future chroniclers. It will be shown, with conclusive certainty, that no such officer could have existed in India during the war of 1879; that to assume his existence and his effacement during such events as have been in progress would be absurd."

The name of the following officer is placed on the Indian Gradation List, as specified:—Major-Gen. R. N. Raikes, Bengal S.C., is placed on the list of Lieut.-Gens., in the room of Lieut.-Gen. H. Milne, Bengal Infantry, deceased; Oct. 17, 1879. The following promotions are made:—Major R. Beadon, Bengal Cavalry, to be Lieut.-Col., and Capt. (now Major) E. R. Ives, Bengal Infantry, to be Major, from Oct. 17, 1879, vice Lieut.-Gen. Milne, Bengal Infantry, deceased; Major A. D. Parsons, Madras Cavalry, to be Lieut.-Col., and Capt. (now Major) A. T. Davis, Bengal Infantry, to be Major, from Oct. 18, 1879, vice Major-Gen. G. Sturrock, Madras Infantry, deceased.

Major J. S. Irvine, Bengal Infantry, Brigade-Major, Agra, has been transferred to Lucknow, vice Lieut.-Col. J. C. Minto, Bengal S.C., proceeded home on leave.

Major R. S. Robertson, Bengal S.C., has been confirmed in his appointment as Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. of the Bengal Army, vice Col. J. E. Gordon, C.S.I., Bengal S.C., appointed Assist.-Adjt.-Gen.

The following officers have completed the qualification for appointment on the regimental, general, and personal Staff of the Army:—Major E. G. Newnham, 17th Bengal Cavalry; Capt. B. H. S. Gower, 17th Bengal Cavalry; Capt. W. H. McCausland, 3rd Madras Light Cavalry; Capt. H. D. Hutchinson, 40th Bengal N.I.; Capt. H. M. Rose, 41st Bengal N.I.; Capt. B. Wemyss, 41st Bengal N.I.; and Capt. W. W. H. Scott, 11th Bengal Lancers. The following officers who attended the 32nd course of garrison instruction in Madras and Bombay, have qualified in part II. of examinations A and B (General Order 275 of 1873):—Capt. M'Math, 66th Foot; Lieuts. Frere and Wilson, 21st Foot; English, 14th Hussars; Whieldon, 48th Foot; Porter and Terry, 43rd Foot; the Hon. C. P. Jervis and Faunce, 66th Foot; Standen, 89th Foot; Georges, 36th Madras N.I.; Stanley, 11th Foot; Macdonald, 67th Foot; Jameson and Barlow, 78th Foot; Sub-Lieuts. Jones, 54th Foot, probationer 2nd Madras Light Cavalry; Shaw, 18th Foot, probationer 34th Madras N.I.; and Clements, 14th Foot, probationer 30th Madras N.I.; 2nd Lieuts. Nason, 44th Foot; and Dobbin and Watson, 11th Foot.

The Governor-General in Council has sanctioned the publication, in separate monthly circulars, in assimilation with the practice obtaining at the War Office, of such instructions and regulations relating to financial and administrative subjects of the Army as the Government of India may see fit to promulgate for general information. From Jan. 1 all rulings and orders, which from that date will cease to be published in the Gazette of India, and which will, in future, be contained in Army Circulars, are to be considered as authority from the date of their publication, unless otherwise directed. The circulars will not be republished in the Orders of the Government of Madras or Bombay, or in those of the Commander-in-Chief in India.

Public opinion in India is unanimous in condemning the conduct of the Afghan campaign, which exposed Gen. Roberts's force to very serious danger of complete destruction.

Subadar-Major Sheikh Hyder, 19th Madras N.I., has been admitted to the 2nd class of the Order of British India. For conspicuous gallantry at Charasiab, on Oct. 6, a sepoy of the 15th Goorkha Regt. has been admitted into the Order of Merit, 2nd class; and Subadar Budh Singh, of the 5th Punjab Infantry, a jemadar, havildar, naik, and five sepoys of the 23rd Punjab Infantry; Subadar Harree Dewa Jaiesie, and a bugler of the 5th Gookhas, have been admitted into the 3rd class of the same order.

Col. J. Gordon, Bombay S.C., has been permitted to retire from the Service from Dec. 31.

With the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, it is notified that officers from British regiments serving in India may be admitted as probationers for the Staff Corps, on the same terms as those laid down for direct probationers for that corps, provided they have actually served one year with their present regiments, have less than seven years' service, and are under twenty-seven years of age. Service as sub-lieutenant reckoning in the above period.

Her Majesty, on the recommendation of the Government of India, has conferred the Cross of the Imperial Empire upon Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Daly, K.C.B., agent to the Governor-General for Central India; and also upon Major-Gen. Sir Francis Sleigh Roberts, V.C., K.C.B., commanding the Cabul field force.

The Standard says:—"The period of service of Lieut.-Gen. Sir Francis Roberts, V.C., K.C.B., commanding the Cabul Field Force, as qrmr.-gen. of the Indian Army, expires on the 31st inst. Gen. Roberts will not return to his former duties, but it is not thought advisable to provide a successor, pending the issue of the report of the Committee sitting at Simla on the subject of Indian Army Organisation."

Lieut. Walter Bathurst, R.N., whose death was noticed last week, belonged to a naval family, being the son of the late Com. John Oldershaw Bathurst, R.N., who fell at Navarin in command of H.M.S. Genoa. The deceased officer was also great-nephew by marriage of Vice-Admiral Sir Thomas Dundas, K.C.B., captain of the Naiad, frigate at the battle of Trafalgar.

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879 :—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

TIC-SANO purifies the blood, strengthens the system, and so wards off one-half the diseases the flesh is heir to.

THE "CARMICHAEL"
PORTABLE BOOT-TREE.

A want long felt has just been supplied by this most important invention. All sportsmen and military men know the great advantage of having both their long and short boots treed up every day, especially after they have been wet, but there is often great inconvenience in carrying about the boot-trees.

An officer in the 5th Lancers has lately hit upon the idea that an India-rubber tree, which, with ease, can be carried in the pocket, can, when put inside the boot, be inflated, filling out the boot tightly, and so making it an impossibility to shrink.

For officers on active service, autumn manœuvres, or whenever it is impossible to carry wooden trees, this invention will be invaluable.

This invention is patented for Great Britain and other countries.

Army and Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, JANUARY 31, 1880.

WE imagine that the Admiralty in framing the Circular of March 27, 1877, giving to acting Navigating Sub-Lieutenants the privilege of being transferred to the Executive List, could never have intended that they should pass over the heads of those officers who were senior to them at the time of the transfer. Such, however, has been the effect of the regulations, as we find that several Navigating Sub-Lieutenants below December, 1874, have been promoted to lieutenants, whilst their seniors remain to drag out a weary existence on the Navigating List, and when promoted will have the option of going on the Lieutenants' List junior to those formerly below them. It is extraordinary, certainly, that the junior Navigating officers should be the only ones to benefit at all by the amalgamation. It is due to no merit on the part of those officers who have gone over the heads of their seniors; and in drawing attention to this anomaly, we hope their Lordships will see their way to remedy what we must look upon as a mistake. Is there any reason why the few remaining Navigating Sub-Lieutenants, over four years' standing, might not be "grafted in" with the Lieutenants, according to the date of their seniority as commissioned officers? There are but a score of them left, and their position is made all the more unendurable from the fact that their juniors in the Service, and in their own particular branch, are now rapidly going over them, owing to the privileges given under the order to which we have referred above. What can be the feelings of a Navigating Sub-Lieutenant of more than six years' seniority at seeing, in the recent promotions to the Lieutenants' List, officers who were far junior to him as Navigating Sub-Lieutenants now advanced to Lieutenants' rank, and thus made senior to him in every respect? The Navigating Sub-Lieutenant of six years' standing should be more fitted, and is undeniably equally as fitted, as his junior for a Lieutenants' commission; but as the line was drawn at a certain seniority when the order for transfer of navigating officers to the Executive branch was given, those who had served longest were doomed to remain navigating officers for all their lives, or to accept amalgamation at an age which placed them at an immense disadvantage. In urging the claims of the remaining score for immediate absorption on the Lieutenants' List (now increased to one thousand, two hundred of whom should be navigating officers), we are not blind to the fact that in this the Navigating Lieutenants of the last two or three years, who have plodded up to the top of the Navigating Sub-Lieutenants' List, might, in consequence of their original seniority as commissioned officers, have some cause to complain. Still, they scarcely number more than ten, and justice could be done to them without interfering greatly with the Lieutenants, even if they were also transferred. But, on the other hand, if it should be determined to hold to the hard-and-fast line drawn when the Order in Council for the suppression of the Navigating-Class was obtained, the least their Lordships could do would be to promote Navigating Sub-Lieutenants at an equal rate with Sub-Lieutenants. By so doing, the Navigating Sub-Lieutenants' List would be at once wiped out, and the real grievance of seeing junior ex-navigating officers promoted to Lieutenant's rank, and leaving their former seniors to drag along on a junior List, would be removed. There is no reason why this, at least, should not be done, for in justice to those officers whose claims we now advance, less could not be offered them to make their position in the Service bearable.

We understand that her Majesty has signified her intention to confer the Companionship of the Bath, Civil Division, on Mr. Haliburton, Director of Supplies and Transport, in recognition of his services in connection with the war in South Africa. Mr. Haliburton is a son of the late Mr. Justice Haliburton, the well-known author of "Sam Slick," &c. He entered the Commissariat Department in 1855; served in Turkey until the withdrawal of our troops, in Canada and Nova Scotia until 1860, and in Great Britain until 1870. In the latter year he resigned his commission as Deputy-Assistant-Commissary-General, on receiving the civil appointment of Assistant-Director of Supplies and Transport, under Sir William Tyrone Power, K.C.B. In 1872, Mr. Haliburton was selected for special service in the Military Finance Department of India, and served in that country until 1875, when he resumed his duties at the War Office. He twice received the thanks of the Government of India for his services. In 1878 he succeeded Sir W. Drake, K.C.B., as Director of Supplies and Transport.

Commissary-General F. E. Watt has also been nominated a C.B. Commissary-General Watt is the only son of the late Commissary-General James Duff Watt, by his first wife, eldest daughter of the late Bodychan Sparrow, Esq., of Redhill, county Anglesea. His commissions bear date as follows:—D.A.C.G., December 23, 1843; A.C.G, January 1, 1855; D.C.G., October 20, 1862; and C.G., February 14, 1878. Commissary-General Watt has had but little field service, but has been employed in several important civil capacities; district paymaster, Board of Works in Ireland; at the Royal Mint, and superintendent of the Bullion Department, Sydney Mint; auditor of revenue accounts at Gibraltar, and chairman of the Board of Visitors of the convict establishment at that station. The foreign stations at which Mr. Watt has served are the Cape, Mauritius, New South Wales, Turkey, China, and Gibraltar. He has also been twice employed at the War Office, from 1858 to 1864, as Staff Officer of the Commissariat Staff Corps, and now as "Commissary-General at head-quarters."

Colonel F. C. Hassard, C.B., who has filled the appointment of commanding Royal Engineer on the Staff of the Zulu expedition, will shortly return to England, on promotion to the rank of major-general on the establishment.

The promotion of Lieutenant Benson, 12th Lancers, to a troop in the 5th Dragoon Guards leaves only thirteen cavalry subalterns who obtained their commissions under the Purchase system—who became cornets, that is to say, prior to October 28, 1871. Their names are—Lieutenants Sadlier and Leslie, 1st Dragoon Guards; Vansittart, 4th Dragoon Guards; Johnstone, Byng, Viscount St. Vincent, and Roper, 7th Hussars; Banks, 12th Lancers; Lane and Doyne, 13th Hussars; Middleton and Douglas, 15th Hussars; and Aylmer, 16th Lancers. No one can well complain at any proper measures that may be taken to help on these officers, who entered the Service under conditions which have been violated by Lord Cardwell's Act.

A case of scarlet-fever has appeared in the officers' block at Chatham. An officer of the 26th Cameronians is the victim. He is, however, progressing favourably. These barracks are, from their great age and defective drainage, very unhealthy, and it is only on account of every precaution being taken that an epidemic of some sort does not break out.

The Distinguished Service Reward, vacant by the death of Major-General A. Scudamore, C.B., has been awarded to Colonel Hugh Rowlands, V.C., C.B., in recognition of his recent services at the Cape, where he served for over eighteen months and carried out several most important missions. Colonel Rowlands served in the Eastern campaign of 1854-55 with the 41st Regiment, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman (severely wounded), siege and fall of Sebastopol, sortie of October 26, attack of the Quarries on June 7, and twice on the Rifle-pits, attacks of the Redan on June 18 and September 8—wounded (medal with three clasps, Victoria Cross, Brevet of Major, Knight of the Legion of Honour, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). He entered the Army September 23, 1849; and became Colonel, March 23, 1871.

Mr. J. P. Mackinnon, late of the 25th Regiment, and formerly 72nd Highlanders, is writing, in conjunction with Mr. S. H. Shadbolt, a history of the South African Campaign, 1879, which will be dedicated, by permission, to Field-Marshal H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, Commanding-in-Chief. The work is to be published shortly by Messrs. Sampson Low, Marston, Searle, and Rivington, and will contain cabinet portraits, finely reproduced by the Woodbury process of photography, of the officers of the British Army who have lost their lives in the late war, together with biographies compiled from materials furnished by their relatives and surviving comrades. By permission of the Empress Eugénie, the list is to headed with a photograph and brief memoir of his late Imperial Highness Prince Louis Napoleon. Introductory to the artistic portion of the work, there will be a sketch of the war, embodying detailed accounts of the various engagements. Appended to the introductory sketch will be a complete list of all the officers of the British Army who were engaged in the campaign, with an account of their services. The work will also contain a map of the country, showing the movements of the army. Officers who served during the campaign are requested to communicate with Mr. Mackinnon, Fernside, Redhill.

The Colonelcy of the 71st Highland Light Infantry is vacant by the death of General the Hon. Sir G. Cadogan, K.C.B. The last vacancy, which occurred on September 27, the 85th Foot, was given to Lieutenant-General Percy Hill, C.B.; and as Sir Edward Greathed stands next on the Unattached List, it is scarcely likely that his strong claims will be overlooked.

Commissary J. Milne, Commissariat and Transport Department, accompanied by Veterinary-Surgeon B. L. Glover, Royal Artillery, left Liverpool by the steamer Scythia on Saturday last for New York, to inspect and pass mules intended for transport purposes in this country.

Deputy-Commissary Storrar-Smith, who lately retired from the Commissariat and Transport Department, was elected on Monday secretary of the City of London Hospital, Victoria Park.

We are gratified to learn that the Vitakri station has at length been definitely abandoned. We have more than once called attention to the extreme unhealthiness of this place and its unfitness for a frontier station. It is a melancholy fact that of the 21st Madras N.I., who went up there 400 strong, only 93 marched out, the rest having all died or been sent away invalided.

Captain E. B. St. John, 35th Regiment, after seven years' uninterrupted service on the Staff of Sir Hercules Robinson, G.C.M.G., at Sydney, has been permitted to accompany his Excellency to New Zealand as aide-de-camp. We always thought that six years was the limit of time for an officer to occupy the position of aide-de-camp to the Governor of a colony. No one, we presume, will deny that some limit should be fixed, and six years does not seem too short a period. Then, why should an exception be made in this officer's favour? Can it be that there is no other officer throughout the Army who would accept this very desirable employment? Captain St. John could not have complained had he been ordered to return to regimental duty, seeing that he has already spent one year over the stipulated time in the enjoyment of Staff allowances.

Colonel H. W. J. Trent, half-pay, late 68th Light Infantry, has been appointed Inspector-General of Musketry and Commandant of the School of Musketry at Hythe, vice Colonel R. H. Travers, resigned. Colonel Trent lost his command three months since, under the five years' system.

Major R. L. H. Curteis, 16th Regiment, is to retain his appointment as Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General at Head-Quarters on promotion, to complete five years' service on the Staff.

Her Majesty has confirmed the appointment of Brevet Colonel W. Stirling, C.B., Royal Artillery, as Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General of the Woolwich District, vice Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. King, R.A., whose period of Staff service expires on the 15th prox. We announced a fortnight ago that Colonel Stirling had been selected to receive this appointment.

There is no important change in the position of affairs in Afghanistan. Mahommed Jan is threatening an advance from Cabul, but we fear that the news is too good to be true. If he does not advance, General Roberts will before long be compelled to move against Ghuzni, unless General Stewart is ordered to do so. From neither Candahar nor Cabul, however, can this movement be attempted till the Passes become clear from snow, which will not be for another six weeks to come. Besides, even if the Passes were clear won, General Roberts could not venture to leave Cabul until the arrival of sufficient reinforcements, to enable him to leave behind a substantial garrison in Sherpur cantonments. As to General Stuart, it is possible that his presence may be required at Candahar, if it be true that a strong Bombay column, under the command of General Phayre, is to march to Herat. It would be impossible to dispatch any column to the latter city, unless the communications were secured by a strong body at Candahar. The Standard's correspondent, nevertheless, states that it is believed that General Stewart's division will march viâ Ghuznee to Cabul. For our own part, we cannot believe that such an enterprise will take place simultaneously with a march to Herat. Of one thing, however, we may be tolerably certain, —namely, that active operations on a large scale will commence as soon as the weather admits. All officers on leave from the Cabul division are ordered to rejoin before March 15, and it is stated that Sir Frederick Haines will personally direct the forthcoming campaign. We are glad to receive this intelligence, not because we have not perfect confidence in Sir Frederick Roberts, but because the shameful effacement of the Commander-in-Chief will end. For all the world can see, Sir Frederick Haines might, as regards the Afghan war, have just as well been in London as in India; and the inconsistency and extravagance of paying an officer of high rank a very large salary merely to make minutes and speeches, and to approve courts-martial, are too obvious to need comment. It is a significant coincidence that, with the rumour that Sir Frederick Haines is about to take the field, comes a report that Lord Lytton is about to return to England.

On the part of Tommy Atkins, we may be allowed to express his surprise at finding himself, under Section 155 of the Discipline Act, made a victim by the civil authority in its jealousy of military authority. "Why," he asks of Parliament, "should you make me liable to two punishments for one offence? Could you not arrange to punish those who may treat your authority with contempt, without attacking me? At all events, could you not, in the name of the commonest justice, have ruled that if on a second trial for one offence it was concluded that I had received, on my first trial, more punishment than my due, I should receive redress?" "I understand you Parliament men to refuse to my officers the confidence you place in your common jurymen and justices of the peace, and to vent your spite against them on me."

The War Office, in consideration of the present high price of forage, has, with that liberality which on all occasions marks its treatment of the Auxiliary Forces, again reduced the forage allowance of adjutants from 1s. 8d. to 1s. 7d. per diem. The amount allowed lately was 1s. 10d. per diem, but that was at a time when forage was considerably cheaper than at present. When it is borne in mind what a munificent sum adjutants of Militia and Volunteers receive on account of lodging and servant's allowance,—3s. 3d. a day,—it is simply wonderful that any officers can be found to accept the appointments in the Auxiliary Forces. It only shows what a sacrificing individual the British Purchase officer is!

The Navy.

Ajax. This ship will be launched at Pembroke early in March. The Ajax is a sister-ship to the Agamemnon, plated with from 10 to 12 in. of armour, and will carry four 25-ton guns: her displacement is 8,492 tons, and her engines are to have an indicated horse-power of 6,000.

Alexandra, Capt. Robert O'B. FitzRoy, flagship of Admiral Sir Geoffrey T. P. Hornby, K.C.B., remained at Malta on Jan. 13, having defects made good by the dockyard authorities. A difference of opinion between the chaplain and the captain of the Alexandra, owing to the certificate which had been given to the rev. gentleman on his leaving the ship, having been brought before the Admiralty, Sir Geoffrey Hornby and Capt. FitzRoy have been called upon to report upon the complaint laid by the chaplain.

Beacon, Com. Charles Woodruffe, was at Bushire on Dec. 28, under orders for Busrah.

Boadicea, Comdre. Richards, was at Ascension on Jan. 7, and would leave on Jan. 18 for Sierra Leone. The Hampshire Telegraph hears of a disagreement between the Church and the Executive in this ship. Remembering the unseemly squabbles and ill-feeling which prevailed between the captain and the chaplain of the London some years ago, the chaplain of the Boadicea has thought it as well for himself, and better for the sake of peace and harmony, that he should no longer remain in the ship, and he has written to request their Lordships to remove him to another ship if possible, but to remove him at all events. This is certainly the shortest cut out of a difficulty, and the Rev. Alexander Nicolls has shown his good-sense and judgment in asking for supersession.

Condor, Com. E. F. Day, arrived at Malta on the 21st from Limasol, having left that port on the 12th. On her passage she experienced strong westerly winds and heavy head seas; she brought one officer and some time-expired soldiers from Larnaca and Limasol.

Dido, Capt. Domvile, was to leave Fernando Po after arrival of the mail of Dec. 6, for Loando and St. Helena. The Royal Humane Society's medal has been awarded to Peter Browne and G. Bridge, both of this ship, for saving G. L. Creed, of the same ship, who fell into thirteen fathoms of water at Sierra Leone; another man, Ben Roberts, who also assisted, being awarded the bronze clasp, having previously received the bronze medal.

Dragon, Com. Cæsar Hawkins, has been ordered to Mauritius, to be docked.

Dryad, Com. J. Hext, arrived at Gibraltar on 28th inst., and was to leave the day following for Malta.

Inconstant, Vice-Admiral Sir F. Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., visited Portsmouth last week and inspected the Inconstant, which, having had £25,000 spent upon her, is ordered to be brought forward for a temporary commission. The Inconstant will be commissioned at Portsmouth on the 5th prox. by Capt. Lord Walter Kerr, as flagship of Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, who has been appointed to succeed Admiral Hornby in the command of the Mediterranean Fleet. The Inconstant will bring home the officers and crew at present serving on board the Alexandra.

Jumna, Capt. G. Parsons, leaves Bombay for Portsmouth on the 27th inst., with time-expired men and the ollowing troops:—D and F Batys. 6th Brig., 8th and 9th fatys. 8th Brig., and No. 2 Baty. 9th Brig. R.A.

Lively, Lieut.-Com. Le Strange. A serious collision occurred on the Mersey on Thursday evening about six o'clock between her Majesty's despatch boat Lively and a sailing ship at anchor named the Annot Lyle. The Lively was returning from the Allan steamer Sarmatian, after that vessel had left the river with the Princess Louise on her voyage to Canada, and both the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh were on board. The collision occurred near the Coburg Dock, and the bow of the Lively pierced the side of the sailing vessel amidships. A leak was caused, but the water entered at a slow rate, and the crew of the ship were fully able to keep her afloat. She will be repaired in dock.—Manchester Guardian.

London, Capt. H. E. G. Earle. Notice is given in last night's Gazette that the distribution of the tonnage-bounties awarded for three slave-dhows will commence on Feb. 6.

Marlborough. On Friday night, the 23rd inst., the engineer students gave another of their "evenings at home." The invitations, issued to the number of about 700, were generally responded to, the large company present including Admiral A. P. Ryder, the Naval Commander-in-Chief; Rear-Admiral the Hon. F. A. C. Foley, the Admiral-Superintendent of the Dockyard; A. Cudlipp, Esq., the Mayor of Portsmouth; and a large number of officers, ladies, and residents of the town and neighbourhood. The programme commenced between seven and eight o'clock with an overture by the band, and that was followed by amusing readings and "The Adventures of Mr. Plumper."

Orontes, Capt. Kinahan, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday morning with officers and men, invalids and time-expired men, from Singapore and Malta.

Philomel, Com. B. Berners, was at Jeddah by last accounts.

Plover, Com. Hector Stewart. The Plover may soon be looked for at Spithead, as the arrival of the Fantôme on the station will be the signal for her to part company and sail homewards. The Plover was commissioned at Portsmouth in June, 1876, by Com. Hector Stewart, who still holds the command, although the other officers, excepting the navigating-lieutenant and engineer, have been replaced during the commission.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Ready, Com. H. H. Edwards, was at Jask on Jan. 5.

Rifleman, Com. J. Ingles, left Aden on Jan. 2 for England, to pay off.

Ruby, Com. R. H. M. Molyneux, was at Bombay on Jan. 10, flying the flag of the Commander-in-Chief.

Seagull, Com. Fred. W. B. M. Heron, was at Aden by last accounts.

Shannon, Capt. J. D'Arcy, arrived at Callao on Dec. 19, having been relieved by the Thetis at Arica.

Spartan, Capt. R. Tracey, arrived at Rangoon on Dec. 16, and will remain in the Bay of Bengal. Another ship which will shortly receive her sailing orders for England is the Spartan. She was commissioned at Sheerness in June, 1876, and has been commanded throughout the commission by Capt. Richard Tracey. The Eclipse has been directed to replace that vessel on the East Indies station.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Téméraire, Capt. J. O. Hopkins. A dinner has been given by the crew of this ship to that of the Achilles, in return for the one given by the latter in November. The guests, together with the crew of the Téméraire, made a total of about 1,100 men, and sat down to a sumptuous repast at tables skilfully arranged fore and aft on the main deck. The officers of the Téméraire, preceded by the band of the ship, playing "The Roast Beef of Old England," having inspected the arrangements made, the entertainers, with their guests, took their seats at the tables. The entire main deck, about 350 feet in length by 63 feet beam was draped with flags and banners, festooned with wreaths of flowers and evergreens. Shortly before the time of parting arrived, "Silence" was piped, and three ringing cheers given for the popular messman, Mr. H. J. Crutchett, who had to beat a retreat to prevent himself being carried around the deck; three cheers were also given with lustiness and hearty goodwill for the officers of the Téméraire.

At the annual meeting of the Royal Sailors' Home, Devonport, it was reported that during the year over 17,000 seamen and marines had been accommodated. The continued success of the Home was commented upon. Admiral Elliot, the commander-in-chief, who presided, stated that although he had been in the port but a short time, he had visited the Home, and was greatly pleased with its arrangements and management.

A correspondent at St. Petersburg, writing on the Russian Navy to the Pall Mall Gazette on the 23rd inst. says:—The Commission appointed to consider Rear-Admiral Tchigatcheff's plan for a reorganisation of the Russian Navy has reported in favour of the following proposals:—1. Disarmament and sale of all ships found to be useless for service. 2. Disarmament of such ships as may still be used for purposes of defence, and which should therefore be retained. 3. Reduction of the personnel from 29,000 to 17,000 men. 4. All ships which are seaworthy, and capable of being employed as cruisers, to remain at sea for a whole year; training-ships are to remain at sea from four to six months. 5. Immediate abolition of certain commands on the coast. 6. Establishment of a fixed census of age for each rank. 7. Establishment of a fixed maximum of age for active service. 8. All officers now in active service to remain so until they are able to obtain their present pay in the shape of pension. It is calculated that by the above measures upwards of 7,000,000 roubles would be saved, and it is proposed to apply this amount to the building of new ships. The scheme is to come into effect, if approved by the Grand Duke, the Admiral-in-Chief, on the 1st of January, 1881.

MR. SMITH ON THE NAVY.

At the anniversary dinner, on Wednesday, of the members of the old St. Martin's Club, Westminster, which dates from 1720, when it was established under the title of the "Overseers' Club or Monthly Society," the First Lord of the Admiralty paid a compliment to the Navy, in responding for that Service, and said:—"It would be a great misfortune for this country—it would be a great misfortune for the gallant men who constitute the backbone of the Navy—if they were ever called upon to undertake an unjust war or to fire a shot which was not required to be fired in the interests of humanity or the country. I trust I may never live to see that day. It is essential, unfortunately, that, as the men of all countries are not wise, and, as your chairman has stated, as they are not likely to become all wise within the period of our existence, it is essential that there should be a defensive force for this country—a force capable and willing to defend the liberties and interests of this country, and the interests, as I believe, of the world. Such a force you find in her Majesty's Navy. Men more devoted to the service of their country never existed than the men who silently pursue the even tenour of their course in the service of the Navy. Let me tell you that theirs is not by any means an inglorious or an inactive life. You hear from time to time that this or that ship has proceeded from Portsmouth to the West Coast of Africa; that it has been engaged in looking after the slavers who at times even now are found venturing from that or from the East Coast. You find the officers are engaged in a course of torpedo instruction or in gunnery practice, and the fact passes without remark; but the course of life which those men pursue is a course of constant study, constant discharge of duty, often, indeed generally, in unwholesome climates, under great personal strain, and under exposure to excessive heat, cold, malaria, or fever. They undertake that work, as I have said, from a high sense of duty, with deep devotion to their country, and with the knowledge that they will be held accountable for every act they have to perform. Many of you know that the officers of her Majesty's Navy are literally the police of the seas. They maintain order and good government in places where no order and good government exist. On them rests an immense responsibility. It often happens that a young lieutenant is to judge whether the circumstances of the case justify him in exercising the power of England in reference to some poor savage tribe, or whether the circumstances are such as to allow him to forbear, and pass unnoticed circumstances of aggravation, and perhaps even the taking of life. It is gratifying to know that that duty is done well and wisely, and with an amount of devotion that deserves the gratitude of the country, and which receives, I know, not only from this company, but everywhere else, the most hearty appreciation. I thank you for receiving this toast as you have done."

LIVERPOOL ROYAL NAVAL ARTILLERY VOLUNTEERS.

On Saturday afternoon his Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh visited the Eagle, in the King's Dock, for the purpose of inspecting the R.N.A. Volunteers, and he was received on board by Com. Cookson and Lieut.-Commanding Inman, R.N.A.V. The other officers present were Lieut. R. C. Lambert, Lieut.-Instructor Mountjoy Squire, R.N.; Sub-Lieuts. W. Pierce, H. Langdon, G. Greaves, F. Medley, F. Danson, J. Rea, S. P. Audsley Hunter (captain, Royal Navy), Barnes, and Bridle; Pymr. Mumford; Surgs. W. Little, A. Bernard, and G. Coombe, and Hon. Surg. W. G. Richardson. The number of the corps present was 210. The total strength of the corps, which differs from others in not receiving any capitation grant, is about 530, consisting in men resident in Liverpool, Southport, Bangor, and Carnarvon. The greater portion, of course, belong to Liverpool, where there are four batteries, Southport being next in order with two batteries, while the other two places have one each. The proceedings of Saturday afternoon, which lasted about an hour, were of a most gratifying description, the drills being gone through in capital style. The men were first put through the review exercise on the upper deck by Sub-Lieut. Langdon, which was followed by the sword and bayonet-exercise under the direction of Sub-Lieut. Danson. A cutlass drill, directed by Sub-Lieut. Pierce, was then gone through, after which the corps adjourned to the main-deck, where they engaged in the heavy-gun drill, Sub-Lieut. Langdon directing the movements. His Royal Highness, who was in his naval uniform, appeared to take the greatest interest in the drills, and after the officers of the corps had been presented to him, briefly addressed the men on the upper deck. His Royal Highness expressed his pleasure at the condition of the corps, and remarked that the way the movement, which was a most important one, had been taken up showed great spirit. He considered that the drill had been most satisfactory. The Duke then took his leave, having first invited Lieuts. Inman and Lambert to dine with him on board the Royal yacht Lively that evening, and walked down the gangway to the carriage and drove away. The enthusiasm of the large number of people on the quay had up to this time been subdued, but as the carriage rolled away three cheers were given, after which the crowd quickly dispersed.—Liverpool Daily Post.

THE PROPOSED ARCTIC EXPEDITION.

A public meeting, for the purpose of considering the expediency of London forwarding the movement for scientific Arctic exploration and the discovery of the North Pole, was held on Wednesday, in the Egyptian Hall of the Mansion House. The Lord Mayor, who presided, said that although he took the chair he was simply there as a listener, and at present he had no very settled opinion on the subject. So far as he was concerned he would not care to go out and join the expedition, but there were many who were hopeful. He had, however, gladly granted the use of the Egyptian Hall for the purpose of the meeting. Captain Bedford Pim, M.P., moved the first resolution—"That this meeting is of opinion that in view of the undoubted necessity of maintaining British supremacy on the ocean, it is incumbent on the nation to encourage maritime enterprise by every means in its power, and that the truly national object of planting the Union Jack on the North Pole is worthy of every support and assistance." In moving the resolution, he said he was not connected with the Committee. The success attained hitherto by the Committee was due to his friend, Com. Cheyne, but he wished the scheme every success. Some of the happiest moments of his life had been spent in Arctic regions. With reference to another expedition, he thought it should be undertaken, as there was, in his opinion, more or less disgrace attached to the last. If the matter had been left to him, he would rather have meted out punishments to the members of the expedition, instead of giving them the rewards they received. He thought that Com. Cheyne was the man, above all others, who was fitted to conduct the expedition. Personally, he thought that Smith's Sound was the best way to approach the North Pole, and he considered that balloons would prove a useful auxiliary, but primarily he would trust to the sledges. Dr. Kinns seconded the resolution. Com. Cheyne, R.N., said that the condition of the country was that they had proclaimed that they were going to discover the North Pole, and had fallen back baffled, but not beaten. Other nations were springing forward to do the work, and they, as a nation, ought not to allow the work to be done by any one else. The last expedition broke down, as it was said, through scurvy and a want of lime-juice, but he maintained that the expedition broke down from want of proper ventilation between decks. In the three expeditions he had served in, they were not allowed on the ships during the day, and during that time the decks were thrown open, so that when they came back at night they had fresh air, and under Providence he would undertake that there was no scurvy. In the expeditions in which he had served, the men had been out in the sledges for 10 days, and had travelled 1,400 miles without scurvy taking place. Com. Cheyne then proceeded to point out on the map the route they proposed to take. He should send up a balloon in order to see the best route. In the first week in June they proposed to start with three balloons, each capable of carrying about a ton and a quarter. They would take provisions for 51 days, with a sledge and a boat, and from the time of starting with the balloon they would be at the North Pole in from 24 to 30 hours. The resolution having been adopted, the proceedings closed with a vote of thanks to the Lord Mayor.

TORPEDO-BOATS.

We have received from the Admiralty for publication a copy of Fleet Circular No. 1, Jan. 15, 1880, containing instructions for getting up steam quickly in torpedo-boats, fitted with the necessary apparatus, from which we learn that the apparatus is only to be employed in cases of great emergency. When the boats are required for practice, and also (if time will permit) when they are required to go into action, steam is to be raised in the ordinary way without the apparatus. To avoid the serious consequences that would happen to the men in the engine and boiler-rooms from the fracture of a steam-pipe, which might possibly result from accident to the slings, &c., steam is not to be raised before the boats are hoisted out, except when absolutely necessary to save time. When, in the opinion of the commanding officer, the boats will probably be required for immediate service in action, the boilers are to be kept filled with fresh water to about half glass, the fires are to be laid, steam from one of the ship's boilers is be at all times obtainable, and the necessary hose with connections is to be kept at hand for immediate use. When orders are given to 'get up steam with the apparatus, the fire should be lit immediately, and as soon as the hose-pipe connections are made to the boiler and fan, the steam from the ship's boiler should be turned on, the boiler-room hatch of the torpedo-boat closed, and the fan started. The pressure of steam in the ship's boiler should not exceed 60 lb. per square inch. The operation may be continued until the steam in the torpedo-boat boiler shows the same pressure as in the ship's boiler. Steam from the boat's boiler should then be used in the ordinary way for the fan, and the hose connection should be disconnected. Coal should be put on quickly as the fire burns through, so as to obtain a heavy fire by the time the steam from the ship's boiler is shut off. The surface blow-out cock should be opened during the operation, to bring the water down to the working level by the time steam is up. The india-rubber hose supplied will stand a cold-water pressure of more than 500 lb. per square inch after considerable work, but is very liable to get stiff and crack after being used, unless care is taken. It should be stowed in a cool place, and frequently examined to see that it is not deteriorating, and if possible, should not be coiled. The above instructions are based on experiments made in torpedo-boat No. 56, 2nd class, when the following results were obtained by using steam of about 60 lb. pressure per square inch. The water level in the boiler at starting was at half glass. In 6 min. the pressure of steam was about 30 lb., and in 7½ min. 50 lbs. As there was now a full glass of water showing, the surface blow-out cock was opened to bring back the level of the water to about half glass by the end of the experiment. In 7 2-3rds min. the pressure of steam was 54 lbs., when the steam from the ship's boilers was shut off and the fan worked from its own boiler, the steam dropping about 5 lbs. In 9 1-3rd min. the pressure was 80 lbs., and the fire in a fit condition to proceed at full speed. To enable the engineer officers to obtain experience in the use of the apparatus, steam is to be raised by it, in each boat, once every twelve months, if in the interval it has not been required to raise steam for any great emergency.

On the return of the Serapis and Crocodile from Bombay, they will at once be taken in hand by the dockyard authorities, and prepared for the reception of new vertical compound engines, the contract for which is £61,400, or £30,700 for each ship.—Portsmouth Times.

NAVAL MEDICAL SERVICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As, sooner or later, the Admiralty must consider under what improved conditions of service they can hope to induce medical men to enter the Royal Navy, it is of importance that misleading opinions or representations should not appear in print, as if emanating from those most interested in the question, with the very best intentions. This has been done in a medical contemporary,—but on one point only,—and at the same time it omits to mention one of the greatest disabilities under which the Medical Service labours at present, the "cabin question," so nearly affecting all senior medical officers afloat. I think in making this statement I express the opinion of all my brother-officers that, until medical officers are placed on a par with others of equal rank in this respect, all other reforms would be fruitless. Having said so much, I should wish to draw attention to a proposal which has been made, and, in my opinion, one fraught with danger to the future well-being of the Department, viz., the introduction of a new rank into the Service. It is greatly to be hoped that the Admiralty will do nothing of the sort. Any one intimately acquainted with the duties appertaining to Naval Medical officers would at once feel that such a thing would be worse than useless, and it can only be conjectured that in making the suggestion alluded to, the professional organ in which it appeared could not be supposed to understand the technical differences that exist between the Services, and considered that to place them on an equal footing the rank of brigade surgeon should be introduced into the Navy. Consider the effect this would have on the great bulk of fleet surgeons; it would simply mean constant service afloat, all the home appointments being occupied by holders of the new rank. As there are about 90 fleet surgeons on the List at present, only 9 per cent. could possibly expect the step, so the remaining 80 might make up their mind to expatriation or half-pay for the remainder of their service. No doubt, the matter will be well considered before any step is taken, and the whole Medical Service feels satisfied that its interests are shortly to be placed in the hands of one who has well earned the confidence that is placed in him.—I am, &c., X.

At a meeting of the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society, held on the 23rd inst., at its offices, Hibernia Chambers, S.E. (present, Capt. the Hon. Francis Maude, R.N., in the chair; Capt. Vincent Budd, deputy-chairman; Admiral Sir Claude Buckle, K.C.B., Admiral Fishbourne, C.B., Mr. John Kemp-Welch, Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. William Toller, Capts. John Steele, David Mainland, J. J. Holdsworth, and Thomas Porteus), the sum of £3,682 was awarded in small annual grants to 1,281 widows and 1,687 orphans of sailors, a similar sum being given in July of each year. This is in addition to the amount received by the widows at the death of their husbands. The secretary, Mr. Edward C. Lean, reported that this would entirely drain the funds in hand, and the committee trusted that the benevolent public would, as heretofore, help them to assist the widow and fatherless in their distress, and also the shipwrecked man in his hour of need; 11,863 shipwrecked men and their widows and orphans had been relieved during the past year, being 831 in excess of the year 1878.

A meeting of Old Blues was recently held at Christ's Hospital, Newgate Street, to arrange for the erection of a memorial in the school of the late Sir P. Louis Cavagnari, who was, as a boy, a scholar at Christ's Hospital. A committee had previously been formed, including Mr. Alderman Cotton and Sir H. S. Main, K.C.S.I. The chairman, Mr. C. Wilkinson, said they were all aware of the noble and gallant conduct of the late Sir Louis Cavagnari at Cabul, and it was now desired to place a monument to his memory in his old school. Mr. Melville Green's proposal to place a bust or mural tablet somewhere on the school premises, was generally approved, and a sub-committee was appointed to receive subscriptions. Old Blues, governors, and other friends of Christ's Hospital are invited to send their names and subscriptions to the treasurer, A. Webster, Esq., 30 Coleman Street, E.C. About seventy guineas have already been promised by Old Blues.

THE WAR IN THE NAGA HILLS.

The war in the Naga Hills still continues, but the rebels are reported to be much discouraged by the loss of Khonomah, their chief stronghold, and have now retreated to the Barrail range of hills, 8,000 and 9,000 feet high, where they must soon suffer from famine. After the relief of Kohima, on Oct. 27, by the Manipur force, under Lieutenant-Colonel Johnstone, Political Agent, who had marched 93 miles in four days to the rescue of the starving garrison, he was directed by Brigadier-General Nation not to pursue the retreating Nagas till the arrival of the Regulars, but to take up the defensive at Kohima, where he employed himself in bringing up ample supplies from Manipur, and in keeping open communications for the advance of the 43rd and 44th N.I. On Nov. 22, the little army marched out of Kohima—viz., 150 men of the 43rd and 28 Naga Hill Police, under Major Evans and Lieutenant Barrett, conducted by Captain Williamson, who knew the country well (this party had orders to proceed to the right rear of Khonomah, and intercept fugitives in the direction of the Pap-longmai road, but not to join in the attack); a portion of the 44th N.I., under Colonel Nuttall; Lieutenant-Colonel Johnstone, with his Manipuri escort (who has been appointed Agent to the Naga Hills, in place of the murdered Mr. Damant, and holds it pro tem. with the Political Agency of Manipur); two guns, with rockets, under Lieutenant Mansell, R.A.; Major Cock as D.A.A.G., Lieutenant Macgregor, D.A.Q.M., and Lieutenant Raban, R.E., as engineer officer. The last was soon detached with the rockets to take up a position on the side of Morama Hill, with orders to open on Khonomah simultaneously with the guns. The rest of the force then crossed the valley, and when half-way between the hills which surround it, Lieutenant Ridgeway was sent with a company of the 44th N.I. to skirmish up the Khonomah Hill. The main body with the guns gradually ascended, passing on their way the headless corpse of a sepoy, probably one of Mr. Damant's ill-fated expedition; and a party of fifty men 44th N.I., under Lieutenant Henderson, was sent ahead to skirmish up the hill-side; the guns were carried by Colonel Johnstone's Manipuri coolies, and followed, with the General and his Staff. After incredible labour, the guns were got into position at above 1,200 yards' distance from the highest point of Khonomah, and at once opened fire, while Lieutenant Raban did the same with his rockets; but neither had much effecton the village, and even less on the stone forts. At about 2.30 p.m. the position was changed, and they were advanced to within 800 yards of the forts—here a coolie was wounded by a shot from the village—but the guns had little effect. Meanwhile, a party of the 44th had entered an outer stockade, and the General and his staff proceeded by a path up the hill, and entered the village by the gate where Mr. Damant met his death. Many dead, and others badly wounded, were strewed about, and these last stated that the Nagas still held the upper forts. The General, Colonel Johnstone, Major Cock, and the rest of the Staff then ascended a kind of stone staircase, and after again passing under the Nagas' fire, climbed up a perpendicular stone wall to the small tower, with the adjoining works, which the 44th had already secured; and as there was a very small force to hold it, the guns were brought up under a heavy fire to their assistance, and they opened on the upper fort at a distance of 80 to 100 yards, Lieutenant Mansell and his three European bombardiers pointing the guns fully exposed to the enemy, who throughout the operations especially picked out the officers with their shot. Colonel Johnstone, regarding the matter from the political side, and knowing the effect that a reported repulse of the British would have on the Nagas and their allies who swarmed in the jungles round, strongly urged the necessity of dislodging the enemy before night-fall, or making a vigorous attempt to do it; and as the guns were still ineffective, they were moved to another point. After several rounds of heavy charges, the order for assault was given, and nine officers, with as many men as they could collect, rushed out in two parties to scale the front and left sides of the fort. These were General Nation, Colonel Nuttall, Major Cock, Major Walker, Lieutenant Ridgeway, Lieutenant Boileau, Lieutenant Forbes, and Colonel Johnstone. Lieutenant Forbes, and Ridgeway were both wounded, and Major Cock was killed. The Nagas met them with a heavy fire, and showers of spears and stones, and the men began to retire. Colonel Johnstone and Lieut. Raban both tried to rally them, but in vain, and at last the General, Colonel Nuttall, Colonel Johnstone, and five sepoys were left alone at the foot of the fort, exposed to the whole fire of the enemy. As the force left was not large enough to come to their support with much effect, there was nothing for it but to retire too, through the burning timbers of the village, which the Nagas had fired an hour before. Colonel Johnstone's orderly, Mainsing, who had accompanied him as a volunteer from Manipur, had been dragged into the fort by the Nagas and speared, as he was climbing the parapet. He had already been wounded in the hand, but nevertheless killed a Naga. His headless body was found the next day. Night was now closing, and the Manipuris, who were always prompt and active, threw up entrenchments, in spite of their hard day's work, and immediately afterwards the detached corps of the 43rd and 44th appeared, to the great relief of the Staff, who were unable to tell whether or not they had been cut off. Lieutenant Macgreger, with 15 men, had scoured the jungle at the foot of the hill. All lay down, officers and men, huddled up together, to get what rest they could; and Dr. Campbell and his medical assistants were unremitting in their attention to the wounded. At daybreak, Colonel Johnstone and Captain Williamson set off for the camp at Suchema, to bring up ammunition for a renewed attack, but had hardly gone three miles when they saw the British flag waving over the highest fort at Khonomah, it having been evacuated in the night. The Nagas appear to have been greatly impressed by the steady valour of the European officers, and believed a further resistance to be useless; but if they had stood their ground in the fort, it could only have been captured with great loss of life, as its natural advantages were very great, and they had constructed their defences with uncommon knowledge. They are a very brave people, and their skill in gardening and building is one of many proofs that they are of the same race as the Chinese; but it is said that they have sworn never to allow a European to live in their province again.

Obituary.

Lieut.-Gen. W. G. Woods, C.S.I., Madras S.C., died on Saturday at Ryde, Isle of Wight. He obtained his first commission in the Madras Cavalry in March, 1828, became lieut. in 1834, and brevet capt. in March, 1843. The deceased served with the force detached under Brigdr. Williamson to the Bisley Ghat for the purpose of co-operating with Col. Green's brigade in suppressing the insurrection in Canara in 1837; also on field service with the regiment under Brigdr. Watson in the Saugor division and Bundlecund in 1842-43, and was present at the affair at Simeeriah, in Bundlecund. When in command of a field detachment, in Dec. 1842, consisting of a troop of the 6th Light Cavalry and a company of the 43rd N.I., he surprised a party of rebels north of the Nerbudda. He was employed as brigade-major to the Madras troops in the Saugor and Nerbudda territories during the Gwalior campaign in 1843-44. For some time the deceased, as brigadier general, commanded the Ceded Districts, Madras. The late General obtained his commission as brevet major in June, 1854; brevet lieut.-col., Feb. 1861; brevet col. in 1866; major-gen., Oct. 1, 1877.

Major-Gen. A. Boyd, Bengal S.C., died on Saturday at Yvery House, Fareham, aged 62. He obtained his first commission in Jan. 1835, became lieut. in Dec., 1841, capt. August, 1847, major Jan., 1858, lieut.-col. Feb., 1861, and col. Feb., 1866. For some years he was commandant of the 35th Bengal N.I., which was raised in Feb., 1858. Gen. Boyd served with the force under Sir Charles Napier against the hill tribes in Scinde in 1844-45. He served also throughout the campaign of the Punjaub in 1848-49, including the affair at Ramnuggur, the passage of the Chenab, and the battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat (at which latter he was wounded), the pursuit and surrender of the Sikh army, and subsequent pursuit of the Afghans to the Khyber Pass. He commanded four companies of the European Bengal Fusiliers in the operations in Burmah against the rebel chief Moung Goung Gee in 1854-55. He commanded the 2nd European Bengal Fusiliers at the battle of Budlekeserai, and during all the operations before Delhi in 1857, including the storm and capture of the city. He had received the medal with two clasps for his services during the Punjaub campaign, and had received the medal with clasp for Delhi, on which occasion his name was honourably mentioned in despatches. He attained the rank of major-gen. (establishment), 1st Oct., 1877.

Capt. Richard Sidney Smith, on the Retired List, R.N., died at 14 Montpelier Road, Twickenham, on the 24th inst., aged 67. He entered the Navy in 1827, and was promoted to be lieutenant in 1841. Whilst subsequently employed in the boats of the Gorgon he cut out a schooner in the Uruguay (Parana) under a heavy fire from the banks, and was also employed in the Gorgon at the destruction of batteries at Punta Obligado, and in action with the batteries of San Lorenzo, also in the Parana. He became commander in 1846, and retired captain in 1864.

Retired Com. James Irwin died on the 10th inst., at Mile End, Portsmouth, aged 81. He entered the Navy in 1812 as volunteer on board the Achilles, in which he served at the blockade of Venice. In 1813, while attached to the Milford, flagship of Sir T. Fremantle, he commanded a ten-oared cutter at the reduction of the towns of Fiume and Buccari; assisted at the capture of Fort Rugoniza; took part in a successful engagement with a battery in the neighbourhood of Cabo d'Istria, and served in the batteries at the siege of Trieste. As midshipman of the Bacchante, was present at the blockade of the American frigates, Constitution and Congress, the capture of the towns of Castine and Belfast in Penobscot Bay, and the taking of Machias. As mate of the Rochfort, served under Sir T. Fremantle and Sir Graham Moore in the Mediterranean, where he commanded the Racer, tender to Revenge, from 1823 to 1825. Next served in the Mediterranean in the Revenge, flagship of Sir Henry Neale; Isis, Capt. Staines, and as lieutenant in the Philomel, Capt. the Hon. W. Keith. Served in the Coastguard from Nov. 1834 to Oct. 1836, and in the same service from March, 1852, to July, 1855. Served also as Admiralty Agent in packet service from July 1855 to Nov. 1860. He was a son of Com. James Irwin, who was midshipman of the Royal George when she sank at Spithead, and nephew of Capt. J. Irwin, who commanded the Prince George in the action off Cape St. Vincent, Feb. 1797. Com. Irwin leaves a widow and five children to lament their loss.

Reviews.

Torpedoes and Torpedo Warfare. By C. W. Sleeman, Esq., late Lieutenant R.N., and late Commander Imperial Ottoman Navy. (Griffin and Co., Portsmouth; Simpkin, Marshall, and Co., London agents.)—The author has produced the first comprehensive work on the torpedo and its uses in modern Naval warfare as yet published in this country. As a book of reference, it will be sure to find a place not only in the libraries of Naval officers, but also in those of scientific men generally. Tracing the torpedo from the earliest record of its employment as an "infernal machine,' in 1585, at the siege of Antwerp, the author follows the gradual rise and progress of the art of torpedo-warfare to its latest phase. The primitive device of the Italian engineer Lambelli, the "carcases" of Fulton, Singer's and McEvoy's mechanical mines and fuzes and apparatus, are all fully explained. Foreign systems of attack and defence are carefully analysed. The more recent inventions, the Harvey, Whitehead, and Lay torpedoes, are fully gone into, as are also the Thornycroft and Yarrow torpedo-boats and their fittings, as well as numerous other systems, such as those employed in the American vessels Alarm and Destroyer, and in the Herreschoff and Russian torpedo-boats. The great facilities obtained by the author while in the service of the Ottoman Porte, have enabled him to collect much valuable information as to the various torpedo expeditions organised by the Russian Government against the ships of the Turkish Navy. The value of the Lay electrically-steered torpedo and torpedo-boat is fully described, and illustrated by well-executed plates. The various uses to which it can be applied lead to the conclusion that this invention will play an important part in the torpedo warfare of the future. The terrific effect of the Whitehead torpedo, as demonstrated off Batoum by the destruction of a Turkish vessel, is claimed as establishing this invention as of the highest utility. Lieutenant Sleeman deserves great credit for the care he has taken in compiling the work before us,—a work should most assuredly be read by every officer on the list of the Royal Navy and its Reserves. The book is well illustrated, well printed, and well bound. We strongly recommend it to all who take an interest in the most important subject of which it treats.

My Chief and I. By Atherton Wylde. (Chapman and Hall.)—The somewhat curious title under which the author has published a very interesting volume is fully explained in his preface. My Chief and I refers to as gallant a soldier as ever saw service,—Colonel Durnford, of the Royal Engineers. It appears that the story was written as far back as 1875, when the events on which it is founded were fresh in the author's mind. It was intended for immediate publication; but the grave doubt arose as to whether Col. Durnford would consent to such a step. The manuscript was consequently sent to him for approval, was returned in due course with the evidence of having been carefully perused, but with the following memorandum:—"My dear boy, publish your book when I am dead and gone, if you like, but not before." This injunction was carefully observed till after the fatal day of Isandula, and the book is now published, "as a poor tribute of affection and respect, from the humblest of his friends, to one whose truly Christian life was as much honoured by those who came within its influence, as his heroic death by the world at large." It is difficult to see why the author thought it necessary to devote sixteen opening pages to "my early story," in the course of which he accuses himself, in rather a vague style, of serious misdemeanours, for no apparent purpose than that of showing how he chanced to meet his old chief in after-life, and how that his influence completely turned the evil current of his thoughts and actions. Although the author does not aim at "tall" writing, he sketches his experiences with considerable point, and states some interesting facts, particularly those respecting "the Putini Tribe." The book is well brought out, and contains several fairly executed illustrations.

We have seen a few copies of The Quarterly Amateur Magazine, which is published for subscribers only. It sports a quaint title, "The Kettle of Fish," in which will be found many spicy bits that will tend to revive the readers' jaded appetite. This seems to be a publication altogether deserving of praise, and the editors (although it has been organised and conducted privately) are anxious to extend its circulation as much as possible, provided always that its amateur character is maintained. The present list of subscribers contains names both numerous and influential, and altogether the "Kettle" sings blithely as well as confidently. Any editorial matters intended as contributions will be carefully attended to, if forwarded to 13 Hinde Street, Manchester Square.

THE POSITION OF THE VOLUNTEER FORCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—The letter signed by "A Volunteer C.O.," in your paper of Jan. 24, is interesting, as showing the results of War-Office management on the mind of an old soldier in command of a Volunteer regiment. I fear that, as your correspondent says, matters are going from bad to worse, and the reason is that the authorities cannot make up their minds to a definite policy regarding the Volunteers, and then resolutely stick to it. We are continually fed with promises, which vanish into thin air. Meantime, the quality of men seeking commissions in the force is certainly not improving. Many competent judges declare it to be deteriorating. So long as the War Office hesitates to take the bull by the horns, and while boldly reforming the more glaring defects of the force, at the same time deals with it in a more liberal spirit, this will certainly be the case,—men obtaining commissions because they can pay, not because they are fit for command. The War Office is timid, and takes too many people into its counsels. The moment it makes a move in the right direction, a chorus of objecting voices is heard, and the authorities are frightened out of their wits. If officers and gentlemen are to be attracted into Volunteer regiments, expenses which should be borne by the State must not be thrust upon them. As matters now stand, whenever a Volunteer corps is short of funds, they must be lent by its officers, or raised on their guarantee, a proceeding highly injurious to the fundamental principles of discipline. By the way, I see the papers are announcing a Volunteer review on Easter Monday. Perhaps, it may be as well for the authorities, before heedlessly sanctioning the proposal, to obtain from a competent medical source an estimate of the average number of cases of bronchitis, pleurisy, &c., likely to be induced among several thousands of men not specially inured to hardship, exposed to a couple of long railway journeys, with an interval of many hours under arms, in our early spring climate, without great-coats to wear, if necessary. I write this with the recollection of a Volunteer review I once witnessed at Dover fresh in my memory.—I am, &c., Another Old Soldier, commanding Volunteers.

INFANTRY FORAGE-CAPS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—Referring to your remarks on this subject in this week's issue, will you allow me to say that I think a peak essential to the forage-cap? This, I think, will be admitted by any one who has had a column on an alignment, judged of distances, &c., in bright sun-light. Portability and capacity for stowing are almost equally desirable, and to combine the two points I would suggest a cap something like that of the officers of the Royal Navy. But if we are to be peakless, why not give us the Glengarry, rather than the cap of the rifle officer? The latter does not admit of folding up or easy stowage, and gives little protection to the head, whereas the former is the most perfect folding head-piece; affords protection, if properly adjusted, to the back of the head in strong sun, and has successfully borne the test of use by the soldier for several years past.—I am, &c.,

Ex-Adjutant.

A lecture was delivered in the Model-room of the Royal Engineers' Barracks, at Chatham, on the 23rd inst., by Major Wilkinson Shaw, Garrison Instructor at Aldershot, on the use of modelled ground in the study of minor tactics. A model upon Major Shaw's system has been recently set up in the model-room, and the object of the lecturer was to explain the nature of the model and its practical use. The lecture was illustrated on the model by the use of pieces to represent troops of the different arms.

The Standard understands that although the Commodore on the West Coast of Africa is about to visit the coast of Dahomey, there is no intention of taking any active steps towards enforcing the fine which was inflicted upon the King, and which he promised to pay in consideration of the blockade of his coast being raised. No attempt has been made by the King to meet the demand made upon him.

Epps's Cocoa.—Grateful and Comforting.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast-tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.—Sold only in packets labelled—"James Epps and Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London."

Amusements.

Under the management of Mr. Bancroft, the Haymarket Theatre will be opened this (Saturday) evening, with the play of "Money," originally represented here on the 8th of December, 1840, when a run of eighty consecutive nights was obtained. The interior of the house has been entirely reconstructed by Mr. C. J. Phipps, and the new decorations, superseding the old Pompeian style of ornament introduced eight years ago, are singularly light and tasteful by comparison. The space formerly occupied by the pit is entirely converted into stalls, and, as a compensation, the second circle of the boxes will be open to the public at the old pit prices.

The arrangements made by Mr. Carl Rosa, who is now seeking repose on the shores of the Mediterranean, secures continuous gratification to lovers of music during his absence, and Her Majesty's Theatre remains well patronised. Vincent Wallace's popular opera of "Maritana" has been added to the repertory, and with Miss Burns as the heroine, Miss Yorke as Lazarilla, and Mr. Maas as Don Cæsar, the familiar melodies have been most admirably rendered. Sir Julius Benedict's "Lily of Killarney" was given on Tuesday evening, and later in the week the programme has included an English adaptation of Wagner's "Lohengrin," with Herr Anton Schott as the operatic hero.

A hearty welcome on his return to the Folly Theatre was given to Mr. J. L. Toole on Wednesday night, when the popular comedian appeared in "Paul Pry" and the farce of "Domestic Economy." In both pieces Mr. Toole showed that the amusement resulting from his acting was in no degree diminished by familiarity with the characters assumed, and his restoration to health and the establishment identified with his fortunes as lessee and manager called forth the warmest expressions of general congratulation.

The fifteenth annual benefit of Mr. Frederick Burgess, joint proprietor of the Moore and Burgess Minstrels, took place on Tuesday, and as usual possessed attractions filling the larger St. James's Hall to its utmost capacity. Nearly all the prominent actors and actresses of the London Theatres gave their services on the occasion.

Next Saturday, Mr. W. G. Wills's four-act play, called "Ninon," will be produced at the Adelphi, and on Monday next, a four-act domestic drama, entitled "Forced from Home," and written by the same author, will be brought out at the Duke's Theatre, taking the place of "New Babylon," which has been represented 328 nights.

Mr. F. C. Burnand's new comedy at the Vaudeville is entitled "Ourselves," and illustrates the vice of selfishness in its most humorous phases. The play is in three acts, and presents Mr. Thomas Thorne and Mr. David James in two prominent characters, called Albany Thorpe and John Peddington, while the cast besides includes Miss Kate Bishop, Miss Marie Illington, Miss Sophie Larkin, Miss L. Telbin, Miss Cicely Richards, Mr. Henry Howe, Mr. W. Hargreaves, Mr. W. Herbert, and Mr. J. R. Crauford, who here made his first appearance as Archie Brownlow.

The twenty-fourth anniversary festival of the Dramatic, Equestrian, and Musical Sick Fund is arranged to take place at Willis's Rooms, St. James's, on Wednesday evening, Feb. 11, when Mr. Henry Rance, the Mayor of Cambridge, will preside. Mrs. Stirling will make her usual oration in advocacy of the benevolent objects of the institution, and the musical arrangements will be under the direction of Mr. Frederick Kingsbury.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' 'Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS. —Much watchfulness must be exercised at the present time, and the earliest evidences of ill-health must be immediately checked, or a slight illness may result in a serious malady. Relaxed and sore throat, quinsey, coughs, chronic cough, bronchitis, and most other pulmonary affections will be relieved by rubbing this cooling Ointment into the skin as near as practicable to the seat of mischief. This treatment, so simple and effective, is admirably adapted for the removal of these diseases during infancy and youth. Old asthmatic invalids will derive marvellous relief from the use of Holloway's remedies, which have brought round many such sufferers, and re-established health after every other means had signally failed.

WARFARE in which troops organised, disciplined, and led by European officers are engaged with Asiatic troops, who are at best but semi-disciplined, must differ considerably from the careful, cautious system which would be necessary where the army of a European State has to be encountered. No doubt the latter system would eventually lead to certain success, but if the success can be equally obtained by more direct and venturous movements than would be practicable in European war, it would be a pure waste of time—here convertible into waste of men's lives and of money—to adopt the slower method. Therefore, it is noticeable that in most of our successful campaigns in India and on the frontiers, and in those also of the Russians in Central Asia, columns have been pushed out, all but unsupported, to meet the foe at any hazard, and generally with success. There are several cases of this during the Mutiny in India, which will be familiar to nearly every one. The Russian separate columns of attack on Khiva, and the small forces by which the extraordinary battles were fought which resulted in the acquisition of Khokand, are cases where what could only be styled foolhardy temerity in European war has been crowned with complete success in Asiatic war. In innumerable contests with the warlike tribes on our frontiers of India, there appears to have been one arrangement on either side, which recurs so often as to be quite wearisome to work out in detail. Generally, there was some ordinary line of entrance into the country, on which there was a pass or defile. Here the enemy threw up stone entrenchments or stockades, according to the nature of the country, and awaited our attack. On our side, we employed a small force to "amuse" the enemy in front, and eventually to attack at the right time, sending a force round by some goat's path or over the hills to attack in flank, and if possible, to do so from higher ground. This seems to have had the invariable effect of being a surprising revelation in warfare to the enemy, who calculated only on a front attack,—and the flank attack would come upon them as an unexpected blow. Where cavalry had any chance of employment, their movement by a longer détour upon the rear of the enemy generally turned a complete rout into almost entire destruction. Our troops then made a military promenade through the country, and the politicals had the opportunity of showing what power was at their back, after which the force returned to British territory, and that tribe was quiet until young men had grown up who had not seen the power of our arms As time rolled on, there would be, of course, some of the older men who had seen former fights with our troops, and who would advise some prevision against flank attack. But, as a rule, the above would stand for a short account of most of our border raids since we took the place of the Sikhs. There appears generally one special point in the warfare with these border tribes, and that is, that until their defeat had occurred the camp of the British force was treated to an occasional shot from some hill-men concealing themselves near the picquets during the night. This fire, however, was generally more annoying than harmful. It cannot be said that there is much to learn in our mountain warfare with the wild tribes on our frontiers, except this,—that in strategy the valleys or water-courses should be held, because the only passable road for beasts of burden generally lies therein, and water is procurable in sufficient quantities; but in tactics, the rule should be to get above the enemy,—a condition which, from the different accounts, would appear to be more often possible than would have been supposed, and which has the invariable effect of causing that palpitation which precedes retreat. The Ambeyla campaign, as it is called, only did not at once succeed on the usual principles because the numbers of the enemy in arms had been much under-estimated, and the force at first taken up was too weak, comparatively, to allow of a regular attack outflanking the enemy. Similar principles to those used in the mountain warfare, that is, a simple flank attack, combined with a show of front attack, would and have been generally used in the plain country; but in this case it has very frequently occurred that the enemy has no strong stand-point like a mountain pass where he will certainly be found. He has to be beaten up to, and the troops in the extreme heat of the plains, frequently at the end of a long march, are too fagged to allow of a flank march, involving a long détour, being made. Hence there is considerable reason for actions with Asiatic troops in the plains having generally been made direct, especially where, as often occurred in the Mutiny, the enemy, if not taken in hand at once, would outmarch the force, and perhaps plunder fresh districts. The Asiatic is most formidable when attacking, as is shown by the hard fights of the troops under Colonel Baillie and Colonel Smith, when attacked by Haidar Ali; the battle of Maharajpur, where "the rascals that," the Adjutant-General is reported to have said before the day, "we could drive in with horsewhips," surprised our force, and were only defeated after very hard fighting. The utter destruction of Prince Bekovitch's army in 1717 by the Khivans, as soon as he took to defensive operations, is another case in point. But it cannot require much argument to establish a maxim which is reputed to have the authority of Clive, and has been generally assented to ever since,—that in fighting with Asiatics, "Always attack." Whether it has any authoritative foundation or not is unknown, but it is said that Clive's dictum was, "If the enemy is twenty-five to your one, attack; if he is stronger than that, try some other plan." He was, of course, speaking then of natives of Madras and Bengal, with whom alone he had come in contact. Like every rule, it has minor exceptions, suggested by the dictates of common-sense. Thus the severest handling we have received in Asiatic warfare during this century (with the exception of the destruction of Elphinstone's Brigade in 1842, which was due to disregard of all military principles in every way), was at Chillianwalla. Lord Gough, at the end of a march, found the Sikhs entrenched and in difficult ground; he attacked, without even reconnoitring, and the result was a severe loss to us, though we did contrive to hold our ground. As the enemy was firmly planted, an attack next morning would have probably resulted in a great victory, with little loss. Here the principle of "always attack" was strained. If the Sikh army had shown signs that they were retiring, an attack might have been necessary and of advantage. For the second great maxim may be best put in the familiar terms by which it is well known to Indian officers, "When you have got them on the run, keep them on the run." The man who understood that thoroughly and carried it out to the fullest extent was Lord Lake. And his campaigns contain some of the most complete illustrations we have of Asiatic warfare conducted on sound principles. The way in which the Afghan horsemen were followed up by Sir Walter Gilbert after the final victory of the second Sikh war at Gujrat, and the way in which Sir Robert Napier gave the enemy before him no rest during the Mutiny, are also grand examples of the truth of this maxim. A hot pursuit has its effect upon all nations, but in the pursuit of Asiatic troops the most daring and hazardous things can be done with confidence of success. A third maxim is, "Never surrender." The defence of Arcot and of the house at Arrah show how prolonged a defence, at first appearing hopeless, may be. But the case of Sale at Jellalabad is even more in point, for when almost out of food and small-arm ammunition, and surrounded by Akbar Khan's comparatively large force, the desperate sally that he made on April 7, 1842, resulted in a complete victory, and the capture of the enemy's camp, ammunition, and provision. Kabul and Cawnpore show the necessity of the maxim from the other side. As a rule, British soldiers and sepoys under British officers may be safely trusted to extricate themselves by their valour from positions of danger, unless overwhelmed, as a consequence of the disregard of common military principles by those who direct their movements. A force with European discipline and leading may safely act with great boldness against Asiatic troops, so long as the point where boldness ends and rashness commences is not overstepped. In most cases, bold action is the safest policy.

The difficulty of procuring properly qualified surgeons to serve in the Navy has for some time been but too apparent. A minimum number of marks obtained in the examinations said to be competitive are allowed to pass into the Navy, as compared with the Army and Indian Service, so that it will be found in numerous instances the accepted candidates for the position of Naval Surgeons have already failed to come up to the standard of qualification or physique required by the other two Services, such a state of things reminding one of the saying of Tom Dill, in Lever's novel, "The Barringtons," when he gives out, while engaged cramming for the examination, "They never take a fellow on anything but two arteries for the Navy." The Medical branch of the Navy, it is to be feared, has been for some years declining, and the quality of its material gradually deteriorating; while the administration has been marked by many and grave defects which has disheartened those in the Service, and prevented the élite of the Medical Schools from joining it. The change which has taken place in the office of the Medical Director-General will, we have every reason to hope, conduce much to the improvement of matters; and in the meantime, it may not be amiss to set forth some of the more easily remediable grievances under which the Medical Service in the Navy labours. In none of the other public Services is a surgeon so utterly isolated, so dependent on his own resources, and so frequently called upon, unaided, to perform the most difficult and trying operations; yet while in the Army instruments are provided for its surgeons, which are also kept in order at Government expense, the Naval surgeon has not only got to find his own, even to splints, bandages, and tourniquets, but also to see to their being in perfect order; all of which outlay falls on him, and he is liable to be found fault with by a commanding officer, if he thinks they do not look sufficiently pretty and bright. In the matter of books and periodicals necessary to enable him to keep up his professional knowledge, these also he is obliged to procure at his own expense; while in the sister-Service will be found medical libraries at all the important military stations, both at home and abroad; and in the American Navy, standard surgical works are supplied by Government to every surgeon serving afloat, and the principal professional periodicals forwarded regularly. True it is that at the home Naval Hospitals medical libraries are established, but only for the use of those attached to the establishments, and a medical officer serving afloat has neither the right to consult nor borrow books from this source. In regard to carrying out his clinical work, the surgeon on board ship is also placed at great disadvantage, compared with his military confrère; the latter has a well-arranged hospital, with nurses and dispensers, all properly trained; the former has to treat his sick in their hammocks between decks, having no one to assist him but an ill-paid, unqualified sick-berth attendant, who frequently knows nothing of dispensing, and for whose action the surgeon is responsible; while, in the Navy of the United States the medical steward, as he is called, is well trained, and in point of pay receives nearly as much as a junior surgeon in our Service. Another grievance very sensibly affecting the Naval Surgeon is the giving to civil practitioners the position and emoluments of Medical Officers to the Naval School at Greenwich, and the Naval prisons of Lewes and Malta, while such appointments connected with the military schools and prisons are invariably given to Army Surgeons. In America, laboratories at Naval dockyards and other scientific posts are held by Naval Surgeons; and in France, the various colonial medical appointments are filled from the ranks of the Medical Officers of the French Navy. We might also ask why the agencies for sick-quarters, both at home and abroad, should not be tenable by retired Naval Surgeons, with advantage both to them and the Service, as also examination of recruits, &c. Many other grievances exist, to which for the present we will only allude, such as the extra pay and allowances granted to the military surgeon while doing duty as principal medical officer in camp or garrison, no corresponding emoluments existing in the case of the Naval Medical Service. Then there is the case of surgeons attached to surveying vessels, who often contribute very materially to the scientific results, but who receive no recognition or extra pay, as the other officers on the survey do. These and others we leave for discussion to some future opportunity. The appointment of Dr. Reid as Director-General of the Medical Department, it is to be hoped, will infuse some more vitality into the Department, and we trust that professional merit and reputation may receive for the future due encouragement. Tact and good address are, no doubt, valuable qualities, and the art of getting on well with a commanding officer very essential; but while highly estimating these, distinguished medical acquirements ought not to be kept in the background. The officer at the head of the Department ought to be able, from experience, to sympathise with the difficult positions in which his subordinate may be placed, accessible to give advice, assistance, and encouragement, to maintain esprit de corps, and stimulate attention to the great duties of prevention of disease by increased attention to sanitary details. It is to be hoped that, under the influence of Dr. Reid, our Naval Hospitals may again become schools for the dissemination of sound medical and surgical knowledge, not only successfully treating disease, but contributing to the advancement of science generally.

The Army has during the last few years been converted for officers from a mere casual and temporary occupation into a regular profession, demanding steady application and a certain amount of success on the part of those who wish for success. Unfortunately, at the same time, certain influences, habits, and practices antagonistic to the realisation of the idea of a professional army have been growing in strength. The theory is, that only the best—from an intellectual point of view—of the respectable youth of the country shall be selected for commissions, and to obtain this élite the area of selection has nominally been extended. War has developed from a trade into a science, and no one who does not give his whole mind to the profession can give the country that good service which the country needs and demands. Since the introduction of short service, it has been found extremely difficult to obtain good and experienced non-commissioned officers. More than ever depends, therefore, on the quality of our officers, their technical skill, their industry, and the example which they set to their impressionable boy soldiers. There is plenty of raw material, but a restriction unfortunately crops up in the shape of insufficiency of private means. It is very desirable, for many reasons, that members of the highest and richest classes should continue to covet commissions, but the bulk of the officers must be—and it is well that such should be the case—men of small incomes. The best officers, in all ages and countries, have ever been the sons of country gentlemen and professional men, especially the sons of officers of the Army and Navy. The smaller the cost of living in the Army, the larger the number of these offer themselves for selection, either by open competitive examinations or by nomination to Militia regiments. The cost of living in the Army, however, instead of decreasing, has largely increased since the Crimean war. Not only are mess bills some thirty per cent. at least higher than they were a quarter of a century since, but every day new regimental subscriptions crop up. The rule seems to be, indeed, that the scale of living should be regulated by the means of the richest men in a regiment, instead of by those of the poorest. Hence debt, difficulties, and the premature termination of many a promising young officer's career. This is particularly the case in the cavalry. In many cavalry regiments, it is impossible to live with his allowance of less than £400 a year; and even in the infantry, an officer, in a large number of regiments, finds it needs the utmost economy to live as a subaltern, unless he receives £200 a year. Indeed, we would not advise a young man to enter an infantry corps with less than £150 per annum. Formerly, a subaltern in the cavalry got on very well with £300, and a subaltern in the infantry with £150 a year,—indeed, £100 was in the infantry very commonly the amount of the allowance. As there seems to be no prospect of any substantial increase of pay, and it is to the advantage of the Service that as few gentlemen as possible should be precluded from seeking for a commission by considerations of expense, some effort should be made to reduce those which are practically obligatory expenses. This would be a difficult task, and could only be accomplished by a combination of vigorous action on the part of the authorities and the pressure of public opinion. It ought, however, to be feasible, for it has been found possible to render the Navy a tolerably economical Service. The worst of it is that young men enter the Army already addicted to extravagance and its twin-brother, idleness. At the various crammers, a longer or shorter residence at which costly institutions is now deemed indispensable, the pupils, in the majority of cases, regularly run riot. Some keep a dog-cart—all live in a style of luxury, in which their fathers never dreamt of indulging. At one crammers there is a billiard-room on the premises. At most crammers bills, sometimes sanctioned, sometimes merely tolerated by the tutors, are run up. In short, the raw lads think themselves badly used if they are not allowed to ape the mode of living of young men in expensive regiments, and would resent as an intolerable tyranny any attempt to make them practice economy. Not only, therefore, do young officers enter the Army with habits of extravagance, based upon the means of the richest of their fellow pupils, but with a lack of discipline which renders them very troublesome to their commanding officers. This bad beginning develops largely when the commission is obtained. They soon learn to look on abstinence from champagne as a marvellous instance of self-denial, and a disinclination to contribute from fifteen to fifty pounds a head for a regimental ball as a thing not to be thought of. The gospel they are taught is that the credit of the regiment must be kept up and regimental institutions supported, and that those who cannot afford to come up to the standard of expenditure have no business in the regiment. This is unmistakably insisted on in the cavalry, and a youngster is given to understand that if his allowance is not so and so, he had better seek some other corps than the —th. Thus only rich men can aspire to enter the mounted branch of the Service, however great a natural turn he may have for it, and an absolutely poor man is debarred from even the infantry. Now, however pleasant it may be for the local tradesmen to have quartered in their midst a regiment which spends much, the interest of the country at large lies rather in the efficiency than in the luxury of officers. Indeed, notwithstanding all that has been said in favour of dandy officers, common-sense teaches us that luxury is antagonistic to military excellence.

H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh returned to duty at the Coastguard Office on Tuesday.

Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., hoisted his flag on board the Inconstant on Thursday, as Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean, and then struck it and proceeded on Admiralty leave, upon which he will remain until the ship is ready for sea.

It has now been officially notified that her Majesty has approved that the grant of the medal with clasp for Perâk shall be extended to the forces engaged against the Malays in the districts of Sri Menanti and Sunghie Ujong. This grant will include such officers and men of the Royal Navy and Royal Marines as were actually engaged in the operations.

The quarterly return of Naval Courts-martial, to December 31, 1879, which has been issued by the Admiralty, records the trials of two lieutenants, one sub-lieutenant, one paymaster, one assistant-paymaster, one surgeon, three boatswains, two carpenters, forty-nine seamen, and sixteen marines. Of the sentences passed on officers, a lieutenant of the Boxer and the carpenter of the Emerald are to be congratulated on their sentences having been annulled by the Admiralty; the former, as we have previously stated, because their Lordships were of opinion that the evidence before the court was not sufficient to prove the charge, and the latter on account of certain irregularities in the proceedings, although he does not escape their Lordships' severe censure. Drunkenness is an offence the definition of which is nowhere laid down with legal precision, and as their Lordships in this instance have thought fit to override the judgment of the court, it would be interesting to know in what state they consider a prisoner should be to warrant a court-martial convicting him. On the Australian station an endeavour to try too great a number of prisoners on the same day—there were, by the return, eight courts held on October 20—would appear to have led to irregularities in the award of solitary confinement, which has necessitated the Admiralty modifying the sentences passed.

The names of the Naval officers of the Channel Squadron found in the gambling houses of Lisbon, when the raid was made upon them, were demanded by the police, before they would release the unfortunate officers from arrest. Their stakes which were on the tables were also confiscated, and taking it altogether, the sportsmen went back to their ships convinced that they had assisted at a very unpleasant performance, and had had but a poor night of it. There is an impression in the Fleet that the flagship knew of the intended descent upon the "hells," but that the word was not passed, so that offenders were caught in the act, and thus received a warning which is likely to have a good effect. We hope this raid upon the tables may not be a mere flash in the pan, for, unfortunately, many of our officers have had reason to rue the temptation that has been put in their way at Lisbon.

The efforts of General von Stosch, German Minister of Marine, to reorganise the rule of the road at sea, have not been an unqualified success. Being alarmed at the loss of the Grosser Kurfürst, and the possibility of any similar confusion at the helm still further reducing the strength of the German Fleet, the General introduced a new system of giving orders to the men at the wheel. But for one maritime nation to try a new code, while others keep to the present one, is likely to lead to great confusion in the Merchant Service, seeing that their crews are picked up anywhere and everywhere, and consist of men of all nations. The Nautical Society of Hamburgh, recognising this fact, has held a meeting to oppose the General's new notions on nautical matters.

The Naval Museum at Greenwich has received an addition to its curiosities, one of the old guns dug out of the bed of the Medway, in making the dockyard extensions, having been forwarded to the museum. The gun is believed to have formerly belonged to a Dutch frigate, which was sunk in the Medway when the Hollanders made their adventurous passage up the river.

Commander Cameron, C.B., has completed his new work, "Our Future Highway," in which he gives the results of his recent travels in the East, and we hear that it was published yesterday.

That the services of the Naval Brigade at the Cape will not soon be forgotten is evident, for the receipt of the Gazette containing the official despatches and promotions is commented upon in a most kindly manner by the Natal Mercury, which says:—"Justice to the services of the Naval Brigade in Zululand had been a long time deferred, but it has come at last. Lord Chelmsford's attention appears to have been drawn to the fact that very inadequate recognition had been made of that branch of the Imperial Service which, beyond all others, did most good work with the coast columns. The despatches speak for themselves, and Lord Chelmsford's is not niggardly in its words of praise. More substantial, however, are the tokens of departmental appreciation afforded by the promotion list. It will be seen that our old friends and favourites Lieutenants Craigie, Fraser, and Heugh are all remembered—as they well deserve to be—and as they ever will be in Natal.

During the late Turkish war, the Russian Government was dependent upon Belgium and England for her supply of explosive material for the torpedoes used by the Navy. Thanks to the completion this month of the explosive factory at St. Petersburg, she is now entirely independent of foreign support in regard to the manufacture of torpedoes.

It appears that Russia is not sufficiently well pleased with the arsenal at Vladivostock, but wants a better and more sheltered port, and preparations for turning St. Olga Bay into a naval port, to be used as the head-quarters of the Siberian Fleet, will be made in the spring.

The Admiralty, having determined to allow captains of flag-ships to have ther families on board, the court-martial room on board the Duke of Wellington has been appropriated to the captain, and Naval Courts are now held on board the Victory.

Rear-Admiral Hood, C.B., with the Minotaur, Agincourt, Northumberland, and Achilles, left Lisbon on January 29, and will cruise until February 10, when they will arrive at Vigo. The Salamis will meet him on the 4th, with mail of January 30, and return to Lisbon, to await mail of February 9 from Southampton. She will then join the squadron at Vigo.

During an experimental attack upon the Hecla at Spithead on Thursday night, two torpedo boats ran into each other. Both boats were severely damaged, one having her bow stove in, and the other her port side. They were kept afloat by their water-tight compartments.

At a dinner given by the Lord Mayor to the Stationers' Company last Tuesday, the First Lord of the Admiralty spoke in high terms of the popularity of the Navy, and expressed his regret that he could not grant admission to all the brave lads who desired to enter it as Naval Cadets.

The honour of appointment as Naval Aides-de-Camp to her Majesty has been conferred upon Captains Ralph Cator and R. G. Douglas.

Sir Alexander Armstrong, K.C.B., late Director-General of the Medical Department of the Navy, was relieved of the duties of his office on Monday by Dr. Watt Reid, Deputy Inspector-General. Sir Alexander Armstrong's papers and claim for pension have been forwarded to the Treasury.

Rear-Admiral Sir William Hewitt, K.C.B., V.C., has been lately in a state of health which has given some anxiety to his friends, but we are glad to hear that the gallant officer is now reported on the road to recovery.

Supplies of provisions for the distressed people living on the islands off the coast of Galway and Mayo will be forwarded next week on board the Goshawk, which has been placed at the disposal of the Committee of the Duchess of Marlborough's Fund for this purpose.

"Vigilans" inquired of a Service contemporary last week why the appointment of an officer to the Sparrowhawk had not been publicly announced, suggesting that it had been smuggled through because the officer had married a niece of the President of the Naval College. Anything more absurd cannot well be imagined, and if "Vigilans" were not to confine his attention to one paper, he would have been saved from writing thus foolishly. The appointment was announced in these columns on January 24.

The inefficient state of the armour-plated ships of the Russian Navy has lately been the subject of some inquiry on the part of the Imperial Government, and it is rumoured that the result will be the removal from office of the present Minister of Marine.

Hobart Pasha would seem to stand a chance of finding that his having given up her Majesty's Service for that of the Sultan may meet with but poor recognition, if the Sultan should remain in his present irritated mood towards all that is English. According to a telegram in the Standard, his Majesty ordered the discharge of all Englishmen serving in the Ottoman Fleet, but on being told that this would disorganise the Naval Service, he contented himself with calling for a list of every British subject employed in the Turkish Navy, so that he may determine who shall be retained.

Rear-Admiral Gore Jones, C.B., remained at Bombay on January 17, his flag flying in the Ruby.

Commodore Wilson was in the Wolverene at Hobart Town on December 23, and expected to be joined there by the Danae and Conflict from Sydney.

Vice-Admiral Dowell, C.B., senior officer on the coast of Ireland, has shifted his flag to the fore on board the Revenge, in compliance with Admiralty orders.

Commander Stratford Tuke, whose retirement is announced this week, has, we understand, been offered some employment under the Irish Government. Commander Tuke stood so high on his list and had seen so many juniors passed over his head, that his chances of promotion had gone.

An officer of the sister-Service has, we are glad to see, written to the Times to protest against the removal of the "Nelson Relics" from the Painted Hall at Greenwich Hospital to the somewhat obscure Naval Museum. Colonel Fitzgerald points out that the museum is occasionally closed, whereas the Painted Hall is always open, including Sundays, and we heartily concur in the remark that the relics of our greatest Naval hero should be made as accessible as possible to the public. The room these few relics occupied in the Painted Hall could surely be spared to them, instead of placing them in what is to many a species of lumber-room, containing models of Naval appliances and ships.

The Rev. Reginald Treffrey, whose presentation to a living we announced some weeks ago, has, we hear, requested permission to resign his office as a Chaplain in the Fleet, for the purpose of accepting the new appointment on shore.

The new regulations for the guidance of departmental officers, adjutants, and captains of companies of Royal Marines, brought out by the committee which completed its sittings at the Admiralty last summer, are now going the rounds of the divisions for comment, prior to being finally approved for issue.

The Greenwich Hospital pension which became vacant some weeks since by the death of Major Thomas Waters, Royal Marines, has not yet been awarded. It is probable the Admiralty have some difficulty in arriving at a decision, as there are above eighty captains on the retired lists of the corps who are eligible to be considered candidates for this pension, some of whom have been more than thirty years captains, and have seen good service.

According to the working of the existing schemes for retirement, Captain Buckle will retire at the end of 1883, and Captain Simpson in July, 1881, but Captain Jago will be advanced to the Active Flag List. Of other Captains holding good-service pensions, Captain Theodore Jones and Captain George Parkin will be retired in 1883. The question which is anxiously considered by Captains now coming towards the head of their List is,—Will these officers take these pensions with them to the Retired Flag List, as Admirals Spain and Brooker have already done? If so, and they hold them for life, it is plain that Captains' good-service pensions will, in a few years, have very little interest for Captains on the Active List, but will be held by a number of retired flag officers.

Admiral Sir Edward Inglefield, C.B., received orders to strike his flag in the Bellerophon, at Portsmouth, at sunset on Monday. The Bellerophon is to be paid off into the Fourth Division of the Reserve on the 24th inst.

Admiral Ryder has moved back to the official residence at Admiralty House, Portsmouth, the defective drainage of the building having been thoroughly overhauled and remedied. The Admiral's house is not the only one in the dockyard which required a careful inspection of its drainage system, and we believe the College is at fault in this respect, and is to be taken in hand without delay.

The officers lately employed at the Cape are being given opportunities of further service, Captain Bradshaw, C.B., and Commander Brackenbury, C.M.G., having both been given commands. The last-named officer will commission the Flirt at Devonport on the 10th, for service on the West Coast of Africa.

The following officers' deaths have been reported at the Admiralty since December 20, 1879:—Lieutenant Walter Bathurst, Fleet Surgeon Peter M. Roe, Staff Surgeon Michael O. Hurlstone, and Boatswain William Prideaux. The under-mentioned officers have been removed from the Active List since December 20, 1879:—Paymaster William B. Jennis, dismissed with disgrace by court-martial; Naval Cadets H. W. M. Mair, A. W. Fellowes, L. C. N. Parnell, H. Stenhouse, F. L. Branfill, W. D. Pinney, J. A. M. Wilson, all unable to pass; Boatswain James Taylor (a), dismissed by court-martial; and Chief Boatswains Samuel Carter and John Eastcott.

Two vacancies exist on the Paymasters' List, caused by the removal of the names of the late paymaster of the Elk and the retirement of Mr. Madgwick Roe, who for nearly five years has filled the office of cashier and storekeeper at Greenwich Hospital School. It is to be hoped their Lordships will not long delay filling these vacancies.

After undergoing many severe trials, the second 38-ton gun of the Thunderer is no more, it having been burst on Wednesday with a double charge, and thus justified the opinion of the Malta Committee, that the fatal explosion in the Sea of Marmora was due to the fact that the weapon had been inadvertently loaded a second time. The result is claimed as another proof of the superiority of breech over muzzle-loaders, as with the former it would be impossible for such a mistake to be made.

If seniority on the List is the point to be considered in awarding good-service pensions to captains, then the Admiralty would appear to have been fair in the selections made this week, for the captains chosen are all of the same seniority, April 11, 1866. But there are also five others of the same seniority, and one or two even more senior, who have claims equal, at least, to one of those who have now been rewarded. Captains Buckle and Jago have had the fortune to see some war-service, and have been constantly employed; but Captain Simpson has never had the opportunity of active service, and has not been so fortunate in obtaining employment, and has more half-pay time than either of the other officers who have been selected for the pensions.

March 10 has been named as the date for launching the Ajax at Pembroke yard, and tugs have been ordered from Portsmouth and Devonport, to lend their assistance. The Ajax, which is a sister-ship to the Agamemnon, is a vessel of 8,492 tons displacement and 6,000 indicated horse-power, and the cost of her hull and engines will be £480,000. The thickness of her armour at the water-line is 18 in., and she will carry four 38-ton guns in her turrets.

It has been suggested to the Committee now sitting on the future of the Marine Corps that there should be a change of uniform from red to blue. That blue would be a better colour for the uniform of men whose services are chiefly required afloat may be admitted for many reasons; but it may possibly be remembered that 26 or 27 years ago two suggestions were made with regard to changing the title of the Roya Marines, one being to that of Rifles, and the uniform green, the other to retain the red and be styled Light Infantry. It is believed the question was decided by her Majesty, who objected to so large a portion of her military forces being clad in any other than the national soldier-like colour; and so the red was retained, and the corps became light infantry.

It is not a little creditable to the professional acumen of the old Dutch Engineers, that the sites of their feeble old batteries have been all selected as the best situated for the defence of Table Bay and Capetown by modern authority. Forts Winyard, Amsterdam, and Knockie, which are now placed in a state of potency by Colonel Hassard, R.E., are found to be in most admirable positions. The first of these is ready, and is already armed with five 6½-ton guns, which will soon be replaced by guns of heavier metal, for which the works will need no alteration. During a recent trial of the guns, in the presence of the Capetown authorities, two of the guns parted company with the carriages, which are of the naval pattern of 1866; but they can be replaced readily, and will, no doubt, be mounted when the next scare of a war with Russia or some other Power falls on the powers that be. There are two batteries, with armour-piercing guns, on the old sites defending the approaches; and the Docks at Table Bay, and the Government Yard at Simon's Bay, are thus made safe from bombardment, should the fleet be away. Other works are in anticipation at Hants Bay, and the Cape will soon be a hard nut to crack from seaward. It is wonderful that the Royal Engineers have been able to do so much, during all the pressure of the Zulu war.

The proceedings of General Roberts in relation to newspaper correspondents have turned public attention generally to the whole question of newspaper work in war-time, and the general tone of the Press has been highly unfavourable to the régime proposed by the Indian General. We hope, whoever his correspondents may be—half-pay officers, as he suggests, or not—they may be able to record that he has been more successful with the Afghans than he has been with the English and Indian journals. But there is one part of the subject which has not, we think, been sufficiently examined, although the Pall Mall Gazette and one or two papers have called attention to it, and indicated clearly enough their opinion on the matter The War-Office regulations respecting officers on full pay engaging in correspondence on Service subjects with the Press as paid, or indeed unpaid, agents, are, in the main, operative only among the small fry, the big fish break through the meshes and swim about where they please. Qui facit per alium facit per se. It is not in the least to be wondered at if a General, who desires to avert obnoxious criticism, to secure public favour for his acts, and to get the nation on his side, should wink with both eyes—and sometimes with one—at the pleasant fact that his personal staff are correspondents of the leading journals, and that he has secured the most powerful agency to promote his interests at home. Certainly popular favour counts for much,—it disheartens official enemies and secures powerful friends. We do not think that any officer, with sagacity to appreciate the nature of the forces which help a man up the ladder, and keep him on the top rung, even when there may be a strong Service wind against him, would despise the aid to which we allude. But there are some very serious drawbacks to the practice, when it becomes known that the special correspondents of influential papers are officers on the staff of the General who is conducting the operations which are the subject of their letters. In the first place, the public, when they are acquainted with the truth, will view with the utmost suspicion the most legitimate praise of the chief from such sources. They are not likely to find hostile criticism, or even mild doubtfulness; but what they get they will scrutinise with a jealous eye. They do not like being "squared." In the next place, any comments or criticisms on brother officers or fellow servants of the Crown, which may emanate from special correspondents who hold personal and official relations with a General in command, naturally excite angry feelings and justify remonstrances on the part of the aggrieved. It is a breach of official propriety. The General may know nothing of it,—very probably would disapprove most strongly of the remarks of the special correspondent, —but he is responsible for his aide-de-camp writes in the Press, when he knows and allows him to be the correspondent of a newspaper, and he must bear the consequences, and take the bitter with the sweet. If the connection be concealed, it is unjust to the public who, reading every morning in all the big newspapers concurrent testimony to the surpassing merits and deeds of Sir Robertulus Bombshell, at once establish him on a pedestal, and prepare to accord him a peerage, quite ignorant that they are being "got at" by the Military Secretary, the Private Secretary, the Adjutant-General, the Quartermaster-General, and all the Aides-de-Camp of the aforesaid Robertulus in the guise of special correspondents. If the connection be avowed, as it should be, it destroys the value of honest eulogy, and restricts the correspondents to statements of the facts which their chief thinks ought to be known, whilst it exposes him to the natural displeasure of those whose conduct may be criticised, and lays him open to disagreeable imputations. The most serious part of the business is the effect on the Press itself. For the sake of official information,—and it may be accurate and early intelligence,—the journals who accept Staff officers as correspondents, give up their highest functions, and become the mere organ of the officer whose subordinates they take into their pay, not to do their work, but to discharge such duties and impart such information as their chief may think expedient.

Up to yesterday, it was not known for certain who would be the successor to General Cadogan in the colonelcy of the 71st Highland Light Infantry. Since our last issue appeared, the death of General W. Munro, C.B., has been announced, which leaves a second Highland regiment, the 93rd, vacant. It is most probable, of course, that Lieutenant-Generals Sir E. H. Greathed and Sir R. D. Kelly will be given the £1,000 a year, but whether any transfers will be made we cannot say at present.

Captain A. Collins, 57th Regiment, has been appointed an aide-de-camp on the Staff of the Marquis of Lorne, K.T., G.C.M.G., Governor-General of Canada.

The Hon. L. R. Masson having been appointed President of the Queen's Privy Council for Canada, vice the Hon. J. O'Connor, appointed Postmaster-General, the Hon. Sir Alex. Campbell, K.C.M.G., has been appointed Minister of Militia and Defence. Mr. Masson's withdrawal will have occasioned universal regret throughout the Dominion, for no Minister has done more than he has to raise the reputation of the Canadian Militia. He is everywhere regarded as a true friend of Canada, and one whose constant study it has been to increase its military reputation, which he certainly has succeeded in doing to a very great extent.

It has been declared that in future officers employed as aides-de-camp to General officers shall be seconded in their regiments on completing three months' service on the Staff of the Army, this arrangement coming into operation from the 10th ultimo. Hitherto aides-de-camp have been seconded on completing twelve months' service on the Staff.

They have found another command for Lord Chelmsford now, that of the Portsmouth District! India, Malta, Aldershot, and Dover, have all in turn been associated with his name. It is no secret that his lordship, had he cared to have accepted it, could have had one command, but it does not happen to be any one of these.

We are delighted to find that the heads of the Ordnance Store and Army Pay Departments have received a tardy recognition of their services during the late campaign in Zululand, Assistant-Commissary-General W. F. Wright and Paymaster and Honorary Lieutenant-Colonel W. C. Ball having received the Civil C.B. But why Civil? The officers surely were as deserving of the military decoration as any of those who recently received it. They were, to all intents and purposes, Staff officers of the expedition, and it seems an anomaly to class them in the same category with the Accountant-General of the Army and the Director of Transport and Supplies, who are members of the civil staff of the War Office, and not, therefore, eligible, in the strict sense, for the Military Division of the Order. When shall we find common-sense exercised in these matters? At present, the several Orders are being brought into general contempt, owing to the inexplicable manner in which they are bestowed. As we pointed out lately, they are given, seemingly, on no principle whatever, and their value is not unnaturally lowered considerably, owing to the inconsistency of those whose duty it is to submit names to her Majesty.

Principal Veterinary-Surgeon Collins, Inspecting Veterinary Surgeon Gudgin, and the officers of the Veterinary Department command our sympathies, and those of every officer in her Majesty's Army. We all know what alarming reports reached England as to local horse diseases, when first the idea of sending out mounted troops to the Cape was mooted. To the officers of the Veterinary staff was entrusted the duty of battling against any epidemics of the nature indicated. They set themselves to work manfully, and under the able supervision of Mr. Gudgin, succeeded in saving the country many thousands of pounds, not alone by the care they took in performing their legitimate duties, but by conducting local purchases, and making themselves generally useful in the field. Yet they return home to find those in power so wanting in all sense of justice as to deny them even the paltry acknowledgment of a C.B.-ship for the officer upon whom fell the charge of the arrangements of the campaign. We cannot think that this is done with the sanction or even knowledge of Lord Chelmsford or the staff of the Horse Guards. If the Veterinary Department is to be considered inferior, socially speaking, to the other departments of the Army, by all means take from the officers of the department the relative rank which places them on an equality with those of the other non-combatant branches; but so long as they retain their present position, and are commissioned as officers, they have an absolute right to be treated with the same consideration which is meted out to others. The present head of the Veterinary service is an officer who for many years past has laboured most determinedly to raise his Department in the public estimation. He has, since his promotion, exercised the very greatest discretion in the acceptance of candidates. He will, indeed, have an up-hill task to perform, if the War Office is intent upon doing everything in its power to prevent him from ever realising his wishes, and carrying out the good work he has found it necessary to inaugurate. And no surer means could possibly have been hit upon than the unjustifiable insult to which Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon Gudgin has just been subjected. A more uncalled-for slight was never passed upon a public department, and the prevailing opinion is, unfortunately, that Mr. Gudgin's services have not been unintentionally ignored. If the Veterinary officers of the Army have any friends, now is the time for them to bestir themselves, for it must be evident that a blow has been cast at the good name of the Department which cannot fail to be most injurious in its effects, to still further lower a Service which we had every reason to hope would have been raised considerably under the able administration of its present chief.

The Accountant-General of the Army, Mr. White, Mr. Lawson, the Assistant-Directors of Stores and Transport, and Mr. Gurdon, C.B., of the Treasury, arrived this week from the Cape in the Conway Castle, after a protracted visit to Natal, the Transvaal, and other districts, in connection with the discharge of their duties,—the investigation into the expenditure on the recent wars, which was ordered by the War Office and Treasury. It was, we believe, the original intention of the Government to confine the inquiry to the cost of the Zulu war; but the scope of the labours of the able gentlemen who were selected to conduct it was extended to the cost of the wars in Griqualand West and with the Gaikas and Galikas, and it will probably turn out that the difficult questions arising out of the just apportionment of expenditure between the Imperial and the Colonial Treasuries will be materially advanced towards a satisfactory settlement by their reports and exertions. The working of the new Department, notwithstanding the opposition which it encountered and peculiar difficulties thrown in its way, to which no further allusion is necessary here, has been most satisfactory. Never have the accounts connected with any war been so rapidly prepared, and never have the Home Authorities been brought so close up to the facts and figures of current military expenditure.

On September 14, 1854, four gentlemen landed on the beach at the Old Fort in the Crimea with the British troops. They were not military men, nor had they any official position. Three of them belonged to the order of "Travelling gentlemen," and were attracted to the East by laudable curiosity, and the interest they naturally felt as Englishmen in the great drama, the opening scene of which was just being played before their eyes. The fourth was a journalist engaged in the discharge of his duty. The first of these four, Mr. Delane, was obliged to return from the Crimea 'ere the Army left the beach on September 19 for the Alma, in consequence of the receipt of urgent despatches connected with his business as editor of the Times, and to go back to England. The second, Mr. (now Sir) H. Layard went on board the Agamemnon as the guest of Admiral Lyons, and wrote the account of the battle of the Alma, from the masthead, which appeared in the Times, and attracted so much notice at the time; the third was Mr. Kinglake, the author of "Eothen," long since established as an English classic. He was present at the action of September 20, and remained at the Head-quarters' Camp till the abortive bombardment of Sebastopol on October 17, after which he went home. The fourth, Mr. Russell, was also present at the battle, and witnessed the actions of Balaclava, October 25, 1854, the battle of Inkerman, and the various engagements and assaults which occurred before the place, and remained with the Army till the last man set sail from the Crimea in 1856. Mr. Delane, whose death a short time back caused such regret to the widest circle of friends any man ever made, was, by the concurrent admission of the Press, of which he the ornament and brilliant "illustration," the greatest English editor that ever lived, exercising enormous influence with judgment, honesty, and complete self-denial, making the fortunes, in a political and literary sense, of many men without a thought of anything but the public interest, by devoting all the powers of his mind to the good of his country. He neither sought nor obtained any mark of favour, though he more than once refused offers of place from Ministers who considered that he had done the State some service. Sir A. H. Layard is the able Ambassador of Great Britain at the Ottoman Porte. Mr. Russell is just returning from South Africa, where he has been with Sir Garnet Wolseley's head-quarters as special correspondent. Mr. Kinglake is writing the long-promised volume of his great work, in which he has to deal with the fortunes of the British Army in the winter of 1854-5, and the part played by Lord Raglan in connection with them, now six-and-twenty years ago. What prodigious changes have been witnessed in war and politics since the time these four men witnessed the landing of the Anglo-French expedition and the Turkish division at Old Fort! Mr. Kinglake will have to bestir himself if he expects any of those who were actors in the war of 1854-6, or of those who took an interest in the controversies of the period, to read it, for he is taxing the powers of nature somewhat, and the grave is swallowing, day after day, the men who shared in the glories and sorrows of that memorable campaign.

Duke Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, whose death has placed several Courts in mourning, was rather an unwelcome attendant on the Crown Prince of Germany, in the war of 1870-71. Attired in a plain blue-and-silver uniform, undecorated in any way, he rode day after day with the Bavarian section of the Head-quarter Staff through France, and his presence was understood to be distasteful to the great Chancellor, whose procedures and policy in the Schleswig-Holstein question he did not quite appreciate. The Prince was not the object of many petits soins on the part of the Prussian officers, but he was an amiable and accomplished man, a keen sportsman, and a very intelligent observer.

On January 22, 1879, occurred the catastrophe of Isandlwana. There was, of course, the usual claims sent into the Board for compensation for losses and for the necessaries which were destroyed, and which had to be replaced by the survivors. The War Office left nothing undone to satisfy the just demands of the officers and men, and meet the cases of those who represented soldiers killed in action; but somehow or other, the claims were not settled when we last heard from the Cape. Lord Chelmsford, Colonel Crealock, and Captain Gossett were reimbursed almost immediately, and received their money without difficulty; but the officers of the 24th Regiment, many of them poor enough to feel the delay very keenly, were still, by last accounts, without the compensation to which they were entitled.

It is, we believe, the intention of the War Office to promulgate the new scale of compensations on which there was a Board sitting some time back, if it has not done so already, and the allowances will be found much more equitable and liberal than the old scale, which was drawn up before the Crimean war.

We hear that the main reason of Gordon Pasha's resignation is the state of his health. The only wonder is that he has been able to hold out so long, as his constitution has been much enfeebled by service in China and on the Danube. It is to be feared that, as much of his work depended on his presence, there will be a relapse into the old ways when he has disappeared from the scene of his labours.

Our Army promises to be one of the most highly decorated in the world. Formerly it was our wont to sneer at the abundance of stars, crosses, and ribands which foreign armies, except that of France, delighted in; but we are in a fair way of having no room on the breasts of our coats for the silver and silk won in continual contests with savage races, whose existence is quite unknown in Europe to any but ourselves. The distinctions earned in the Crimea and the Indian Mutiny were the fruits of gallant service, of which any soldiers in the world might be proud, and there was hard work enough in China in the fighting line, and in New Zealand too (where our part was not always glorious or even creditable), to justify national recognition. It was sometimes very largely expressed in these cases. But, since the days of Abyssinia and Ashantee, we have been hastening on to the verge of the ridiculous. Imagine "the Duke" resisting the claims of his Army for any honours for such battles as Salamanca and Vittoria, and think what he would say if he saw the Duke in Pall Mall according clasps and medals for "skrimmages" with anonymous barbarians, as if he were shaking them out of a sieve! The "S.I." and "M.G." have come in opportunely to prevent the swamping of the Bath, and the "I.E." will be, no doubt, utilised in time; but the medals and clasps and other military distinctions for frontier wars in India—we are not alluding to the Afghan expedition—and out of it, for Cape campaigns, and such services as were done in Bhotan, Perak, &c., added to those bestowed for former work, are becoming so numerous that our officers will have to carry them on trays.

A correspondent, himself a Highland officer, writes to suggest that Lord Airey's Committee on Army Reorganisation should take into consideration the propriety of forming a Highland Brigade. He is of opinion that such a step would tend greatly to the increase of esprit de corps, and his scheme is as follows:—The Highland brigade to consist of the five kilted regiments. The officers to rank as in one regiment, according to dates of commission, except in the case of officers who have exchanged. The latter to rank according to the year and date of their exchange. Each battalion to be allowed to retain its county or regimental title. The facings to be blue. None but Scotchmen to be allowed to enlist in the brigade. The idea is plausible, and such a brigade would possess certain advantages, but there would be many difficulties in the way of carrying it out. Our correspondent must know that the kilted regiments cling almost as much to their numbers as to their titles, and that one of the five, at all events, cannot get on at all with the other four. The system differs widely in each regiment. The very esprit de corps which it is the object of the scheme to promote, would render officers very unwilling to pass from one battalion of the brigade to another on promotion. Great hardship would be inflicted by bringing all the officers on to one brigade list, for promotion having been unequal, the second senior captain of one regiment might find himself the twelfth in the brigade. Finally, as long as Scotland is saddled with a host of regiments which have only a normal connection with her, she never can supply sufficient recruits to the five kilted regiments to enable them to dispense altogether with foreigners.

Officers of the Army and Navy are among the heaviest sufferers from incautious investments. It is easily to be understood why such should be the case. They are proverbially trustful, and are apt to credit any one having the appearance of a gentleman with the feelings of one. They have also little knowledge of commercial affairs, and being little in London, are unable to make personal investigations into the matters brought before them through the medium of prospectuses. The consequence is, they are being continually swindled. Hence they will be especially the gainers by the Investment Registry and Stock Exchange (Limited), which has been formed, should this company prove efficient and sound, as from the names of the directors there is every reason to suppose it will. This company was formed to carry out a recommendation of the Royal Commissioners appointed in 1878 to inquire into the Stock Exchange. Its object is to register and afford information concerning investments, and to bring the buyers' and sellers' brokers into immediate contact, thus saving the expense of a middleman or jobber. We wish and anticipate for it every success.

Lieutenant H. Tryon Wing, 79th Regiment, was called to the Bar by the Benchers of the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple on the 26th ult.

Captain E. M. Roe, 23rd Fusiliers, has been appointed to succeed Lieutenant-Colonel Hugh Mackenzie, half-pay, late 15th Regiment, as Secretary and Adjutant of the Royal Military Asylum, Chelsea. Captain Roe has just completed his period of service as garrison-instructor at Shorncliffe.

The attention of the authorities must, we should think, be before long directed to the present expensive and ruinous Depôt system of the Royal Artillery. To provide annually about 200 recruits for India, and to carry out the unwieldy Brigade organisation, three batteries of Horse Artillery—some 20 officers—are maintained. One battery stationed in Ireland is, we believe, only kept up by a flow of recruits from England,—these men having to return to this country in most cases for embarkation. The other batteries are at Aldershot and Woolwich, but their utility is diminished from their taking part in constant field-days, instead of their duties being limited, as they are surely intended to be, to the training of recruits. We maintain that one large Depôt for the Horse Artillery, away from a great town, would tend more to the efficiency of that branch of the Service, and would be more economical for the country than attempts to bolster up an organisation which, to all thinking minds, has failed. These remarks are applicable to the eleven Field and Garrison Artillery Depôts which absorb over 60 officers, and which are, in many cases, stationed at some of the most unsuitable spots in the kingdom for the training of young Artillerymen.

A return, showing the state of efficiency of the signallers of each corps on home service inspected by the Inspector of Signalling during the autumn of 1879, is published for general information. The General Order says:—"Though this return shows an improvement on the signalling of 1878, it is observed with regret that the instruction by regimental instructors appears to be almost uniformly neglected, and that many corps have either no trained signalmen, or an incomplete number. As the importance of signalling is becoming daily more apparent, the attention of commanding officers is specially drawn to the above points, in the hope that by more careful compliance with the regulations on the subject, greater and more general efficiency (particularly as regards speed in transmission, combined with accuracy in reading) will be attained, before the next annual inspections are made." From the return it appears that the regiment obtaining the largest figure of merit was the 41st Foot, 119·21, the 86th Foot standing second, with 118·22, and the Scots Greys third, with 112·48.

It has now been decided by her Majesty the Queen that the grant of the medal with clasp for Perâk shall be extended to the forces engaged against the Malays in the districts of Sri Menanti and Sunghie Ujong. It has also been decided that the issue of the medal shall be, in the case of the troops which proceeded from Hong Kong and the Straits Settlements, limited to the period between Nov. 2, 1875, and March 20, 1876, both dates inclusive; and in the case of the troops that embarked from India, to the period between November 27, 1875, and March 20, 1876, both dates inclusive.

It has been officially notified that exchanges between officers of the Army Medical Department at home and foreign stations will be permitted to the same extent as in the case of combatant officers under the qualifying conditions as to promotion specified in Articles 15, 18, and 21 of the Royal Warrant of November 27, 1879 (Clause 1, Army Circulars, 1880). Except under special circumstances, exchanges between medical officers serving in the United Kingdom will not be permitted, unless the officers have been at least two years at their respective stations.

Her Majesty has this week approved the appointment of Major W. B. G. Cleather, 47th Regiment, as inspector of Gymnasia, vice Major G. F. Gildea, 21st Fusiliers, promoted.

How much longer is the 55th Regiment to be left without a Lieutenant-Colonel? As the Army List shows, the regiment has suffered greatly for some years past from a slowness of promotion, so much so, that nine of its subalterns obtained their commissions before the abolition of Purchase. Notwithstanding this, six months have been allowed to elapse since Colonel Hume's time expired. The officer who is to succeed him in command, Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Morgan, is still awaiting his step. A delay of this kind cannot be really necessary, and must be due to oversight.

Allen's Indian Mail of the 29th ultimo contains an account of the Cavalry action before Cabul on December 11. If this is a correct account, it shows that the officer in command of the Cavalry Brigade blundered on an enemy in vast numbers and attacked him at once, though totally unprepared, being without infantry, and the ground for guns and cavalry being of the worst description. No wonder the men get out of hand, and that the officers were all killed or wounded. The whole affair seems to have been a ghastly mistake, and though no honours are usually given to commemorate defeats, the 9th Lancers may fairly be considered to have earned some special distinction for the bravery displayed by all ranks. Their gallantry has never been surpassed by British troops. They were simply ordered to gallop into the arms of death, and the order was obeyed.

Major-General T. Raikes, C.B., has arrived in England, on vacating his brigade command in Madras.

The handsome pile of buildings for the Household Cavalry, which has replaced the ugly, black structure for many years an eyesore to the habitués of the Row, is now fast approaching completion at Knightsbridge. The works have been a long time in progress, but the result is an addition to our buildings on which the West End and the War Office are to be congratulated. Architectural effect has been in all parts carefully studied, the rooms and stables are large and airy, and the sanitary arrangements excellent. We hope to be enabled shortly to give a detailed notice of the new barracks.

The 43-ton gun, now in course of construction at Woolwich Arsenal, in the Royal Gun Factories, is to be a breechloader, as we anticipated in our columns some weeks ago. The breech-closing apparatus will be similar to that employed in the 6-inch breechloading gun manufactured by Sir William Armstrong and Co., at Elswick, and which was experimented with last year at Shoeburyness, when marvellous results were obtained from the practice. This apparatus consists of a breech-block or cylinder of forged metal, one-half of whose surface is smooth and the other half "tapped," with a raised thread of bold profile. A corresponding smooth surface and raised thread within the bore of the gun's breech enables the breech cylinder to be thrust home, by bringing a smooth and a tapped surface in contact with one another. Then a half turn of the cylinder blocks it firmly in the breech, which is by this means absolutely closed. But how is the cylinder manipulated? We will explain in a moment. On the side of the entrance end of the gun's breech is an enormously powerful hinge or swivel, working horizontally, to which is hinged a "bearer," hollowed out so as to contain or carry the cylinder. A single movement swings this bearer right into position against the breech, or leaves the latter open when required. So soon as the cylinder is brought into position behind the gun, it is rammed home, and an arm, with handle to turn it, being affixed to the back of the cylinder, the closing of the breech is effected in an equally simple manner. A soft metal gas-check is attached to the face of the cylinder, or vent-piece, which prevents there being any escape of gas around its edges. This fits tightly against a "choke" or rim which is left within the bore at the entrance to the powder-chamber. The 43-ton gun will be of great length in the chase, its entire length being about eight feet more than the present 38-ton gun. It will be chambered like the muzzle-loading experimental one which was tried some time since. As, of course, there will be no windage, and the exact charge of powder which the chamber will contain can be calculated to a nicety, a greatly increased initial velocity and penetrative power may be expected from it. But this is only one advantage which will be obtained. It is found practically with the "chambered" muzzle-loaders that they cannot be properly sponged out. The head of the sponge will not "search" the recesses so thoroughly as is essential for security. In the new gun no such difficulty will be experienced, as the "chamber" will be sponged from the rear. The necessity for the use of heavy machinery in loading, ramming, and spunging will also be obviated, which is a consideration of paramount importance. It must be remembered that neither of the systems tried to effect this has proved satisfactory. The "stiff chain" system constantly got out of order. The steam system was abandoned after a few trials. The dangerous nature of the hydraulic plan of loading from below, by lowering the muzzle of the weapon, is too well known to require elucidation. Such an accident as that on board the Thunderer could not, of course, have happened had the gun been a breech-loader, assuming it to have occurred through the error of double-loading. The fact of a previous charge not having ignited would have been self-evident. It is a matter for congratulation that our Military Authorities have at length been aroused to the advantages of a breech-loading system for guns, yet the fact of almost all our present armament consisting of muzzle-loaders cannot but arouse a feeling of regret that the suggestions of Major Nolan, reiterated so constantly in Parliament, should have been disregarded for such a length of time. He was apparently right after all.

ADJUTANCIES OF MILITIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As I see by your paper of the 27th ult. that several Adjutancies of Militia will become vacant during this year, I ask you to allow me, through your columns, to place before my brother captains the real value of these appointments, in order that the financial position of adjutant may not be misunderstood. It is assumed that the would-be adjutant of Militia is married, as it is conceived that few bachelors would care to accept the appointment. The pay is the same as that of a captain in the army, the only extras being mess allowance for 56 days at 4s. per diem; horse allowance at the regulation rate, and 2s. 6d. per head for the recruits that may be obtained, less Income-tax. The mess allowance for the 27 days' training is usually credited to the mess fund of the Militia regiment, and little of the remainder can, as a rule, be saved, as the adjutant would live at the Brigade Depôt mess while the recruits are up for preliminary drill. The horse allowance being, as is well known, insufficient, the necessity for keeping a charger involves an additional expense. The War Office have allotted adjutants of Militia one captains' quarter in Brigade Depôt barracks, and they consequently lose the lodging allowance of £41 1s. 3d. per annum, £18 5s. in lieu of a servant, and £12 fixed allowance, which sums, until recently, formed part of their income. The expenses on first appointment for change of uniform, purchase of charger, and horse furniture, must be reckoned at £100, at least. It would be well that candidates for these appointments should understand that none but officers of fair private means can afford to hold them. If an officer be married, there is an advantage attaching to the post, and that is the chance of his being settled for 5 years (unless he is meanwhile promoted), but this cannot be counted on, as in case of war the Militia regiment may be embodied. It should be borne in mind that even if the Line regiment to which the adjutant of Militia belongs is ordered on active service, he is debarred from returning to it. In fact, only by death, promotion, or retirement can he sever his connection with his militia battalion, until the term of five years has expired. Should he, meanwhile, wish from any cause to relinguish it, he would, it is believed, be placed on a reduced half-pay. Under all these circumstances, is the appointment worth acceptance?—I am, &c., X. W. Z.

THE INFANTRY FORAGE-CAP.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A word of warning to cadets "and others." The new infantry officers' forage-cap is not approved, as certain accommodating tailors would have us believe. Undoubtedly, the Glengarry is the most servicable and comfortable cap for a soldier, but, if worn on the back of the head (as one of your correspondents suggested), or pressed flat down on the top of it, we might as well wear our grandmothers' nightcaps.—I am, &c.,

2nd Dragoon Guards. Capt. Doyle joined the Staff College on Monday, to resume his studies at the termination of his leave of absence on his return from Zululand.

3rd Dragoon Guards. Lieut. Taylor has applied to retire by the resignation of his commission.

4th Hussars. Brevet-Major Kington has applied to retire.

6th Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers). The Bombay Gazette gives the following fuller particulars of the accident by which five men of this regiment were drowned while crossing a ford in the Cabul River on the 5th ult. are supplied by a correspondent of the Allahabad journal at Jellalabad :—" A reconnoitring party, consisting of 75 sabres of the Carabiniers and 75 sabres of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, under the command of Major Cracroft, of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry, and accompanied by Major Boyes, Assist.-Adjt.-Gen., Capt. Dutton, Assist.-Qrmr.-Gen., and Capt. Warburton, political officer, left Jellalabad in the morning to examine the country towards the Lughman Valley on the left bank of the Cabul River, which was crossed at the ford opposite the fort at Jellalabad. The party, having seen all that was necessary, returned, arriving about 1 p.m. at the Daranta ford, some seven miles west of Jellalabad city, which had to be examined in view of future operations. The ford was pointed out, and was seen to be perfectly easy, as natives were crossing it on foot; it lay in a straight line some thirty or forty yards above a rapid. After a few minutes' halt the party proceeded, headed by the nephew of Sirdar Khalik Khan, and led by Major Cracroft. The Caribiniers followed, and in some way, as yet unexplained, five men, who were about the centre of the second troop, left the line of the ford and fell over the rapid into the deep water below, where they sank. One horse also was lost, the remaining four reaching the bank. A court of inquiry has been assembled to investigate the particulars. A later message states :—The following are the names of the men who were lost :—Corporal Eaves and Privates Fraiars and Salter, C Troop; Private Woods, A Troop; and Private Stonecliffe, F Troop. Search is being made for their bodies, but as yet without success."

8th Hussars arrived at Rawul Pindee on Jan. 5, en route to the front.

9th Lancers. It is officially notified in the Gazette of India that "Capt. Lord William Beresford, V.C., has been permitted to resign his appointment as aide-de-camp to Lord Lytton, and that his services have been replaced at the disposal of the Commander-in-Chief, with effect from Dec. 23."

10th Hussars. The movement of the regiment from Rawul Pindee to Umballa has been countermanded.

11th Hussars. Regt.-Sergt-Major Worthington and the non-commissioned officers of the regiment gave a party in the Assembly Rooms, High-street, on Wednesday, 28th ult., which was attended by a large number of their military and civilian friends of the camp and town, there being over 200 present. The rooms were neatly and prettily decorated, and everything conducive to the comfort of the guests was carried out in a most satisfactory manner. Dancing commenced shortly before ten o'clock, to the strains of the splendid band of the regiment, and was kept up with great spirit until an early hour on Thursday morning, it being the first party for a length of time given by the military in the Assemby Rooms.

14th Hussars. The Commander-in-Chief of the Madras Army has now published the annual return of the musketry practice of the British and Native troops in the Madras Presidency for the course 1878-79. In this it is stated that "in the British Cavalry (14th Hussars), 374 men have been trained, showing an improvement of 9·25 points per man on the figure of merit last year, which may be attributed partly to their shooting with a better arm, the Martini-Henry, and partly to the greater interest taken in the training by all ranks. The results of the dismounted practice with horses are satisfactory, the average being 7·02 points per man, as compared with 6·74 of the best cavalry regiment at home. The per-centage of non-exercised men is excessive, owing principally to the number of men invalided and time-expired, and to those at Wellington not being trained."

17th Lancers. Capt. W. Williams, formerly of the regiment, died at Wortley Park, Winchester, on the 2nd inst., aged 68 years. Lieut. the Hon. L. H. D. Fortescue is performing the duties of acting Adjt., vice Lieut. Swaine, promoted to a troop in the 11th Hussars. Serjt.-Major C. Coventry is performing the duties of rdgmr.

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Major L. M. Taylor, 2nd Brig., has been granted leave from India to England for three months, on urgent private affairs.

We regret to learn that Capt. Maurice's wound is not healing kindly. A part of the shoulder-blade is exfoliating, and a piece of the bone which was shattered is causing much pain.

Ninety officers being immediately required for the regiment, the following order was issued on Wednesday by Gen. Sir John Adye, Governor of the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich :—" In consequence of an additional number of officers being required for the Royal Artillery to meet existing vacancies, it becomes necessary to modify somewhat the arrangements for the studies of the next few months, in order to bring forward more cadets for commissions, and the following arrangements will be carried out: —The month's vacation usually commencing after the public day on Feb. 17 next will not take place. The new first class will go through a course of three months' study, and be examined for commissions early in May next. The second, third, fourth, and fifth classes will continue their studies as usual until May, and will then be moved up one class, and be examined over the work of both terms at the end of July next. Any alterations which may be necessary in the course of studies, and in the syllabus for the July examinations will be duly notified. There will be a short recess at Easter.'

The Government of one of the great Powers of Continental Europe has quite recently lodged an order with the Gatling Gun Company for the immediate supply of a very large number of their latest improved pattern of mitrailleuse, to fire 1,000 rounds per minute. It is an ill wind that blows nobody any good; and the activity infused into the works of the Gatling Gun Company can be directly traced to the recent increase in the army of the German Empire, decided upon by the man of "blood and iron," Prince Bismarck.

Major T .W. Bridges, 10th Brig. (late Bengal), died at Bermuda on the 15th ult., aged 40 years. The deceased served with the force under Brigdr. Chamberlain in the operations against the Wuzeerees in 1859-60 (medal, with clasp). He joined the Army, June 12, 1858; became first lieut., Aug. 27, 1858; capt., April 30, 1869; and major, Dec. 31, 1878.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

Col. Sir J. Stokes, K.C.B., has returned to England from special service in Egypt, to resume his appointment as Commandant of the School of Military Engineering, Chatham.

We have received the following extract from Troop Orders in Natal for publication :—" Troop Orders, Nov. 11, 1879. P.M.B., Natal, South Africa. The C Troop, R.E., being shortly to embark for England, the C.R.E. of the Field Forces takes this opportunity of thanking Major Hamilton, the other officers, and non-commissioned officers and men for the excellent services rendered by them during the recent operations in the field, which materially aided in carrying out the administration and other work of the Army, both in the construction and maintenance of long lines of telegraph, and when employed as signallers with the heliograph, the work of the troop has been carried out in a most satisfactory manner and with great zeal and energy. This was especially manifested in the efforts made by Lieut. Here and the linesmen of his section to repair the damages caused to the telegraph lines by the storm of the 7th and 8th of August; the conduct of the men has throughout been most exemplary and creditable to the corps, all ranks have worked thoroughly well. The following non-commissioned officers are especially deserving of mention :—Troop Serjt.-Major Lewis, who has shown great zeal and intelligence in all his work, and who has been dispatched on important duties, Troop Qrmr.-Serjt. Scrimshaw, Serjts. Waters and Kimber, Telegrapher Corpls. Urquhart, Wooldridge, Attwood, and Wainwright, 2nd Corpl. Jarrett, Lance-Corpl. Seggie, and Telegraphers Concanond, Richardson, and Burgess, 2nd Corpl. E. Stead, and Shoeing-Smith Dawkins also showed most praiseworthy energy and perseverance in repairing the damages done to the telegraph lines by the storm on and after Aug. 7. In conclusion, the Commanding R.E. of the Field Forces congratulates the troop on the highly creditable results of their first employment on active service, and wishes them farewell, with every wish for their future welfare.—By order (signed), H. H. Watkins, Lieut. and Adjt., P.M.B., Natal, South Africa."

Lieut. H. J. Harman, in charge of the Darjeeling survey, was last heard of at about 16,000ft. near Rakchom, and was most courteously received on the Tibet frontier. He had a narrow escape of having his feet frost-bitten on the Donkia Pass. He has received much invaluable assistance from the Sikkim Raja, and describes the scenery as entrancingly grand. There has been been a severe murrain among the yaks, owing, Lieut. Harman thinks, to their feed in too low-lying pastures.

Major J. H. Bradford has been appointed commandant of the Bombay Sappers and Miners.

Lieut. G. F. Wilson has passed the lower standard in Hindostanee.

Lieut.-Col. W. H. Burton (late Madras) has been granted leave from India to England, for two years on medical certificate.

A correspondent writes to ask, "What has Col. Hassard done, that he has been left out in the cold, when all the honours are going in showers around him? He is an officer of long service, and his position as commanding officer Royal Engineers at the Cape during two wars would alone, in justice to the corps, seem to entitle him to some mark of distinction, unless he has done something to disentitle him to any, and in that case he ought to be removed. But every one knows Col. Hassard has done nothing of the kind. He has held high command during his term of command during the war, and has executed several important works during his term of command in connection with the defence of the colony. We are disgusted here with the way in which the "Michael and George" has been used. It seems quite a perversion and prostitution of the Order to give it to Imperial officers for Imperial military service, and it will discredit the honour in the eyes of colonists and colonial servants, whilst it will not be much thought of by soldiers who get it as a substitute for their proper reward. 'You are not good enough for the Bath. Here is the C.MG. for you!'"

The Portsmouth Times says :—" At the present time the submarine miners at Portsmouth are confined to the 4th Compy. of Royal Engineers, who are commanded by Capt. Ramsay, and are quartered at Fort Blockhouse, at the mouth of the harbour. Submarine mining, however, has grown into such importance, as a means of coast defence, that measures are proposed to be taken here for its more thorough cultivation. It is intended to form a school for the purpose, and Col. Smyth, commanding Royal Artillery, has submitted a scheme for improving the accommodation of Forts Monckton and Blockhouse, and handing them over to the Royal Engineers. The educational results attending the late night battle between the land and naval torpedo forces, in front of the former fort, having proved satisfactory, it is intended to repeat the contest during the year, and as in the meantime a method of laying the gun upon the electric light has been discovered, the conflict will call forth all the resources at the command of the submarine defenders."

Coldstream Guards. The 1st Btn. will be relieved at Shorncliffe in March by the 1st Btn. Scots Guards.

Scots Guards. An amateur performance in aid of the Guards' Home was given in the day room of Chelsea Barracks by the club of the 2nd Batn., on the 22nd and 23rd ult., in the presence of a large and distinguished company, which included the Countess of Effingham, Lady Cremorne, the Earl of Stair, Lord Methuen, and many of the officers. The club relied mainly for its programme on the serio-comic drama, "Old Phil's Birthday," which had previously been warmly received, owing to the really creditable manner in which the part of the old porter was sustained by Serjt.-Major Gordon, who was now well assisted by Colour-Serjts. Stephens and Mitchell, Serjts. Richardson and Bennett, and especially by the Misses Bessie and Nellie Harrison. The drama was preceded by the farce of "Betsy Baker," which provoked roars of laughter. The 1st Batn. proceeds to Shorncliffe in March.

14th Regiment. The 2nd Batn., by latest accounts, was at Jumrood, with Brigdr. Hill's Brigade of the Afghan Field Force. The Lahore paper says :—" Great discontent is expressed at the 2nd Batn. 14th being sent to the front, while the 2nd Queen's, the 63rd, the 65th, and the 73rd have been passed over, and are doomed to do garrison duty in India."

17th Regiment. Capt. Smyth, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate.

18th Royal Irish. By latest accounts from Peshawur, the 1st Batn. had joined the brigade there under Brigdr. Roberts's command.

19th Regiment. Lieut.-Col. G. Baldwin, captain on the Retired List, late of the regiment, died at Limpsfield, Surrey, on the 3rd inst., aged 43 years. The deceased joined the Army, June 6, 1854, became lieutenant, Dec. 8, 1854, captain, Aug. 25, 1862, brevet major, Oct. 8, 1876, and lieutenant-colonel on retirement, Oct. 1, 1877. He served with the 1st Batn. in the Hazara campaign in 1868, including the expedition to the Black Mountain (medal with clasp). Capt. C. J. F. S. Forbes, late of the regiment, deputy commissioner British Burmah Commission, died at Tharrawaddy on Nov. 28.

28th Regiment. Lieut. G. W. Lyttleton died at Horfield Barracks, Bristol, on the 28th ult., aged 29 years. He entered the Service, Aug. 3, 1870, and became lieut., Oct. 28, 1871.

32nd Light Infantry. Lieut. Beaumont has been appointed adjt. to the 35th Brigade Depôt at Bodmin, vice Capt. Hardinge.

46th Regiment is en route from Bermuda to the Mediterranean in H.M.S. Himalaya.

48th Regiment was the best shooting regiment in the Madras Presidency during the season 1878-79, with a figure of merit of 107·47.

49th Regiment. Capt. Dickson has been appointed adjutant of the 5th Adm. Batn., Kent Rifle Volunteers.

ROYAL MARINES.

Brevet Major Henry F. Cooper, late barrackmaster to the Chatham Division, has been gazetted Lieut.-Col. from Dec. 31 last, the date of his retirement.

During the period of absence of Capt. J. L. Morris, at Woolwich Arsenal, Capt. C. H. Scafe will discharge the duty of gunnery-instructor at Plymouth Division.

The Hampshire Telegraph hears from Devonport that measles are "raging" in the Marine Barracks at Stonehouse, that many deaths have occurred, and that a number of children are now lying ill. One non-commissioned officer, whose family has been attacked with this disease, only returned from the funeral of one of his children to find that another had died while he was engaged on his sad errand. Major Heriot lost his eldest daughter on Monday, last week, and has another child lying very ill. On Monday, too, the messman of the barracks lost a child from the same cause, so it is not to be wondered at that a very great sadness prevails at the barracks just now.

The Admiralty having been pleased to direct that a major of Marines should be appointed to the First Reserve Squadron, and embarked in the Hercules, Major W. D. Welch, R.M.A., has been directed to proceed to Greenock and join that ship accordingly. Capt. W. E. E. Morley, R.M.L.I., serving on board that ship, will join his divisional head-quarters.

Medals for long service and good conduct have been awarded the following, viz. :—Colour-Serjt. Charles Garton and Serjts. Thomas Gaffneys and Henry Malyon, R.M.A.; and 1st-Class Serjt.-Instructor of Musketry John Chivers, Serjts. James Biddle, Robert Berridge, and James Plummer, Serjt.-Cook Henry Gomer, Musician John Harris, and Ptes. William Clark, Samuel Fletcher, and James Welsh, R.M.L.I.

The Admiralty have ordered that the standard height for recruits enlisting into the corps of Royal Marines is to be lowered as follows :—For men over 20 years of age, from 5 ft. 7½ in., to 5 ft. 7 in.; and for those under 20 years, from 5 ft. 6½ in., to 5 ft. 6 in.

50th Queen's Own will be conveyed from Scotland in

H.M.S. Himalaya, on the arrival home of the 71st Highlanders from Gibraltar.

51st Light Infantry. Sub-Lieut. Mason, a probationer, wing-officer 20th Madras N.I., is about to be admitted to the Madras Staff Corps, with the rank of lieut., from Sept. 10, 1876.

57th Regiment. Capt. Hughes-Hallett has been selected for employment in the Intelligence Branch of the Deputy-Quartermaster-General's Office in Ireland, in place of Capt. White, 77th Foot. Capt. Hinxman has been granted an extension of his leave of absence from 4th inst. to April 20, for the recovery of his health.

59th Regiment. The Central News says:—"Her Majesty has approved of the Victoria Cross being conferred upon Capt. E. H. Sartorius, 59th Regiment, in recognition of the distinguished gallantry displayed by him in Afghanistan. Capt. Sartorius is a son of the Admiral of the Fleet Sir George Sartorius."

60th Rifles. Capt. Hope-Edwards, 4th Batn., has passed the lowest standard in Hindostanee.

66th Regiment, at Kurrachee, is under orders of readiness to embark at that port, en route to Candahar. A letter, dated Kurrachee, Jan. 9, states that:—"A detachment, consisting of 256 rank and file, has been sent from Kurrachee to Hydrabad under the command of Lieut. Chute, in relief of a similar detachment, returning thence to head-quarters in charge of Capt. Quarry.

71st Highland Light Infantry. The regiment, it is now arranged, will be conveyed home from Gibraltar in H.M.S. Himalaya. The remains of Gen. Hon. Sir George Cadogan, K.C.B., colonel of the regiment, were interred in Kensal Green Cemetery on Jan. 30. The funeral was private, those who followed including his only son, Mr. Horace Cadogan, Hon. Frederick Cadogan (his brother), and a few other relatives.

72nd Highlanders. No details at the fighting on Dec. 14, which ended in Gen. Roberts concentrating his forces in the cantonments, have hitherto been published. The following account of the affair, as given by the special correspondent of the Pioneer, will, therefore, be read with interest by all old members and their friends of the regiment:—"Cabul, Dec. 14.—The severest fighting yet experienced took place to-day. Gen. Macpherson withdrew from Dah Maquig (?), concentrating his force upon the Bala Hissar heights, as there was danger of the enemy storming that position, they being in large number near Indikee. This morning, the enemy took advantage of the Cabul gorge being free to line the Asmai heights, about Deh-i-Afghanan, pouring out from the city to the numbers of 3,000 or 4,000. A party of Kohistanis had bivouacked on two lower hills—a continuation of these heights, and lying between the western wall of Sherpur and the Chardeh Valley. Standards were planted all along the line of hills, and the enemy seemed resolved to stand. Gen. Baker moved out by the postern gate to attack with four guns G-3 Royal Artillery, four guns Swinley's mountain battery, the 14th Bengal Lancers, 100 men of the 92nd Highlanders, 192 of the 72nd Highlanders, 460 Sepoys of the Guides, and 470 of the 6th Punjabis. The enemy were driven from the low hills by the Highlanders and Guides, the guns shelling the heights and making the Afghans congregate on the slopes above Deh-i-Afghanan. Two guns Field Artillery shelled them from just outside the Sherpur walls, while General Macpherson's mountain guns also opened fire. Under cover of this shelling our infantry advanced from the low hills; the Guides and Highlanders went up the Asmai hill, under a heavy fire, and captured point after point, until the crest was reached. A sungar towards the northern end was taken with a rush, while another sungar towards the southern end was obstinately defended by the Ghilzais. Lance-Corporal Seller, of the 72nd Highlanders, led the final assault, and after hand-to-hand fighting, all the Ghazis were killed, whose bodies were found afterwards in the sungar. As the enemy streamed down towards Cabul a wing of the 3rd Sikhs skirmished out firing over Deh-i-Afghanan at a long range. The enemy occupied that suburb, so Gen. Roberts gave orders to sack and destroy it. Two more F.A. guns shelled it; but the 3rd Sikhs suddenly required reinforcements from Gen. Baker. This was caused by 10,000 of the enemy attacking the low conical hill first captured, which was defended by 30 men of the 72nd Highlanders, a company of 5th Punjabis, and a small party of the Guides. The enemy had come from Indikee across the Chardeh Plain to the number of twenty or thirty thousand, and commenced to assault the position we had taken. Swinley's mountain battery was sent to the conical hill; but in spite of the fire the enemy streamed upwards until within 150 yards, volleys of musketry having failed to check them. Capt. Spens, of the 72nd Highlanders, with a handful of men, volunteered to attack the advanced party, but was cut to pieces, a company of the 5th Punjabis, sent up by Gen. Baker, as a reinforcement from our men, retiring in disorder. The Afghans in overwhelming numbers, led by Ghazis, swarmed from rock to rock."

77th Regiment will embark at Kingstown next week in H.M.S. Assistance, for conveyance to Dover. Capt. Jervis-White, who has been employed in the Intelligence Branch of the Quartermaster-General's office at Dublin, has returned to regimental duties.

80th Regiment. According to latest accounts by Conway Castle, this regiment was standing fast at Potchefstrom, awaiting the results of Sir G. Wolseley's mode of dealing with the Boer agitation. They were on their way for a dreary march of some 700 miles to Beaufort West, and on to Cape Town, and, considering the nature of the country, the time of year, and the expense, it is well their march is arrested, as it may afford the authorities time to think twice over the proposed march, which is no doubt intended as a politcal demonstration, not without an eye to Free State sympathisers. A correspondent writes from Pretoria on Dec. 26:—"The regiment paraded to-day at eleven o'clock for the inspection of his Excellency Sir G. Wolseley, K.C.M.G., K.C.B., previous to commencing their march for Cape Town, viâ Kimberley. The march before them is a most arduous one, and but little information is in the hands of the staff as to the road, the distances at which water may be found, and its capabilities for the supply of wood and other necessaries. The distance from Pretoria to Beaufort West is nearly 700 miles, and at this point they will take the train to Cape Town. Sending a regiment by this most unusual route is to be attributed more to political than economical reasons, and the 80th Regiment has been selected for this duty not only on account of their foreign service having expired, but because they have made so many and such difficult marches during the time they have been in the colony, that they may be safely trusted to make their way with all possible despatch over the desolate country which intervenes between Pretoria and Beaufort West, and to show that an English regiment can be put anywhere in the Colony their services may be required, and that difficulties of transport and bad roads are not obstacles to impede an Imperial policy. Sir Garnet and staff, accompanied by Colonel Harrison, R.E., C.B., and his staff, appeared punctually on the ground, and were recived by Colonel Tucker, C.B., commanding the 80th, in quarter-column, when the following order was read by Lieut.-Colonel Brackenbury, the Chief of the Staff:—'General Order by his Excellency General Sir G. J. Wolseley, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., commanding the Forces in South Africa:—The 80th Regiment will march to-day from Pretoria, by way of Potchefstorm and Kimberley, to Beaufort West, in the Cape Colony, and will thence proceed by rail to Cape Town, there to embark for England. The General Commanding cannot allow this regiment to enter upon its homeward march, without expressing his high sense of its soldier-like bearing and conduct. The 80th Regiment has served three years in South Africa, during which time it has taken part in the Zulu war and in two expeditions against Sekukuni, and has borne the fatigue of long marches over a great extent of country; yet, after this varied and trying service, its appearance and discipline would do credit to any regiment in her Majesty's Service. The General Commanding is well assured that in the march now before it, the 80th Regiment, under command of Lieut.-Col. Tucker, will show to the inhabitants of the Transvaal, Griqualand West, and the Cape Colony an example of what a British regiment should be, not only in marching-power, but in loyalty, discipline, and orderly conduct.—By order (signed), W. Brackenbury, Lieutenant-Colonel, Acting Chief of the Staff. Army Head-quarters, Pretoria, Dec. 26, 1879."—The reading of the order concluded, Sir Garnet Wolseley, alluding in general terms to its contents, added:—"Throughout the Sekukuni campaign, I had a small detachment of the regiment, under command of Sergeant Horton, as my personal escort. They took part in the storming of Sekukuni's stronghold, and their conduct during the period of their absence from head-quarters was an example of what a soldier's conduct should be. In all my service—and I have been a considerable time a soldier—a finer and a better-disciplined body of men I have never met; and I compliment you, Col. Tucker, and the officers of the regiment, upon having such a body of men belonging to your corps. In the early days of my connection with the Army, I had the honour of wearing the uniform of the 80th, and I look back to those days with great pleasure and great pride. And the men who I now see before me are fitting successors to those with whom I was first associated on active service. If I were asked to give a convincing proof that in my opinion the war in South Africa is at an end, I should point to the fact that I am dispensing with the services of such a regiment. If any danger were apprehended, the 80th would be the first corps whose services I should retain. I part from the regimentwith great regret, and in saying good-bye, I wish you a prosperous voyage and a safe arrival among your friends in England.' At the conclusion of his speech, Sir G. Wolseley cordially shook hands with Col. Tucker, and the regiment moved off their parade-ground, played out of Pretoria by the band of the 21st Fusiliers. As each company passed his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, they gave him hearty cheers, which were cordially acknowledged by Sir Garnet Wolseley, who was evidently pleased with this spontaneous tribute to his popularity as a General. A number of the inhabitants of the city accompanied the regiment for some distance on their march, and the officers of the 1st King's Dragoon Guards, at the first halting-place, hospitably provided a cart-load of refreshments for the officers, which, considering the heat of the day, appeared to be most acceptable."

84th Regiment is en route to Ireland from Dover, in H.M.S. Assistance, and will be landed at Kingstown and quartered at Dublin.

86th Regiment. The regiment left Chatham on the 30th ult. for Dover, there to be stationed until further orders. They were conveyed in two trains of the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company, and the arrangements made on this occasion were as perfect as could be wished,—a marked contrast to the move of the 2nd Batn. 5th Fusiliers last month. A strong picket of the Cameronians cleared, and kept clear, the space in front of the station, so that the disgraceful proceedings that marked the departure of the Fusiliers were, in this instance, conspicuous by their absence. The Royal County Downs are quartered in the South Front Barracks, Citadel, and Drop Redoubt. "I have," remarked an officer of rank, "witnessed the departure of many regiments from Chatham and elsewhere, but I must confess I never saw a move made in more perfect order than that of the 86th Regiment." It does seem hard, therefore, that a regiment, proverbial for leaving its barracks in apple-pie order, should have to take over quarters at other stations rather the reverse of that order. The regiment will, it is expected, remain at Dover till required for embarkation, which is likely to take place during 1881-2. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Brockman has proceeded on leave of absence till March 14.

88th Regiment. It is reported in India that Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Col. Dalrymple has been appointed to the staff of Lord Lytton. Capt. Bowen has joined the depôt at Galway.

90th Light Infantry. Lieut. A. S. Parkinson died at Fyzabad on the 6th inst., aged 21 years. The deceased entered the Clare Militia as a subaltern March 29, 1876; was gazetted 2nd lieut. in the 73rd Foot, April 10, 1878; and was promoted to a lieutenancy in the 90th, March 33, 1879.

91st Highlanders. By the last mail from Cape Town we learn that Col. Bruce and the officers of the regiment had given a ball there on Jan. 7, which was a great success. The fine rooms of the Masonic Hall were handsomely and appropriately decorated for the occasion, and the excellent band of the battalion, which has caused so much pleasure to the inhabitants by its weekly performances, played with unflagging spirit for the numerous dancers, who kept the floor till 4 o'clock in the morning. His Excellency Sir Bartle Frere was prevented from honouring the hall with his presence by a slight indisposition, but Lady Frere and the Misses Frere came in from the Vineyard to grace the festivity, the honours of which were charmingly done by Mrs. Bruce, the wife of the gallant officer in command of the regiment, and all the rank and fashion of Cape Town (except, perhaps, King Cetewayo, who was detained by circumstances over which he had no control), were present, military and civil. There was a supper of the best, a fine floor for dancing, plenty of, but not too many, "partners," many fair faces and pretty dresses, brilliant lighting, capital music, youth and good spirits, and overflowing hospitality. So the 91st ball at Cape Town must be marked with the whitest of chalk in the calendar of the colony and of the corps. No intimation has yet been received of the destination of the regiment.

93rd Highlanders. The colonelcy is vacant by the death of Gen. W. Munro, C.B., which occurred at Montys Court, near Taunton, on the 29th ult. The deceased General was the eldest son of the late Mr. W. Munro, of Druidstoke, Gloucestershire. He was born about the year 1816, and entered the Army as ensign in 1834. He was promoted to lieut. in 1836, to capt. 39th Regt. in 1844, and to major in 1852. He saw much active service in India, and was severely wounded at the battle of Maharajpore, for which he received the medal. He commanded the 39th Regt. in the Crimean campaign from the close of 1854, and was present at the siege and fall of Sebastopol; and he also commanded the supports of the 1st Brig. (3rd Division) at the attack on June 18, 1855. His subsequent commissions bore date respectively—lieut.-col., 1853; col., 1854; major-gen., 1868; lieut.-gen., 1873; and gen., 1878. In 1870 he was appointed to the command of the troops in the West Indies, and was appointed col. of the 93rd Highlanders in 1876. He was nominated a C.B. in 1857.

99th Regiment has arrived at Bermuda, in H.M.S. Himalaya, from the Cape, and relieved the 46th Regiment.

100th Regiment. Capt. Shirley has been noted at the Horse Guards for appointment as an adjt. in the Militia.

Medical Department. Surgs.-Major E. MacGrath, A. Moffatt, and C. Haines have been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate. The Bombay Gazette says:—"Under instructions from the Secretary of State, a number of changes have been made in the organisation of the medical administrative staff for the Army in India. From the 31st March both the British and the Indian Medical Departments will form one department for the medical administration of the Army in the three Presidencies. The establishment for the Bengal Army is to consist of one surgeon-general, Army Medical Department, one secretary to surgeon-general, Army Medical Department, and one secretary to surgeon-general, Indian Medical Department. These will be at head-quarters. The statistical duties for the Army, British and Native, will be performed by the statistical officer attached to the Sanitary Commission with the Government of India. Each of the eleven circles of medical superintendence will be held by a deputy-surgeon-general. For the Madras Army there will be at head-quarters one surgeon-general, Army Medical Department, and one secretary to surgeon-general, Indian Medical Department, each of the six circles of medical superintendence being held, as in the case of Bengal and Bombay, by a deputy-surgeon-general. For the Bombay as for the Madras Army there will be at head-quarters a surgeon-general, Army Medical Department, and a secretary to surgeon-general, Indian Medical Department. The four circles of medical superintendence will be distributed as follows, each being held by a deputy-surgeon-general:—Presidency district, Belgaum, and Aden, 1, I.M.D.; Poona Division, 1, A.M.D.; Northern Division and Mhow Division, 1, A.M.D.; Sind District, 1, I.M.D. With the exceptions of the deputy-surgeons-general of the Eastern Frontier District, the British Burmah Division, the Punjab Frontier Force, and the Sind District, all the above officers will be relieved from any civil administrative duties they may have hitherto performed. After making provision for the civil medical administration of the remaining provinces of British India, the establishment for which will be duly notified in the proper department, there will remain, below the rank of surgeon-general, in excess of the establishment to be maintained for all duties:—Army Medical Department: Two deputy-surgeons-general, three superintending surgeons-major, two secretaries to surgeons-major, one statistical officer to surgeon-general. Indian Medical Service: Six deputy-surgeons-general. Orders have been already issued by her Majesty's Government for the withdrawal of the surplus administrative officers of the Army Medical Department. With a view to provide for the retirement, on favourable terms, of the surplus officers of the Indian Medical Service, the Governor-General in Council offers to the surgeons-general and the deputy-surgeons-general of the three armies their retirement on the extra pension of their grade, with an honorary step of rank, notwithstanding that they may not have completed the qualifying service for these pensions. The number of retirements in each Army will be restricted to two. The option of retirement will be given in order of seniority, but applications to retire cannot be accepted after March 1." Surg.-Major Hector, whose trained bearers did so well at Sekukuni's in the action of Nov. 28, is a passenger by the Conway Castle from Cape Town. Surg. Major Johnston is in charge of the sick and wounded, for Pretoria. Sir J. Woolfryes was to remain some time longer at Pietermaritzburg; this not unlucky officer has been detained there by the duties of his department.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The consolidation of administrative battalions of Volunteers, in accordance with the recommendations of Lord Bury's Committee, is now being carried out, and it is understood will be continued till the change has been, as far as possible, completed. The administrative battalions in Great Britain are the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Aberdeen, 1st Argyll, 1st Ayr, 1st Banff, 1st Bedford, 1st Berwick, 1st Brecknock, 1st Cambridge, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th Cheshire, 1st Cinque Ports, 1st Clackmannan, 1st and 2nd Cornwall, 1st Cumberland, 1st Denbigh, 1st and 3rd Derby, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Devon, 1st Dorset, 1st Dumbarton, 1st Dumfries, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Durham, 1st Elgin, 1st and 2nd Essex, 1st Fife, 1st Flint, 1st Forfar, 1st Galloway, 1st and 2nd Glamorgan, 1st Gloucester, 1st Haddington, 1st, 2nd, and 4th Hants, 1st Hereford, 1st and 2nd Hertford, 1st Inverness, 1st Isle of Wight, 1st and 5th Kent, 1st Kincardine, 3rd Lanark, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 7th, 8th, and 9th Lancashire, 1st Leicester, 1st Lincoln, 1st Linlithgow, 2nd and 7th Middlesex, 1st Midlothian, 1st and 2nd Monmouth, 1st Norfolk, 1st Northampton, 1st Northumberland, 1st Notts, 1st Pembroke, 1st and 2nd Perth, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Renfrew, 1st Ross, 1st Roxburgh, 1st and 2nd Shropshire, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Somerset, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th Stafford, 1st Stirling, 1st and 2nd Suffolk, 1st, 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Surrey, 1st Sussex, 1st Sutherland, 1st Tower Hamlets, 1st Warwick, 1st Westmoreland, 1st and 2nd Wilts, 1st and 2nd Worcester, 1st Yorkshire (East Riding), 1st and 2nd Yorkshire (North Riding), and 1st, 2nd, 3rd, 4th, and 5th Yorkshire (West Riding). It is also proposed, as "far as circumstances will admit," that all the administrative brigades of Artillery, nearly 30 in number, shall be at once consolidated. The recent returns show that nine consolidated battalions are very weak, and in cases where it is not deemed likely that any change can be looked for, it has been notified that they will have to amalgamate. At the same time, it is satisfactory to learn that the promises of Col. Stanley, to the effect that every case should receive full consideration, are being carried out.

The reply of the Volunteers to the inquiry of the National Rifle Association anent the use of the Martini-Henry in all competitions previously restricted to the Snider is, what was anticipated it would be, a distinct affirmative. A strong memorial was some months since presented to the association by the South London Rifle Club, a body which may be said to represent the views of the shooting men of the Metropolis, and others having adopted the same view, the result was the letter addressed to the adjutants, and now the application by the association for such a number of Martini-Henrys which, with those already distributed to regiments in various parts of the kingdom, will bring the number up to 10,000. If this application is granted, it will be all the more necessary to sanction a general issue of the better weapon, for it will never do for the Volunteers to be armed with one and devote the principal attention to practice with the other. There is little chance, at any rate, of all the competitions being thrown open to the military small-bore at the next meeting at Wimbledon.

The question of the best position to be adopted with the rifle, both for fighting purposes and before the target, which has been discussed by correspondents in this and other journals, to the advantage of the "back," will, we understand, receive some practical tests in the ensuing season. We hear that some of the matches have been so arranged that the sides will compete, skirmishing, in full marching order.

Not long since there was an outcry among many of the Metropolitan volunteer regiments respecting the probable lack of accommodation at the ranges at the Scrubs, formerly leased to certain corps, but now acquired by the War Department. We are glad to learn that, so far from the privilege of shooting there being restricted, the erection of the new butts has enabled the department to admit a dozen or more Middlesex regiments without interfering with the practice of the Household troops, for whom, of course, it is also intended. Additional land is also to be acquired for its extension for drilling purposes. The preliminary arrangements for the effectual drainage of the Scrubs, which all who have known the place during the past year will recognise as an absolute necessity, are being adopted. It is estimated that the drainage alone will cost some thousands of pounds.

At the meeting of the Aldershot Local Board on Wednesday, a deputation was formed to wait upon the military authorities, the S.E. and S.W. Railway Companies, and the Volunteer Committee, with reference to the holding of the Volunteer Easter Monday review there, believing there is quite sufficient railway accommodation, and that the two companies jointly have the ability to convey 20,000 or 30,000 men on that day to this place, whether from London or the surrounding districts, which, together with the Regulars, could hold one of the grandest sham-fights ever witnessed.

The members and honorary members of the London Scottish Volunteers are about to present to Lord Elcho a testimonial, "as a memorial of their esteem and affection for their Lieut.-Colonel, now retired." It takes the form of a fac-simile of the well-known Elcho shield, in oxidized silver, and has been executed by Messrs. Elkington and Co., of Regent Street. The testimonial measures 6 feet by 3 feet 6 inches. The cost is about 150 guineas. The presentation will be made at a regimental dinner of the corps, at the Freemasons' Tavern, next month. It is now nineteen years since Lord Elcho presented the Elcho shield itself as a challenge prize, to be shot for by the English, Scottish, and Irish Eights, at Wimbledon.

40TH LANCASHIRE (3RD MANCHESTER) RIFLE VOLUNTEERS. The annual prize distribution took place in the Free-Trade Hall, Manchester, on the 30th ult. Lieut.-Col. the Earl of Ellesmere, and all the officers and members, were present, and there was a large gathering of friends and officers of the other Manchester regiments. The prizes were given away by Col. the Hon. Algernon Egerton, M.P. The Earl of Ellesmere, in a few introductory remarks, stated that Col. Egerton had come from London on purpose to be present on this occasion and to distribute the prizes, and that as an old commanding officer, and their honorary colonel, it was a great pleasure to see him amongst them once more. Col. Egerton said that he was proud to be still connected with the 40th Lancashire,—that he remembered, many years ago, when he had the honour to command the Manchester Brigade, of which the corps formed a part, at a review, being told by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge that it was the finest brigade on the ground. He had no doubt they still deserved their good reputation, and it must be their constant endeavour to maintain it. This could only be done by a strict and regular attendance at drill. He was sorry to find, from information given him by their excellent adjt., Capt. Darnell, 84th Regt., that there was a falling-off in the number of efficients; but he was well aware, as were all Lancashire men, what a period of depression in trade they had passed through, which had obliged many men to leave Manchester to seek work elsewhere. Col. Egerton then proceeded to distribute the prizes, shortly after which dancing commenced, and was kept up with great spirit till an early hour. This corps, which has hitherto been clothed in grey, is about to adopt the scarlet uniform.

10TH BENGAL CAVALRY. The regiment is returning to India from Afghanistan "to repair the wear and tear of the campaign, which has been very severe on the Cavalry arm."

12TH BENGAL CAVALRY are returning to India from Afghanistan.

14TH BENGAL CAVALRY are en route to India from Afghanistan.

13TH BENGAL N.I. On Dec. 13 a force, under Gen. Lytton, left the main camp at Chinaruck on special service towards Zawa; the 13th detachment, of 100 men, under Major Stevens and Capt. Meacham, forming part of it; it formed the rear-guard, with two companies 29th Punjab Infantry and some cavalry, the whole rear-guard under Major Stevens. It reached the village of Raga about 11 a.m. the same day, and caught up the main body, which was formed up under a hill on its right; the guns were then in action on the crest of this hill. The rear-guard was halted close to the main body, with the baggage of the whole force. After an hour's halt, orders were received by Major Stevens to proceed with the rear-guard and baggage by the bed of the river on its left; the remainder of the force moved on to attack the enemy on its right. On reaching Bagh, the rear-guard bivouacked there for the night, the force under Col. Gordon on the ridges it had gained above Bagh. The next day the centre column (the 13th forming part of it) advanced by the river-bed to attack Zawa, four and a half miles off, the right flank being protected by Col. Gordon's force. The 13th was the leading regiment of the main body of the centre column, under the immediate supervision of General Lytton, which made the direct attack, proceeding on a pathway in single file over the neck of a very steep hill into Zawa. On reaching the crest of this hill, the 13th, which was the first regiment ordered up to support the advanced guard of the column, were for some minutes under a very heavy fire; behind it was a company of the 29th Punjab Infantry, the remainder of the column being kept in reserve in the bed of the river. The fire was so hot that the advanced guard, being all in single file, there being no room for any other formation, was checked for ten minutes, and unable to move forward till the flank attack of the company 4th Punjab Infantry developed itself. During this, Lieut. and Adjt. Kenny and two privates were wounded, the former severely, the ball entering the forehead and going out at the eye. Dr. Biggar, of the 13th, moved up to attend to them, which he did under a heavy fire. The advanced guard of one company 85th King's L.I. and one company 4th P.I., together with the detachment of the 13th N.I., rushed into Zawa after the flank attack had been delivered. Major Stroms and Capt. Meacham formed up their men in the basin of Zawa, near the 85th, when they were told off by Col. Close to burn the villages in it, the 13th having two villages on the left. The guns made excellent practice, and added much to the success of the undertaking. The force had started at about 8 a.m., and returned to Bagh at 6 p.m., after capturing and destroying Zawa,—a very hard day's work. This broke the Zymookh power, for they believed this stronghold to be impregnable. Indeed, one officer who had been present at the Peiwar Kotal said that Zawa was a far more formidable position. The following is an extract from an order of Gen. Lytton, C.B., V.C.:—"Brigdr.-Gen. Lytton, C.B., V.C., desires to place on record his high appreciation of the conduct of the troops who took part in the operations of the 13th and 14th inst., resulting in the capture and destruction of the Zymookh stronghold of Zawa. The country over which the troops had to move was most difficult, and the heights to be crowned precipitous, notwithstanding which every movement was carried out as the Brigadier-General required, and with the greatest activity and dash," &c.

22ND BENGAL N.I. Capt. G. J. Hare, Bengal S.C., wing-officer, died at Gundamuk, of pneumonia, on the 5th ult., aged 33 years. He entered the Army, Sept. 9, 1864; became lieut., June 3, 1867; and capt., Sept. 9, 1876. He joined the Staff Corps from the 103rd Foot.

30TH BENGAL N.I. By latest accounts from India, the regiment had marched for Jellalabad.

31ST BENGAL N.I. Capt. E. W. Smyth has applied for leave to England, on medical certificate.

44TH BENGAL N.I. The Lahore Paper says:—"The plucky little Goorkhas of the 44th, though they must have been bitterly disappointed at being turned back after having started for the campaign in Afghanistan, have certainly not lost fame as a fighting regiment by the incident. The corps had no sooner returned to Assam than it was sent off in haste to its old battle-fields in the Naga Hills; and there, in several sharp engagements, it has well vindicated its well-won reputation. Its losses within a few days have been nearly as great as the entire loss of the forces in Afghanistan since the outbreak of September; and the storming of Konoma as a feat of arms is a more brilliant and exciting affair than the taking of Cabul. For the Nagas, naked savages as they are, have fought not only a great deal better than the Afghans, but really well and manfully. They not only know how to fortify their strongholds, but how to die in their defence. Their resistance was evidently most stubborn, and the skill and intrepidity of Col. Nuttall and his gallant regiment were met by a foe evidently worthy of them. In these days of inflated despatches and exaggerated engagements, the short and pithy record of a real fight, in our telegram of the 28th, stirs the spirit and recalls the traditions of earlier days in the history of the English in India. The success of the dashing assault on Konoma, though dearly purchased, cannot but have an excellent effect throughout the wild Naga hills; and while regretting the severe loss suffered, we heartily congratulate Col. Nuttall and the 44th on their achievement."

3RD SIKH INFANTRY. Jemadar Gunesa Sing has been admitted to the 3rd class of the Order of Merit, for conspicuous gallantry in leading his company up a steep hill under a very heavy fire from the enemy, and capturing with his own hands one of their standards at Camp Shuturgardan, on Oct. 2, 1879.

HYDERABAD CONTINGENT. The Bombay Gazette says:—"The 2nd Infantry, located at Ellichpur, in East Berar, have been ordered at once to proceed to the frontier. This regiment has the following officers:—Lieut.-Col. Conway Gordon, commandant; Capt. Proudfoot, second-in-command; Lieut. Whistler, adjt.; and Dr. Swaine. More officers are required for the regiment, which comprises about 812 men. One wing of the 6th Infantry, under command of Capt. Salmon, proceeds on Jan. 23 from Aurangabad to Ellichpur. The 3rd Cavalry (Col. Dowker) is expected to receive orders daily to move to the front. The 5th Infantry, now at Hingoli, is held in readiness to proceed to the front; one wing of the 4th Infantry from Jalna, under the command of Lieut.-Col. T. Way, will proceed to Hingoli. Col. Turton commands the 5th Infantry, and Major Sewell is second-in-command; Capt. Le Quesne, adjt."

12TH MADRAS N.I. Col. W. J. Vizard, commandant, has been granted leave to England for two years, on medical certificate.

36TH MADRAS N.I. Capt. J. Hotham, Madras General List, died at Bangalore on the 6th ult. The deceased, who was son of the late Rev. E. Hotham, rector of Crowcombe, Somerset, entered the Army, Aug. 21, 1860; became lieutenant, Aug. 15, 1862; brevet captain, Aug. 21, 1872; and captain, Sept. 18, 1873.

4TH BOMBAY N.I. (RIFLES), from Poona, sailed from Bombay for Kurrachee on the 9th ult., en route to Afghanistan.

5TH BOMBAY N.L.I. left Kurrachee for the front on the 14th ult.

9TH BOMBAY N.I. is ordered to proceed on service to Afghanistan, much to the satisfaction of all ranks.

10TH BOMBAY N.I. has been warned for service in Afghanistan.

16TH BOMBAY N.I. has been ordered to Afghanistan on active service. Lieut.-Col. A. H. Davis, Bombay Infantry, has been appointed officiating second-in-command during the leave of Major Trevor.

28TH BOMBAY N.I. proceeds on service to Afghanistan.

INDIA.

During the present year 90 officers of the Staff Corps and Cavalry and Infantry of the Indian Army will be permitted to retire from the Service, receiving, in addition to the pension to which they may be entitled by length of service under existing regulations, not exceeding the full-pay pension of a colonel (£456 5s. per annum), an annuity representing the estimated value of their prospective claim to the colonel's allowance, or its capitalised value, as they may prefer. The offer is restricted to substantive lieutenant-colonels, who shall have completed 28 years' service from the date of first commission, on or before the date from which they apply to retire, who may either, first, have been appointed to one of the Staff Corps on or before Sept. 12, 1866, and can claim the colonel's allowance under the provisions of G.G.O., No. 808, of Sept. 28, 1866; or, secondly, may be entitled, under G.O.G.G. of Sept. 12, 1862, to the colonel's allowance after 12 years' service in the rank of lieutenant-colonel. The number allowed to retire under these conditions will be distributed as follows:—For Bombay 20, Bengal 40, and Madras 30. In the event of the whole of the retirements allotted to a particular Presidency not being taken up in that Presidency, those remaining will be distributed in such manner as may be determined by the Government of India. Officers wishing to retire under the terms of this order must, whether in or out of India, submit their applications to the office of the adjutant-general of their respective Presidencies, naming such prospective dates for their retirements as will admit of the receipt of their applications by the adjutant-general on or before the date named, such date not to be earlier than April 1, 1880. Officers retiring under these arrangements will forego both the good-service pension, if they are in receipt thereof, and all claim to bonus compensation under the terms of the despatch of Aug. 8, 1866, No. 160. Applicants to retire will find full information in the Gazette of India of Jan. 10, together with a table showing the rates at which the expectation of the colonel's allowance will be calculated in carrying the order into effect in the case of officers of various ages and service.

The following further orders have been issued from Army head-quarters:—"The 81st Foot to Ferozepore, to relieve 1-18th, which will push up to Peshawur, railing to Jhelum; the Deoli Irregular Infantry to relieve 41st Native Infantry at Morar; 5th Infantry Hyderabad Contingent to relieve the 16th Native Infantry at Jhansi and Lalutpore, should it be necessary to detach a company to the latter station; two companies 1-17th Foot at Attock to be relieved by two companies 4th Batn. Col. H. S. Rammell and Lieut.-Col. H. E. Mottet, Madras S.C., are about to retire, the former on a pension of £456 5s., and £5,467, capitalised value of special annuity; the latter on a pension of £292, and extra annuity of £229 8s.

A relative of Gen. Roberts having telegraphed to Cabul a statement of the charges which were being made against him in this country of executing prisoners of war, has received the following reply by telegraph, dated Cabul, Thursday:—"No one executed unless convicted of attack on Residency. No soldier shot for fighting against us. Full explanation submitted to Government, which I am confident will be considered satisfactory."

The retirement of no less than seven Bengal Lieutenant-Colonels, three of whom, however, have been employed in the D.P.W., is announced, namely,—Lieut.-Cols. W. P. McGrigor, cantonment magistrate, Benares; A. G. Forsyth, E. B. Clay, C. P. Hunter, E. L. Earle, E. J. L. Twynam, and A. E. Downing.

THE VETERINARY DEPARTMENT AND THE ZULU CAMPAIGN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I notice that the heads of the Ordnance Store and Pay Departments have been very properly recognised for their services in Zululand. But what about the Veterinary officers? It was my good-fortune to make the acquaintance of two veterinary-surgeons during the late campaign, where I did duty with my regiment, and as a combatant officer of 15 years' standing, I am glad to be able to bear testimony to the devotion which both these gentlemen—and they were gentlemen in every sense of the word—showed. I am one of those who like to see justice done all round, and I am in hopes you will allow me to express my firm conviction that the slight which has just been passed upon the officers of the Veterinary Department is due to official jealousy, and not to any shortcomings on the part of those who carried out the duties of the Veterinary Department in the late operations. I enclose my card, and am, &c.,

A LINE MAJOR, AND A BELIEVER IN JUSTICE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As a feeling prevails that the indignity which the Veterinary Department has lately been made to suffer, in not having received the slightest recognition for its services in the Zulu campaign, is due to influence having been brought to bear at head-quarters by the members of the Army Medical Department, allow me as a medical officer of over 20 years' experience, to state that no feeling of antagonism exists between the Army Medical and Veterinary Departments. On the contrary, I have heard several members of my department express themselves surprised on many occasions that the War Office should take such a false view as to expect the Veterinary service to be raised in the estimation of the Army and the public, whilst it goes out of its way to heap indignities upon it whenever the opportunity offers for it to do so. I have made during my service many friends among the Veterinary officers of the Army, and I must say, in justice to them, that I always found them most zealous in the discharge of their duties, and sensible of their position as officers of her Majesty's Army, and I believe that, far from wishing a sister department any ill, the majority of the members of the Army Medical Department will be agreed in thinking that the War Office has behaved very shabbily in not having recognised the recent services of the head of the Veterinary Department in Zululand, when every other department—even the Army Hospital Corps—has been in some way rewarded. My own idea is that it is an oversight. If so, it will doubtless be immediately rectified, as it ought to be. I write this letter with a double object in view, viz., to remove any erroneous impressions as to jealousy existing between two branches of H.M.'s Army, and to do a kind turn for a department the officers of which I have always found most ready and willing to do a kind service for those with whom they have been thrown in contact.—I am, &c.,

SURGEON-MAJOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—A feeling exists among Veterinary officers here that their department has been unfairly treated, in not having received the slightest reward for the Zulu campaign, when even the Army Hospital Corps—a much more subordinate department, if indeed it is a department at all—has been recognised by two lieutenants of orderlies being created honorary captains. This disappointment of the "Vets."—perhaps, taking them all round, the most popular men in the Army—is but natural, but I cannot help thinking myself that the omission of Mr. Gudgin, who happens to be a personal friend of mine, and who I know would not do anything to bring discredit upon his Department, will prove very much more damaging to the heads of the Army than to the Veterinary Department itself. When men find that a body of officers are made to suffer an uncalled-for indignity of this kind, it has the effect of obtaining for them universal sympathy, and the "Vets." are now having all sorts of good—and no bad—things said about them. Those who have inflicted the injustice upon them are, however, referred to in anything but flattering language, for the ignoring of a department in this manner is carrying snobbishness to its very utmost limit, and snobbishness is a thing which in the Army, I am glad to say, is rarely tolerated.—I am, &c.,

Aldershot, Feb. 2, 1880. A LINE FIELD-OFFICER.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I do not feel justified in entering into a controversy in the public Press while the Committee has the whole question of Machine Guns under their consideration, but I must ask you to be good enough to correct, in your next issue, the statement in your leading article of Jan. 31 that I am sanguine to be able to remedy a supposed want of accuracy, because I must demur altogether to your statement that I admit a supposed inferiority of accuracy in my guns. You, further, give the rapidity of fire of my "five-barrelled" gun, which you call "ten-barrelled;" and you omit altogether to mention the "Gardner" gun and "my small gun,"—four guns having competed, and not two, as stated by you.—I am, &c.,

ISANDLWANA WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The question of your correspondent, "A Sympathiser," in your paper of Jan. 24, are most natural, and as there is perhaps no one who knows more of the circumstances of every individual case better than myself, I would venture shortly to answer them. Irrespective of the funds subscribed, it is, I think, generally admitted that the Government have liberally treated the widows of the officers. There are, of course, hard cases, such as those to which you have lately drawn attention, but regulations are not made to be lightly put on one side, and precedents are always dangerous; at the same time, none would rejoice more than myself in seeing an exception made in the case of these ladies. Your correspondent has alluded to the case of the Quartermasters—only one of whom, not two, as he supposes, has left a widow, and I would exemplify in her position that of the officers' widows generally.

From the Government:—
Pension for life	£46 per annum.
And for each child until it attains the age of 21 years	11 ”
Gratuity—viz., one year's pay, and one-third of a year for three children	298.
From the funds subscribed:—
Pension for life	£30 per annum.
And for each child until it attains the age of 18 years	7 ”
Gratuity	150.

Or, in other words (calculating the gratuities of £448, which, if safely invested, ought to produce, at the lowest estimate, £15 per annum) an income of £91 per annum for life and £18 per annum for each child, until it attains the average age of, say, 19 years. The pension, &c., "from the Government" for the other officers' widows would be proportionally larger. But that "from the funds subscribed" would be the same as here stated in all cases, the latter having been awarded irrespective of rank. Respecting the widows of the non-commissioned officers and men, neither have they, I think, any cause of complaint,—well-clothed, cared for, and receiving the utmost sympathy from all in the colony, they landed in this country with sums varying from £15 to £45 in their pockets, subscribed by the colonists, welcomed back on their sad return home with the same kindness and indulgence from all. Those whose lot it was to be in this country when the terrible news arrived, were, to my knowledge, equally well provided for, the motto of the Committee, of which I had the gratification of being a member, being in all its actions that of "bis dat qui cito dat." All, including those who returned home and those who remained in the colony, irrespective of the rank of their deceased husbands, have now been provided for at the rate of 3s. 6d. per week, and an additional 1s. per week for each child. I would also add that the Military Committee, previous to handing the funds over to the Patriotic Commissioners, provided for every child whose mother would permit their being placed in one of our several excellent institutions. I fear to trespass more on your valuable space, but any further information at my disposal will be gladly given to any who may desire it.—I am, &c.,

In the interest of the Argentine Government, which lays claim to a portion of the coasts of Patagonia and Terra del Fuego, a scientific expedition has, says the Standard, been dispatched to those coasts from Buenos Ayres, and will probably be employed on this exploration for about 18 months. The scientific staff on board the exploring ship consists of a hydrographer, a naturalist, an agricultural engineer, a photographer, and many assistants in these and other branches. After exploring the coast, the expedition will proceed up the Santa Cruz River as far as the Argentine, San Martin, and Viedma lakes, to prospect the large coal-fields which are known to exist in those regions.

We take the following extract from a private letter from a gentleman who has recently returned from the seat of war in South America, and is thoroughly acquainted with the condition of affairs there:—"The Peruvians are like all other dagoes, really too brave! The Huascar affair has been grossly misrepresented. The ship was surprised and embayed. The captain attempted to run her ashore, but was intercepted by the Cochrane and knocked into a cocked hat in about 20 minutes. There were 34 killed and drowned, 20 of whom were negroes who jumped overboard at the first shot.—Panama Star.

TIC-SANO is the ORIGINAL SPECIFIC for the above complaints; it has been tried and approved of by the Medical Profession, and has been spoken favourably of by the Public Press.

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879:—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

TIC-SANO purifies the blood, strengthens the system, and so wards off one-half the diseases the flesh is heir to.

THE "CARMICHAEL"
PORTABLE BOOT-TREE.

A want long felt has just been supplied by this most important invention. All sportsmen and military men know the great advantage of having both their long and short boots treed up every day, especially after they have been wet, but there is often great inconvenience in carrying about the boot-trees.

An officer in the 5th Lancers has lately hit upon the idea that an India-rubber tree, which, with ease, can be carried in the pocket, can, when put inside the boot, be inflated, filling out the boot tightly, and so making it an impossibility to shrink.

For officers on active service, autumn manœuvres, or whenever it is impossible to carry wooden trees, this invention will be invaluable.

This invention is patented for Great Britain and other countries.

Army and Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1880.

THERE would undoubtedly be an immense gazette next week, if permission were given to officers to promote themselves if they considered they merited that distinction. We are, consequently, always prepared, whenever promotions are made, to hear that some most deserving officers have been passed over to make room for others who have friends with sufficient interest to bring forward the claims of the lucky ones.

But though some may growl needlessly, still, when a commander goes over the heads of a hundred seniors, it is quite safe to stake one's "bottom dollar" that some very deserving and excellent officers have been passed over to give way to the favoured one. Selection in promotion is a necessity, and as long as it is exercised in the choice of the fittest, there is little need to complain because some, who may have lost time as youngsters or have entered the Service rather late, are passed over for others who have a chance of reaching the highest grades and avoiding being compulsorily retired on account of age. Taking the promotions of this week, we find Commander Henry Harvey Boys, seniority of April 4, 1870, promoted out of the command of the Pelican, which he has held since November, 1877. He passes over the heads of very few who are ever likely to reach the Captains' List, being himself quite a senior commander, having entered the Service in 1852, and being now rather more than 40 years of age. Commander Henry Salmond's seniority as commander was October 22, 1870, and he has now been promoted from the command of the Midge, which he has held since September, 1875. He entered the Service in 1852, but was a little late in obtaining his lieutenant's commission, and, although he was promoted over seventy lieutenants, and now passes over forty-seven commanders, he has, unfortunately, seen the fortieth anniversary of his birth. Commander Wharton, seniority of March 2, 1872, is in command of the surveying vessel Fawn, where he has been employed since May, 1876. Fortune has favoured this officer, being one of the last who obtained flag promotion, then passing over 212 lieutenants. His being again selected for advancement over his seniors, to the number of sixty-three, places him at a great advantage in comparison with the two officers whom we have named above, for he reaches the Captains' List at the age of 37. Commander John Fellowes, seniority of September 18, 1873, is even more fortunate, for without the aids of a Beaufort Testimonial and flag promotion, such as were enjoyed by Captain Wharton, he has reached the Captains' List a little junior in age to the officers promoted with him. He passed over ninety-five lieutenants when made a commander, and has now gone over the same number of commanders. Some of that number very naturally feel that they had claims which might have been recognised, and that No. 92 on the List might have waited alittle longer, without seriously injuring his future prospects. The selections from the Lieutenants' List are marked by much the same features, the numbers ranging from 26 to 77. First among the selected stood Lieutenant Churchill, No. 26, seniority September 18, 1865, in command of the Merlin. He has seen plenty of service, which narrowly escaped being recognised. He has never been given promotion out of the ordinary groove, and now reaches the Commanders' List at an age when he should be a captain, if he were to have a chance of going through the Service and reaching the Active Flag List. Lieutenant Charles Hicks, No. 45, seniority of June 28, 1866, serving as a senior lieutenant of the Penelope since May last, has gone through the Service without leaving many ex-seniors behind him, but reaches the Commanders' List at an age of less than 35 years. Lieutenant Greenhow, No. 58, seniority of September 11, 1866, is promoted from half-pay, and becomes a commander at the age of less than 36. Lieutenant Albert Ducat, No. 77, seniority of March 7, 1867, is promoted out of the Bellerophon, of which he is senior lieutenant, and has been serving since August, 1876, with Admirals Sir Cooper Key and Sir Edward Inglefield. That he has shown himself an able and zealous officer, there is no reason to doubt, and it is his good fortune that these qualities have been displayed before those who are capable of lending a helping hand, and can do something more than give a strong recommendation to the Board. Commander Ducat is not yet much past 34 years of age, and is to be congratulated in reaching his Commanders' List thus comparatively early.

The military establishments which are proposed for the Transvaal and the Cape for the ensuing year are one regiment of cavalry, two batteries of artillery, two companies Royal Engineers, and five battalions of infantry, with the ordinary medical, commissariat, and train establishments in proportion. The cost will be nearly £500,000 per annum, without including transport, &c. One regiment of cavalry, one battery, and three battalions of infantry are intended for the Transvaal exclusively.

Major-General F. Marshall, C.M.G., was offered, but refused, the Belfast command.

Captain and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. A. Gordon, 65th Regiment, who served with considerable distinction during the earlier phases of the Ashantee campaign, and who was employed on the Staff of the Afghan expedition last winter as a brigade-major, has been selected for the command of the native force for service in Cyprus.

The services of Lieutenant C. A. Hadfield, 98th Regiment, have been applied for to the Foreign Office, by Major-General Biddulph, C.B., to aid in raising and disciplining the native force for service in Cyprus.

A rumour reaches us to the effect that the Government has decided on occupying the whole of Afghanistan; and that, as soon as the troops now on their way from Bombay reach Candahar, a move will be made on Herat. It is also asserted that Afghanistan will be divided into several principalities, that of Herat being conferred on Wali Mahommed, and the others on Indian chieftains whose past loyalty to the Crown, has entitled them to some substantial reward and distinguished mark of honour being conferred upon them by the Empress they have so well served. This mode of settling the Afghan question would be one likely to ensure peace to that country, while converting it into an effectual barrier against future Russian intrigue or aggression in India. The great recommendation of this line of policy in the eyes of economists will be that it will be a way out of the difficulty which, while costing England nothing, will confer great advantages upon this country, by opening up a whole new country to the trade and enterprise of our merchants and manufacturers.

Letters from the Cape describe the feelings which prevail in official circles respecting the pilgrimage of the Empress Eugénie to border on consternation. Nothing that can be done to render her sad journey less trying than nature has made it will be spared, but the country, the conditions of life, the climate, and the distance, are all, in their combination, certain to cause inconvenience and strain which may be severely felt.

By last accounts, Sir Garnet Wolseley had gone to Natal, but was returning to Pretoria this month, so that his stay in South Africa is likely to be far more protracted than he anticipated,—or perhaps relishes. It will be necessary to have the master of the situation at hand, when the Boers reassemble to carry out their programme, in April.

What a pity that Sir John Adye cannot be converted into a piece of muzzle-loading ordnance! We mean, of course, post-mortem. Even in that state, his bones would rise like those in the valley of the prophet, were it proposed to make him into a breech-loader. There never was such an obstinate piece of metal as that excellent officer is made of, and he will descend, many years hence, we hope, when a muzzle-loader will be regarded with as much curiosity as a Brown Bess or a wheel matchlock, murmuring, "The hardest-hitting, flattest trajectoried, most armourest-piercing lightest-charged, straightest-shooting, least-weighing, most concentrating, most scattering, safest, and destructivest gun in the world, is our smallest muzzle-loading gun. God save the Queen!" But it must have tried even his tough sides when the Naval people opened fire on him,—"Et tu, Brute!"—you, for whom all the sacrifice of the breech-loader was made.

If "the breaking-up of the military organisation on which 'Cetewayo's' dynasty was based, has relieved 'the Queen's' possessions in that part of the world from a danger which has seriously impeded their advancement and consolidation," we may expect these admirable things will now advance rapidly. But how is it that so many troops are needed there? In fact, Cetewayo's dynasty was not based on any military organisation at all. His ancestor, Chaka, created or developed the Zulu military system, and Cetewayo only added two regiments to the force which existed when he was made King by his people.

There has been some misunderstanding, we believe, in India on a matter which will very probably be made the subject of further official regulation. The consequence of the misunderstanding has been that officers on full pay have been allowed to act as newspaper correspondents; not only that, but Staff officers have been almost officially detailed as newspaper correspondents; nay, more officers on the staff of the highest personages have received the sanction of the authorities in their engagements as correspondents, contrary to the Queen's Regulations. The latter should be respected, or they should be rescinded.

An official inquiry has been ordered by the Horse Guards into the statements made by the special correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, in a letter published on November 21, 1879, respecting the bad conduct of some small parties of men belonging to a few regiments at stations in the Transvaal; but the inquiry was, it would seem, being carried on by Major-General Clifford at Pietermaritzburg, in Natal, which is a long way from the scenes of most of the reported misconduct. The statements in question were very clear and positive; but there was nothing more clear and positive in the letter which contained them than the restriction of the charges of misbehaviour to a few men in some corps, and the object of the statement was to strengthen the hands of the military authorities in dealing with criminals who are, by express legislation, exempted from corporal punishment.

Last week we called attention to the fact that, in defiance of the Royal Warrant which renders retirement from the Army Medical Department compulsory at sixty years of age, Surgeon-General Innes, Principal Medical Officer in India, had been granted an extension of his appointment. We have reason to believe that the following is the real state of the case. Some months ago, the Army Medical Department at Whitehall recommended a successor to Surgeon-General Innes, on the ground that he was close on the completion of his sixtieth year. The Indian Government, however, requested that Mr. Innes should be retained in India until the termination of the war in Afghanistan; and the War Office decided that the request should be granted. It is, therefore, the Indian Government and the War Office, not the Director-General, who are responsible for the violation of the Royal Warrant.

The average cost of "conscripting" 1,000 recruits in Russia is estimated to slightly exceed 10,000 roubles. As the number to be drawn for this year is fixed at 218,000, the total cost will be over two million roubles, or not far short of £275,000 sterling. This immense sum falls entirely upon the provincial rates of Russia.

On a single page, folded like a map, Colonel Brine, R.E., has given life-size illustrations of all the ribbons of decorations and medals worn by British subjects. The date of the grant of the medal, and the institution or extension of each medal or decoration, is attached. Great credit is due to Colonel Brine for his accuracy and research, and Mr. Stanford is to be congratulated on the manner in which he has performed his share of the work. The price of this little publication is only one shilling.

The command of the Perth Brigade Depôt is about to fall vacant, Colonel P. Robertson-Ross having completed five years' service in that appointment on the 3rd inst. No further vacancy is likely to be created until July 1 next, when Colonel F. E. Drewe, of the Exeter Brigade, completes his term.

The Veterinary Journal for the current month has an interesting and most instructive article on poisonous plants in Zululand and Afghanistan. Our losses from these have been serious, and we quite agree with the writer of the article in question, that Army Veterinary Surgeons ought to devote more attention to the study of botany than they do at present. It is strange that this obvious fact has been hitherto somewhat overlooked, for we are continually at war in some uncivilised, little-known district, where the food of the horses and mules which we take with us must be mainly obtained on the spot.

It would appear, from the evidence taken before the Militia Committee, that the Militia rifle regiments which are unopposed to the change to red are the Denbigh, Merioneth and Flint, Highland, Carlow, King's County, and South Mayo. It is reasonable, therefore, to suppose that the delay in their transformation must rest with the authorities in Pall Mall.

In noticing the over-officering in the upper ranks of the Royal Regiment of Artillery in our impression last week, we were, through a verbal error, made to say there were not two service batteries of Horse Artillery at Aldershot, and not one of field artillery at Sheffield, though there were two lieutenant-colonels at each of these stations. The mistake was obvious; the word not should have been read but.

It is to be hoped that if the present system of linked battalions and brigade depots is to be maintained, some attempt will at last be made to assimilate the uniforms of the Line and Militia regiments forming each brigade depot, in accordance with the recommendations of the Militia Committee of 1876, of which the present Secretary of State for War was chairman. It is impossible to describe the inconvenience, cost, and delay occasioned at the present time by transfers of men from one regiment to another, when, as is the case at numbers of these depots, the two Line battalions and often both Militia battalions have each distinctive clothing. The officers of the Militia rifle regiments are mainly responsible for their non-conversion into red-coats, but it seems strange that individual interests should be suffered in this, as in other cases, to outweigh the welfare of the country, and retard a reform recommended by the highest authorities.

Lord Strathnairn has, it is said, taken the subject of the Kirwee Booty seriously in hand, and intends pressing the Government during the coming session of Parliament to render the accounts so obstinately and unjustly refused up to the present time.

ALBATROSS, Com. Arnold J. Errington, arrived at Bombay on Jan. 24, and left on the 25th for Singapore.

ASSISTANCE, Capt. C. E. Buckle, has proceeded to Kingstown with troops for Gravesend.

AUDACIOUS, Capt H. B. Woollcombe. It is not often that any port can be found which objects to the presence of a man-of-war, but the Hampshire Telegraph hears that Hull looks upon the Audacious as a doubtful benefit. The officers, the men, and their money the inhabitants of Hull are very pleased to have, but the seafaring community complain that the Audacious interferes with the navigation of the Humber.

BELLEROPHON, Capt. D'Arcy Irvine, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Inglefield, arrived at Spithead on Saturday from the North-American and West Indies station, where she has been relieved by the Northampton. She was last commissioned at Halifax, in Sept., 1876, and will have to undergo an extensive overhaul before being available for further service. She left Portland with the flag of Admiral Wellesley, in Nov. 1873, and was recommissioned at Halifax on Oct. 28, 1876. She will be dismantled and paid off into the fourth division of the Steam Reserve. She came into harbour on Monday, and at sunset Vice-Admiral Inglefield struck his flag. The Hampshire Telegraph asks:—"What could the Bellerophon have been thinking about to come into harbour with her ammunition on board? Surely a flagship, of all others, should have known the Regulations of the Service better than that. She even forgot to pay Admiral Ryder the compliment to ask permission to come into harbour, but came in of her own account, and was very properly ordered out again."

BLACK PRINCE was surveyed a short time ago with a view to modernisation, but was found unsuitable in consequence of insufficient height between deck to work heavier guns than she is now armed with. A subsequent examination having proved her unadapted for transformation to a fighting trooper,—a class of vessel that it is proposed to materially increase,—she will lay up in the harbour.—Western Daily Mercury.

ECLIPSE, Capt. Rising, which left Sheerness on Monday for the East Indies station, called at Plymouth to embark supernumeraries. She was inspected on Saturday morning by Vice-Admiral Sir R. J. Macdonald, K.C.S.I., Commander-in-Chief at the Nore, prior to leaving for her station. A very close examination was made, and at the conclusion Admiral Macdonald complimented Capt. Rising on the efficiency of his crew and the general condition of the ship.

EURYALUS, Capt. R. D. King, which left Bombay on Dec. 13 for Malta, Rear-Admiral Gore-Jones, C.B., having temporarily transferred his flag to the Ruby, arrived at Malta on Feb. 1.

FLIRT is to be commissioned at Devonport on the 10th prox. by Com. Brackenbury, C.M.G., for service on the West Coast of Africa, with a complement of seventy-five officers and men. Her arrival will probably be the signal for the Decoy to make a move to the West Indies or South-East coast of America, as she will have completed eighteen months on the coast in March next. Only one officer has left her, Lieut. Henry Baker, who was recently promoted from the bottom of the list of sub-lieutenants of 1876.—Hampshire Telegraph.

FLYING FISH. An order has been received at Chatham directing the Flying Fish to be sent to Sheerness, to be brought forward for commission in China on surveying service.

HIMALAYA, Capt. H. Brent, on her passage from Gibraltar to Granton, will call in at Portsmouth to land invalids, time-expired men, and others given a passage, and will then proceed on the completion of her duty, finishing with the landing of the 50th Regt. at Harwich.—Hampshire Telegraph.

INCONSTANT, Capt. Lord Walter Kerr, was commissioned on Thursday at Portsmouth as flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour.

IRIS. A clever invention which has been completed by Mr. Dore, engineer, of H.M.S. Iris, has been ordered by the Admiralty to be submitted to a practical test. Mr. Dore was formerly a member of the School of Naval Architects and Marine Engineering, and he has improved upon the present plan of closing vertical watertight doors in vessels, rapidity of action being, of course, the end in view. Such doors are, under existing arrangements in the Navy, raised and lowered by means of a large Whitworth screw, and Mr. Dore's invention is intended to supplement rather than to supersede this screw. The raising of a watertight door will be accomplished by the present fitting, but to secure greater rapidity in the closing of such door a smaller screw will be used, with a thread having a very acute pitch, the weight of the door being, by an ingenious contrivance, taken off the larger and transferred to the smaller screw, with the result that the door will, by reason of its own weight, quickly descend into the closed position. It remains to be determined whether the invention shall be tried on board the Sultan or one of the ships now in course of construction.—Portsmouth Times.

LONDON, Capt. Earle. Notice is given that the distribution of the tonnage-bounty awarded for the slave-dhow Rehema, captured on Nov. 10, 1878, by the London, commenced on Friday, the 6th inst., in the prize branch of the Department of the Accountant-General of the Navy. The following are the shares due to an individual in the several classes:—Flag, £23 9s. 3d.; captain, £68 0s. 11d.; second class, £11 5s. 7d.; third class, £9 13s. 5d.; fourth class, £6 8s. 11d.; fifth class, £3 17s. 4d.; sixth class, £3 4s. 6d.; seventh class, £2 5s. 3d.; eighth class, £1 5s. 9d.; ninth class, 12s. 10d.; tenth class, 6s. 5d. The distribution of the tonnage-bounty, awarded for two slave-dhows, names unknown, captured on Nov. 24 and 25, 1878, by the London, commenced at the same time and place. The following are the shares due to an individual in the several classes:—Flag, £46 18s. 6d.; captain, £136 1s. 9d.; second class, £22 11s. 7d.; third class, £19 7s.; fourth class, £12 18s. 1d.; fifth class, £7 14s. 10d.; sixth class, £6 9s.; seventh class, £4 10s. 5d.; eighth class, £2 11s. 7d.; ninth class, £1 5s. 9d.; tenth class, 12s. 10d.

MALLARD, Lieut.-Com. Lang, from the South-East coast of America, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Monday. She was commissioned at Devonport in March, 1876. She has gone into harbour to prepare for paying off.

MINOTAUR, Capt. H. Rawson, flagship of Rear-Admiral Hood, left Lisbon on the 29th ult., and will cruise until the 10th inst., when she will arrive at Vigo. The Salamis will await at Lisbon the mail of the 9th from Southampton, and will then join the squadron at Vigo.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Capt. H. R. Wratislaw, left Lisbon on Jan. 29, and will be at Vigo on Feb. 10.

ORWELL, Lieut.-Com. F. Rendell. On Saturday night a boat's crew belonging to the Orwell, stationed at Monkstown for the protection of the Lee salmon fisheries during the close season, fell in with three boats, near Carrigaloe, having a salmon-net in their possession, which they were using. This was seized, one of the men in the boat admitting the ownership. But its captors were not allowed to bear it off, for the poachers rallied and attacked them, some landing and arming themselves with stones, whilst the others, who remained in the boats, assailed them with the oars and stretchers. To save their lives, as they were unarmed, and only six in number, the Orwell's crew were forced to yield up their prize. Two arrests have been made.

OSBORNE, Com. Lord Charles Beresford, M.P., has been taken in hand by the Portsmouth Dockyard officials for the purpose of undergoing her annual refit, and is ordered to be completed by the middle of March.

PELICAN, Capt. H. Boys. Machinery, and the difficulties of those in charge thereof, are (writes a Callao correspondent) still to the fore. Stokers Crawley, Frost, and Willman were scalded to death by the furnace of one of the boilers caving in. Artificer Eves has been tried by court-martial, he being on watch at the time, 8 a.m., and has been dismissed his ship, reprimanded, and deprived of a good-conduct badge. This badge did not, however, carry any pay with it. The captain of the Pelican had a very narrow escape, having visited and left the engine-room about five minutes before the accident. The Pelican in her short commission has already invalided two chief engineers, and Engineer Barker, who was in charge, had, owing to being short-handed, been on watch from 6 p.m. of the day before until 4 p.m. of the day of the accident. The Pelican has been repaired by a firm at Callao.

PENGUIN, Com. A. Paget, sailed for Acapulco, Mexico, on Jan. 5. Some trouble in the political world in Mexico where such troubles are chronic, demands the presence of a man-of-war for the protection of foreign interests.—Panama Star.

RALEIGH, Capt. C. T. Jago, having had her defects made good, was to move into Plymouth Sound yesterday to embark her stores and ammunition, and take on board men from the Wye, and leave for Australia on Thursday, the 12th inst.

RIFLEMAN, Com. J. Ingles, has arrived at Suez, en route for England, to pay off.

RUBY, Com. R. H. M. Molyneux, remains at Bombay, flying the flag of the Commander-in-Chief.

SIRIUS, Capt. G. L. Sulivan, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Tuesday morning from the North-American station. She was commissioned at Devonport on Sept. 6, 1875, and left England on Oct. 25 in the same year, and will now be paid off.

ST. VINCENT, Com. R. F. Britten. A fire broke out last week in the commander's cabin of this ship, the stove having become overheated, and the carpet and floor being ignited. The fire was discovered as it was making its way into the wardroom mess below, and extinguished when only a little damage had been done.

TÉMÉRAIRE, Capt. J. O. Hopkins, arrived at Malta on Feb. 1 with the Euryalus.

TYNE, Com. J. E. Stokes, arrived at Singapore on Monday last, Feb. 2.

VICTORIA AND ALBERT, Capt. Thomson, will shortly be docked at Portsmouth for overhaul. The large expenditure which was proposed to be incurred in renovating defective portions of her hull has been postponed for a year.

WIVERN, Com. J. G. Jones, has been inspected in Plymouth Sound by Admiral the Hon. C. G. J. B. Elliot, C.B., Commander-in-Chief, before proceeding to Portsmouth, to take on board torpedo gear. The Wivern will call at Devonport on her way down Channel, before finally leaving for Hong Kong.

IMPROVEMENT OF THE NAVAL MEDICAL SERVICE.

The following is a draft of the scheme issued by Mr. Ernest Hart, chairman of the Parliamentary Bills Committee, British Medical Association, for the improvement of the Naval Medical Service, which has been prepared for submission to the First Lord of the Admiralty:—

1. Naval Candidates at Netley.—Pay to be equalised to that of candidates for the Army.

2. Surgeons.—Promotion to staff surgeon not to be later than 12 years from entry into the Service. No qualifying examination to be required for staff surgeon's rank. Pay to be not less than, but in advance of, new Army scale.

3. Fleet-Surgeons.—To attain that rank, 17 years from entry into the Service to be sufficient, instead of 20 years' service on full pay, as heretofore. Pay and half-pay to be not less than, but in advance of, new Army scale. Retirement on 20s. a day after 20 years from entry into the Service, and at the other epochs as laid down in the new Army scale, and at the same rates of retiring pay as therein laid down. All compulsory half-pay time to count. Fleet-surgeons' list to be divided into two categories. The senior 40 to have not less than, but in advance of, the pay, half-pay, and retired pay of brigade-surgeons. The remaining fleet-surgeons to have pay, half-pay, and retiring pay not less than, but in advance of, surgeons-major of over 20 years' service. Fleet-surgeons to be retired compulsorily at the age of 55.

4. Inspectorial and Deputy-Inspectorial Ranks.—No qualifying service of any kind to be required. Pay, half-pay, and retiring pay to be not less than, but in advance of, corresponding ranks in the Army.

5. Instruments and the surgical appliances to be provided by Government, as in the military service.

6. Cabin accommodation to be provided, according to rank and seniority.

7. Medical officers' allowances in flag-ships and hospitals (corresponding to charge-pay in the Army) to be retained as at present.

8. Sick-leave on full pay should be granted to naval medical officers, as to military medical officers.

Aldrich, Nagasaki; Vigilant, Lieut.-Com. Annesley, Hong Kong. Upon the arrival of the Growler, Com. C. Wilcox, from Yokohama, and the Hart, Com. R. Evans, from Chefoo, at Hong Kong, they will, after a short stay, proceed to Singapore.—Western Morning News.

A riot was caused in Plymouth on Thursday night by the apprehension of a sailor of the Valorous. The police while conveying him to the station were attacked by a large crowd of soldiers, sailors, and women. The police, aided by some marines, made a gallant defence, but they were greatly outnumbered, and at length they dragged their prisoner into a stationer's shop. They were followed by the mob, and the place was soon utterly wrecked. Injuries were inflicted on both sides in the fight, but a strong body of police arrived, charged and dispersed the mob, and captured some of the ringleaders.

THE COMMISSARIAT AND TRANSPORT STAFF.

The following Royal Warrant was issued from the War Office on Wednesday:—

ORGANISATION OF THE COMMISSARIAT AND TRANSPORT DEPARTMENT.

Victoria R.,—Whereas We deem it expedient, with a view to the rearrangement and reorganisation of the Supply and Transport Services of Our Army, to revise the constitution of the Commissariat and Transport Department; Our Will and Pleasure is that Our said Commissariat and Transport Department shall, for the future, consist of two sections, a Superior and Subordinate Section, and be organised as a part of the Staff of Our Army. THE GUNS OF THE FUTURE.

A discussion took place at the Royal Artillery Institution, Woolwich, on Tuesday last, on the gunnery question, and was of special interest and importance at the present time. It arose upon a lecture dealing with the recent experiments at Meppen, the lecturer being Capt. Orde Browne, late of the Royal Artillery, who contended that Krupp's 71-ton gun was a much better weapon than the British 80-ton gun, as it fired a heavier projectile with a higher velocity, producing 1½in. more penetration, with less pressure upon the bore; the only reason being that it is a better proportioned gun, its main advantage being its greater length. He argued that breech-loading had become imperative, because the labour and inconvenience of muzzle-loading increase with the length of the gun, and ultimately became almost impossible.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir John M. Adye, K.C.B., late Director of Artillery, and at present Governor of the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, remarked that the 80-ton gun was designed six years ago, and it was only to be expected that the progress of science would produce better results in ordnance of later date, and some of our own muzzle-loaders of smaller calibre had already beaten the corresponding breech-loaders of Germany. His own opinion, supported by that of Capt. A. Noble, of Sir William Armstrong's firm, was that there was no difficulty in making guns, whether breech-loaders or muzzle-loaders, which being of the same calibre shall produce identical results in range, accuracy, velocity, and power. Other considerations, though important, were not vital. Which, for instance, is the more convenient and the more rapid, the simplest, the cheapest, and the safest? He doubted the assertion of Capt. Orde Browne that great length was fatal to muzzle-loading, for the 38-ton gun, which was 19 ft. long, was tried five years ago in a contracted casemate at Shoeburyness, loading by hand and fired for two days at the rate of one round in two minutes. He doubted whether so prolonged and crucial a test had been applied to any breech-loader of the same size. He feared that breech-loaders in turrets having to be frequently opened might half suffocate the crew, and that the necessity of great care in opening and closing the breech in a dark and confined space might cause confusion, delay, and accident. He instanced the bursting of a large Krupp gun on board the German training ship, killing and wounding all the gunners save one, and said this was by no means a solitary case. The German 9-pounder used in the war with France in 1870-1 fired only the small charge of 1lb. 1oz. of powder, and yet large numbers of these failed in service, the German official reports showing that 210 became disabled, chiefly from the weak breech mechanism. These siege guns were also so uncertain that out of 70 of them before Paris 36 became unserviceable in 15 days. Colonel Maitland, R.A., reported that two Krupp field guns out of five in one battery became disabled by the enemy's fire in the Russo-Turkish war. Herr Krupp had stated in 1878 that the whole of the German breech-loading siege guns and field artillery had been remodelled, which was a confession of weakness, and the test of war had not yet been applied to establish the improvement. In concluding a lengthy address, Sir John Adye admitted the desirability of extended experiments, and stated that the breech-loaders now in course of manufacture at the Royal Gun Factories, Woolwich, would afford the means of ascertaining much that was at present doubtful on the subject.

Gen. Gordon, C.B., Royal Artillery, expressed a conviction that breech-loading ordnance was a necessity forced upon the nation, as muzzle-loaders could not be further lengthened, and had consequently reached their extreme power.

Admiral Boys, who was asked to state the views of the Royal Navy on the question, said there was a general desire for a full and careful series of experiments, and the Admiralty and War Office were fully in accord in desiring the most complete efficiency.

Admiral Hamilton, Surveyor of Naval Ordnance, supported the remarks of Admiral Boys.

Major Sladen, R.A., Professor of Artillery at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich, thought that breech-loading guns would always be more dangerous than muzzle-loaders, but that they would be more accurate, as better adapted for centring the shot; and, as they were in the direction of progress, the risk would probably have to be accepted.

Major Stoney, R.A., Instructor at the Royal Artillery Institution, deprecated a hasty acceptance of the German model, and especially objected to the introduction at present of steel guns.

Gen. W. J. Smythe, R.A., who presided, expressed the thanks of the meeting to Capt. Browne for his paper, which had led to so interesting a discussion.

The proceedings then terminated.

Obituary.

We have to announce the death of Admiral Richard Crozier, K.T.S., which occurred at his residence, West Hill, Freshwater, Isle of Wight, on Tuesday last in his 77th year, having been born in August, 1803. He was the son of Mr. R. B. Crozier, of West Hill, Isle of Wight, and grandson of the gallant Sir Richard Pearson, who in Sept. 1799, beat off an American squadron of double his own force under the notorious Paul Jones, and who was afterwards Lieutenant-Govenor of Greenwich Hospital. The deceased entered the Navy at 10 years of age, and after four years' probation at sea became a student of the Royal Naval College. He obtained his commission as lieutenant in 1823; commander, April 30, 1827; captain, May 20, 1839; and became a rear-admiral (reserved half-pay), Feb. 4, 1858; vice-admiral, April 20, 1865; and admiral, April 1, 1870. He was made a Knight of the Tower and Sword of Portugal in May, 1824, when as lieutenant of the Lively, Capt. William Elliott, he rendered contributory services in restoring Dom John to the Throne of Portugal. Admiral Crozier married in 1839, Julia, fourth daughter of the late Mr. George Stone, of Chislehurst, Kent.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I regret that you should have given authority to the opinion that the remains of the officer on the Manukau Beach are those of Lieut. Arthur Jekyll. The remains are certainly not Lieut. Jekyll's, as that officer was lost with 50 men at about three o'clock in the afternoon, being capsized alongside the Orpheus in the launch, when endeavouring to take out an anchor to deep water. This accident took place with a swinging ebb tide, which continued for the next four hours, and which carried both bodies and boat far out to sea. By no possibility could one of these bodies have been returned to the Manukau Beach. The flood tide, with irresistible force, made at half-past seven, soon after which the masts went by the board. The crew, who had been clinging to the topmost rigging, were then thrown into the boiling surf, and living and dead were swept in shore. It is, therefore, only from among the officers who "went with the masts" that identification is possible. It is very likely that a further search, which has been promised, will bring to light some small articles such as a stud or sleeve-link, which will afford a certain clue as to the name of the officer. Until then, or, at all events, until some more satisfactory evidence can be obtained, it will, I think, be discreet to prevent pain and disappointment, that no further mention of a name be made.—I am, &c.,

A SURVIVOR.

Lately the death-rate at the Royal Naval Hospital at Stonehouse, swelled chiefly by pulmonary diseases, has been unusually high, averaging about five deaths per week.—Western Daily Mercury.

The Italian Geographical Society has determined to present the gold medal of the society to the navigators and men of science who are shortly to arrive at Naples, from their Polar expedition, in the Vega.

The Globe learns from Cronstadt that a sum of half a million roubles has been assigned by the Minister of Marine, Admiral Lessovsky, for the purpose of improving the existing Russian torpedo fleet, so as to raise it to the level of the most recent innovations, and for the purpose of purchasing a number of fresh torpedo boats abroad.

On Wednesday evening a fire broke out in a brick-making machine-shed on the dockyard extension works at Portsmouth. At one time it was feared that the flames would spread to the adjoining premises, but they were confined to the shed in which they originated. The damage is estimated at £2,000.

The international conference on the subject of Arctic exploration, which has just met at Hamburg, has decided to send out no fresh expedition at present for the discovery of the North Pole. The general opinion was in favour of gradual and cautious advance, and accordingly it has been decided that a chain of stations for observation shall be formed and steadily pushed forward, so that by degrees the Arctic regions may be thoroughly explored in an ever-narrowing circle as far as may prove practicable.

A section of another armour-plate, manufactured for the Inflexible by Messrs. Cammell, of Sheffield, was tested on Thursday at Portsmouth. The section was 9 in. thick, 3½ of steel being fused on to 5½ of iron by the process invented by Mr. Wilson. The gun used was a 12-ton 9-in. muzzle-loading rifle, and stood 30 ft. from the plate, the charges being 50 lb. of battering pebble powder, and the projectiles chilled Palliser shots, 251 lb. in weight. All three projectiles were completely smashed, only their steel points entering the metal, and the penetration being less than that on any previous occasion.

Robins' Carol. By the Rev. C. Bullock. (Hand and Heart Publishing Office, Paternoster Buildings.)—"The Robin Dinners" have attained a European reputation, and a Christmas movement inaugurated three years ago promises to become a settled metropolitan institution. In the first year of this truly charitable experiment, 300 robins chirped a response, in the second year 3,000, and in last year 10,000 guests were included. Most interesting particulars as to this movement will no doubt be cheerfully afforded on application to the editor, but it must be borne in mind that Robin dinners are not relief dinners. They are invitation dinners, and the invitation is not addressed merely to starving children. It is the token of a wish that others poorer than themselves should rejoice with those that do rejoice in the plenty God has given them, and the little strangers are welcomed as Christmas guests.

BURSTING OF THE "THUNDERER" GUN.

On Tuesday was destroyed, at Woolwich, the remaining 38-ton gun of the fore-turret of the Thunderer. The report of the Committee at Malta was that the gun which burst had been double-loaded—that is to say, it had been loaded with a "full charge" of powder and a common shell, while it still contained a battering charge and a Palliser projectile.

The gun experimented upon on Tuesday was in all respects similar to the one that burst on board the Thunderer, and was its companion in the fore-turret. It was formed of a steel tube with four massive coils of wrought-iron shrunk upon it, according to the Fraser system of construction. Externally, the gun was 19 ft. long, and might be described as divided into three thicknesses, varying from nearly 5 ft. at the breach to rather less than 3½ ft. in the middle, and something under 2 ft. at the muzzle. The diameter of the bore was 12 in., and its length 16½ ft. It was rifled in nine grooves. The gun, as prepared, was mounted on a wrought-iron carriage on a slide, at the lower end of a long cell about 8 ft. wide and the same in height, formed in the interior of a built-up mound of earth, measuring nearly 60 ft. square at the base, and rather more than 20 ft. high. The sides of the cell were supported by massive beams and planks, and at the entrance was some heavy masonry on either side. A space, ranging from 3 ft. on one side to 5 ft. on the other, intervened between the open front of the cell and the "splinter trap" or gallery, composed of massive timbers, secured with bolts and angle-irons, and extending for a length of 45 ft. The avenue, measuring about 8 ft. in width and height, was filled with sand, amounting to something like 3,000 cubic feet. This was intended to arrest the two projectiles with which the gun was to be loaded, as also fragments of the gun. To prevent the carrying away of the splinter-trap, the top was strengthened and made heavy with nearly 3 ft. of timber, on the summit of which came 6 ft. of sandbags. There were also sandbags along the outer side of the structure, and others on the face of the mound over the entrance to the cell, the total number of the bags being about thirteen thousand. The experiment being looked upon as the final ordeal, there was a considerable gathering of officials and spectators and the members of the Committee on Ordnance were all present.

The loading of the gun took place under the direction of Capt. Morley, R.A. First was inserted the battering charge of 110 lb. of pebble powder, followed by an empty Palliser shell, weighing, with its gas check, 705 lb. In front of this came the usual wad. Then the gun received a "full charge," consisting of 85 lb. of pebble powder, followed by an empty common shell, weighing, with its gas check, about 590 lb., this again having in its front a wad. The total loading of powder and shot thus arranged extended 10 ft. up the bore, but this was reduced some few inches by powerful ramming, so as to reproduce, as near as might be, the effect of the extra ramming which the double charge is known to have received from the hydraulic machinery on board the Thunderer. At five minutes to 1 a heavy report, deadened by the intervening mass of material, broke upon the ear, and a cloud of smoke rose from the mound, while some pieces of woodwork flew high in the air.

It was soon found that the gun was destroyed, and the event was a confirmation of the report sent home by the Committee at Malta. A more remarkable verification could not be conceived, the shattered gun bearing the closest resemblance to the appearance which was presented by the gun which burst in the turret. The only difference consisted in the circumstance that the middle portion of the gun, consisting of what is called the 1 B coil, was not only shattered by the detonating force of the front cartridge, but had torn away part of the outer coil of the breech, called the C coil, thereby damaging the gun as far back as the trunnions. The coiled breech-piece, lying between the C coil and the steel tube, remained intact, projecting some distance beyond the outer coil. The gun carriage had recoiled with some force against the stops, and the violence of the explosion was shown by the torn pieces of the gun which strewed the floor of the cavernous cell. The cell itself was chiefly damaged on the right, and there had evidently been some heavy masses of iron hurled against the roof, splintering the thick beams which supported the superincumbent mass of earth. In front there had been a fall of sand-bags, and when these were removed further portions of the gun were found. Subsequently, digging operations commenced, and other pieces were disentombed from the splinter-trap. It was impossible, however, to complete the investigation on Tuesday, and further time will have to be devoted to the purpose. The pressure-guage placed at the bottom of the bore was duly examined, but failed to give precise information. Previous to its insertion in the gun it had been crushed with a pressure of 36 tons per square inch. This proved to be excessive, as the copper cylinder was unaltered when taken out of the gun, simply showing, therefore, that it had not suffered a greater pressure than that to which it was originally subjected. Other pressure-gauges remain to be recovered.

On examining one of the fragments of the steel tube which formed the lining of the gun, Mr. Bramwell detected an abrasion exactly corresponding to that which had been observed in the case of the burst gun abroad. This abrasion was of such a nature as to show that a projectile had passed along the broken portion of the gun after the burst had commenced, thus proving that there must have been two charges of powder in the gun, separated by an intervening projectile. This coincident testimony in respect to the two guns appears to furnish the last link in the chain of evidence, leaving nothing more to be desired. There is, however, one other piece of evidence, which will not fail to command attention. At the request of General Gordon, a careful comparison in the weight of sundry studs was recently made by Mr. Greenhill, a mathematician holding an official position at Woolwich. A stud found in the turret after the bursting of the gun on board the Thunderer was considered by the Malta Committee to belong to a Palliser projectile, and not to a common shell. If a Palliser shell were in the gun at the time of the explosion, it becomes certain that the gun was double-loaded, as it is perfectly understood that it contained a common shell. Taking a series of studs from the Palliser shells and the common shells fired from the 38-ton gun at Woolwich, Mr. Greenbill found that the average weight of the stud from a common shell was 1,282 grains, and from a Palliser shell 1,383 grains. The weight of the stud found in the turret was 1,343 grains, and it is computed that the probability of this being a Palliser stud is immeasurably greater than the contrary supposition. It should be further explained that the studs in all cases belonged to the front ring, and therefore were properly comparable. It has been considered that the stud found in the turret had been reduced by a small piece being knocked off, thereby somewhat diminishing its weight. The appearance of that part of the stud which was fixed in the shell also favoured the idea that the turret stud belonged to a Palliser projectile, as it differed in its texture from the shank of a stud belonging to a common shell. A minute examination of the fragments of the exploded gun will be made by Gen. Gordon's Committee, after which a report will be presented to the War Office.

AN ESTIMATE OF THE EFFECT OF THE FIRE OF MUSKETRY IN AN ENGAGEMENT.

[FROM THE "GENTLEMAN'S LONDON MAGAZINE," NOV., 1779.]

EVER since the invention of firearms, it has been a principal branch of study in the art Military, to improve on the designs and increase the effects of those destructive engines. The methods, however, which have hitherto been taken for this purpose, have not been altogether attended with success. Each nation hath eagerly endeavoured to surpass the other in quickness of firing; from whence are derived the several methods of firing by "divisions," "platoons," by "rank and file," from "right to left," &c. But the supposed utility of all these various manœuvres will in a great degree vanish, if we examine into their effects, by comparing the number of the killed and wounded in any battle, with the number of combatants and the frequency of their firings, since, from a multitude of examples, it might be proved that, out of eighty bullets fired, there is not above one that does execution. For instance, at the battle of Fontenoy, the French had about 6,000 killed and wounded. Now, on the side of the Allies there were not, in the whole, more than 36,000 men; and, deducting from this number that of the Dutch troops, and the cavalry, who did not engage, there were but 20,000 combatants. It is known that these fired away all their cartridges, to the number, perhaps, of 36 each man; but (to make proper allowance) we will suppose that each man fired no more than 20; here were 400,000 shot discharged. And if, at the same time, we suppose that only 500 men suffered from the artillery, it is plain here were 73 shot to one person killed or wounded. If we consider, besides, how many might suffer from the bayonet, the disproportion will also be considerably increased. A more recent example was afforded in the affair of Meer, near Wezel, where Gen. Imhoff attacked the French. The latter consisted of 5,000 men, who fired at least six times a-piece, discharging in consequence 30,000 shot; and yet the killed and wounded of the Hanoverians amounted to no more than 300, including those who suffered by the bayonet and artillery. This was in the proportion of 100 shot to one man. Thus, at a medium, taken from any number of late battles, it will be found that not more than one man has been killed or wounded by 80 shot discharged. At the battle of Sanderhausen, a Hessian regiment on the left wing reserved their fire till a regiment of the French advanced within 30 paces of their line, when the former gave a general volley, by which, in all appearance, 800 muskets were discharged full in the faces of the latter; but notwithstanding the French were so near, they suffered very little. If, then, the effect of the musketry at 30 paces be so inconsiderable, what must it be at 150 or 200 paces, the distance at which they usually fire? Indeed, if the fire of musketry were so terrible in effect as it threatens in appearance, two armies of equal numbers, and equally expert at firing, must in a manner totally destroy each other in a few rounds. As it is, in fact, however, after 20 or 30 shots are exchanged on both sides, there is hardly any sensible decrease of numbers. There is, notwithstanding, but little reason for surprise at this apparently wonderful disproportion between the cause and the effect, if we examine into the matter; for, in the first place, the barrels of the common muskets are too short to carry a bullet far in a straight line; the charge, also, not being proportioned to the length of the barrel, the force of the shot is much less than it ought to be. Both these circumstances together contribute to render the effect precarious and uncertain; yet, were it otherwise as to these defects, who ever saw soldiers take aim? They are not instructed in it; and, indeed, considering the ordinary way in which they attack, it would be labour lost to teach them anything about it. The men are, in general, so much crowded that they cannot help jostling and hindering one another; the musket is also too heavy to hold, presented with the object in view till the word of command be given, and if that be given too hastily, it is a great chance if many will have taken aim at all. There is an inconvenience, also, in the form of the butt-end of the musket, which is too straight to admit of the soldier's conveniently taking aim. Add to all this, that, in a warm engagement, few of the men are capable of acting with sufficient deliberation, and at close firing they frequently cannot see the enemy for smoke. All these circumstances considered, it becomes rather an object of surprise that so many are killed and wounded by the musketry as, indeed, there are, than that there should be so few.

Reviews.

The Nineteenth Century.—Mr. Archibald Forbes's article on "Lord Chelmsford and the Zulu War," which appears in the current number of the Nineteenth Century, will be read with much interest. Mr. Forbes criticises in detail the action of Lord Chelmsford, for the purpose of proving that his lordship's conduct of the campaign was one series of errors, relieved only by the combats of Gingihlovo and Ulundi. In offering this criticism, he divides the operations into four distinct periods,—first, from the inception of the preparations up to and including the catastrophe of Isandlwana; second, from Isandlwana to the relief of Etshowe; third, from the relief of Etshowe up to and including the combat of Ulundi; and fourthly, from Ulundi until the acceptance of Lord Chelmsford's resignation by Sir Garnet Wolseley. We cannot afford space to accompany Mr. Forbes in his very exhaustive criticism, but must be content with noticing a few of its most salient features. The responsibilities of Isandlwana he puts upon the shoulders of Lord Chelmsford, as proved sufficiently by the evidence of his lordship's despatch on that occurrence. The early days of the second period of the operations are described as passed in aimless despondency, and the institution of the Court of Inquiry a "solemn mockery." In treating of the third period of the operations of the campaign, Mr. Forbes quotes a portion of Lord Chelmsford's despatch in which he states that he had given, or would give, special instructions to Major-General Crealock as to certain important matters, and then asks what were these instructions. "If there were indeed any, it devolves on Gen. Crealock, in the interest of his own reputation, to take steps that they be produced. For three months Gen. Crealock remained stationary, inspecting latrines, cultivating laying poultry, and clamouring for pepper—were such, then, instructions?" As regards the fourth period of the operations, Mr. Forbes marshals a statement of facts, which, he considers, demonstrates that, while up to this period Lord Chelmsford's conduct had been erroneous, weak, and capricious, the manner in which he acted after the battle of Ulundi involved him in a yet graver culpability, a culpability that threw to the wind the results of the victory of Ulundi, devolved on another the work of finishing the campaign, and involved the country in needless expenditure. Mr. Forbes then details with considerable minuteness the circumstances that took place immediately after the battle of Ulundi, with the object of showing that Lord Chelmsford attained a final climax of incapacity by nullifying his success; that he relinquished the fruits of that victory when they were within his grasp; and that his precipitate retreat involved our army in what may be called, to all intents and purposes, another campaign. With regard to the final indictment against Lord Chelmsford, after the battle of Ulundi, the most pregnant evidence of the importance of that victory was afforded by Sir Garnet Wolseley ordering the immediate return to England of a large portion of the British forces.

The United Service Review.—We have before us No. of Volume II. of a well-printed American monthly, called, The United Service: a Monthly Review of Military and Naval Affairs. It is similar in form to the Quarterly Review, and is supplied by B. F. Stevens, 4 Trafalgar Square, London. Its first article is from the able pen of Prof. John M. Brooke, of the Virginia Military Institute. Lieut. Brooke, formerly of the U.S. Navy, invented, before the Rebellion, the well-known Brooke detaching apparatus, so much used in deep-sea soundings. He joined the Confederacy during the war. His article is called "Discussion of the Explosion of the 38-ton Gun on Board H.M.S. Thunderer." He takes the ground that the gun was single-loaded, and that the shell perhaps cracked, and produced a wedging in the steel tube, which brought about the explosion. He says:—"A wedging projectile performs work in overcoming the resistance opposed by the walls of the bore and obstacles in its path, and that work is equal to the energy exerted, producing an acceleration of the same body equal to the retardation. The disappearance of this energy produces its equivalent of heat, divided between the projectile and the gun at their surfaces of contact, and this with the combustion of more than the usual quantity of powder, in consequence of the retarded motion of the projectile would be sufficient to produce appearances of fusion, as presented by the surface of fracture of the piece referred to." The "Autobiography of an old British Soldier" is written by Mr. J. H. Siddons. It is pleasant reading. Capt. H. W. Howgate, U.S. Army, in "Congress and the North Pole," advances his views on his intended plan, which is somewhat similar to Commander Cheyne's. Capt. Howgate is an assistant of Gen. Myers, of the Signal and Weather Bureau at Washington. Capt. S. B. Luce, U.S. Navy, gives a good article, entitled "A Powerful Navy not Dangerous to Civil Liberty." He shows that England preserves her civil liberty, and keeps her power by a Navy, and urges Congress not to neglect to build up the United States Navy. The article "About Heliographs," by Lieut. Philip Reade, 3rd U.S. Infantry, is one of the best in the United Service. As heliographs have been used by General Roberts when his telegraphic communication was cut the other day, their use should be more practised.

Words of Command and Caution used in Battalion Drill. Compiled by H. Gloster Armstrong. Second edition. (Dublin: E. Ponsonby, Grafton Street; C. Chambers, Dame Street.)—We are not surprised that a second edition of this useful handy little manual should have been required. An officer often needs to rub up his memory as to cautions and executive words of command, but to do so, he has to hunt through the "Field Exercise." In the manual before us, only the cautions and words of command, and those solely of simple and customary movements, are given. As a refresher to the memory, it is, therefore, invaluable. Moreover, it is of such a size and shape that it can be easily carried in the sleeve or a watch-pocket.

Amusements.

The opening of the HAYMARKET THEATRE, under the Bancroft management, took place last Saturday evening, and the abolition of the old pit called forth a protest on the part of one section of the play-going public, which enforced a speech from the new manager. That the interior is now more superbly decorated than that of any other theatre in the metropolis will be readily conceded. The proscenium appears a magnificent frame of solid gold, the drop-scene, representing a group of characters from the "School for Scandal," is a work of high art, and the spectator, luxuriously seated in the high-priced portion of the house, is dazzled on every side by the splendour of the gilt designs and the mosaic ornamentation around him. When curiosity is, however, satiated, the want of an equally brilliant dramatic entertainment begins to be felt. Of the general acting of the company in Lord Lytton's familiar play of "Money," it is not possible to speak in terms of high praise. The sole charm of the performance is Mrs. Bancroft's embodiment of the lively Lady Franklin. Miss Marion Terry is a quiet Clara Douglas, Miss Linda Dietz an unaffected Georgina Vesey, and Mr. Archer as Captain Dudley and Mr. Kemble as Stout act with finish and judgment. But Mr. Conway is not seen at his best as Evelyn, and Mr. Bancroft, Mr. Arthur Cecil, and Mr. Odell do not appear to be comfortably placed as Sir Frederick Blount, Graves, and Sir John Vesey. The costumes and appointments generally are, on the other hand, in faultless taste, and it is possible in time the brilliancy of the acting will be raised to the level of the splendour of the ornamental accessories. From the pit, however, always came the heartiest and most discriminating applause, and the loss of this stimulating influence on the actors is already severely felt.

Mr. Burnand's comedy of "Ourselves," adapted from the French play called "Moi," produced at the Française in March, 1864, has failed to maintain a firm position in the play-bill, and it will be withdrawn in a few evenings, to make way for a revival of "The School for Scandal," in which Mr. John Clayton will resume the character of Joseph Surface.

At the DUKE'S THEATRE on Monday night was produced Mr. W. G. Wills's new domestic drama, called "Forced from Home," with moderate success. It is a play in four acts of the old Victoria type, embodying a story of seduction, the daughter of a tailor, bearing the unromantic name of Smith, being the victim. Miss Fanny Brough impersonates the heroine of the piece, a part similar to many played by Miss Vincent in the old days of the Victoria; and Mr. Clarence Holt is the father, who becomes demented by the abduction of his child, driven from home by the cruel conduct of a stern and repelling step-mother. Mr. Charles Wilmot, Mr. G. S. Gordon, and Miss May Holt cleverly depict the characters assigned them; but the principal feature of the drama is a real hansom cab, introduced in a well-painted scene representing the Quadrant, Regent Street, on a snowy winter night.

The one hundredth representation of "The Merchant of Venice" at the LYCEUM will take place on Saturday, the 14th inst., when the unprecedented event will be commemorated by a supper in the theatre, at which many distinguished guests will assemble to meet the company.

The PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE will be opened, under the management of Mr. Edgar Bruce, on Saturday, the 21st inst.

Mr. John S. Clarke appears in "Red Tape" and "The Heir-at-Law" at the OLYMPIC, on Monday, the 16th inst.

"As You Like It," with Miss Litton as Rosalind, will be an early production at the IMPERIAL THEATRE; and "Macbeth," supported by a strong cast, is to form, in the course of the next fortnight, the first of a series of careful Shakespearean revivals at new SADLER'S WELLS.

The great Handel Festival will be held at the CRYSTAL PALACE this summer, under the joint auspices of the Crystal Palace Company and the Sacred Harmonic Society, on Friday, June 18, Monday, June 21, Wednesday, June 23, and Friday, June 25.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

The CALEDONIAN is on the Adelphi Terrace, and close to Charing Cross.

These two old-established Family Hotels, from their especially advantageous position, both overlooking the Thames Embankment, combine light, air, and perfect quiet, although in the centre of London. They are now under one management, and are conducted on the principle of a fixed charge of SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE PER DAY, which includes a good Bedroom, Breakfast of hot and cold meats, Luncheon, Dinner of six courses, and Tea and Coffee in the evening; also the use of large, well-appointed Sitting-rooms, including an ELEGANTLY-APPOINTED DRAWING-ROOM.

These Hotels, containing upwards of 200 Rooms, have been for many years largely patronised by Members of Parliament, the Clergy, and by Military and Naval Officers and their Families, by reason of their central, but retired localities, affording all the comforts and luxuries of high-class Hotels.

DR. RUSSELL has lost no time in justifying his statements concerning the want of discipline among our troops in South Africa, which appeared in the Daily Telegraph of November 21. These statements were of so serious a nature, that the Commander-in-Chief communicated with Sir Garnet Wolseley on the subject. Sir Garnet ordered an inquiry to be made; but without waiting for the result, telegraphed to the Horse Guards an indignant denial, adorned by such phrases as "gross exaggerations" and "transparent untruths," and suggesting that Dr. Russell had been the victim of a hoax. On his part, the the Duke of Cambridge, animated by a natural and laudable desire to at once clear the Army from the stigma cast upon it, did not wait till Dr. Russell, then on his way, arrived in England, but caused the Adjutant-General to send a copy of Sir Garnet Wolseley's telegram to the Daily Telegraph, with a covering letter which practically endorsed Sir Garnet Wolseley's communication. Scarcely had Dr. Russell returned to England, than he wrote a long letter to the Daily Telegraph, in which, with admirable courtesy and clearness, he defends himself against the charge that he had been either hoaxed or incorrect. He repeats and amplifies his former statements, and asserts that he is quite ready to prove the truth of them, if required to do so. Naturally, unless called upon to support his statements by evidence, and to specify the names of regiments, &c., he shrinks from being more explicit, as he would be compelled to drag the names of certain corps through the mud, and quote the information given by officers naturally not desirous of seeing their names in print. He, however, gives, in many instances, names of places, and in some indicates the sufferers from the disorders of the troops, thus rendering it easy for the Authorities to disprove Dr. Russell's allegations, if they are not literally true. That Dr. Russell should have been hoaxed, is most improbable. He is an experienced journalist, editor, and war correspondent, and as such, on his guard against shaves. His personal character, too, is such that the public, we are sure, feel confident that he would not make any damaging statement, unless he had taken every reasonable means to ascertain its accuracy. Besides, if Dr. Russell has been the victim of a hoax, he must have been hoaxed, not once, or twice, but continuously, during the whole of his stay in South Africa, which is a palpably absurd supposition. The idea of a hoax may, therefore, be dismissed. But, if not hoaxed, he must either have generalised from one or two isolated instances, or he must deliberately have stated that which he knew to be untrue. That he has not been guilty of unfair generalisation is evident from his letter of last Tuesday, in which he gives numerous instances of disaster and outrage, the particulars of which were communicated to him by trustworthy eye-witnesses. He heard, he says, much, from officers who had taken part in the campaign in Zululand, of the scares among the troops, and "witnessed some of the effects of these stampedes on the persons of sufferers, whom, if challenged, I will name." He also heard of "wild alarms, and outbursts of musketry and cannonading at nothing, at places and on occasions which, if challenged, I can name." Further, he heard of repeated floggings, ordered by officers whom he offers, if required, to name. Of these matters he made no mention, because he attributed them to the youth and inexperience of the troops. When, however, he found that the troops on the march through Natal and the Transvaal, after the conclusion of the war, taking advantage of the fact that they were no longer liable to flogging, indulged in the most shameful outrages towards the inhabitants, his indignation was aroused, and in the true interests of the Service he spoke unpleasant truths. He gives some samples of these outrages, and they are such as to make all lovers of the fair fame of the British Army blush. Not that the guilt attaches to any but a comparatively small number of ruffians in each regiment. Dr. Russell, indeed, admits as much himself. But, unfortunately, all who wear the same uniform as the above-mentioned ruffians, though they share not the guilt, share the shame. We learn from Dr. Russell's letter that officers commanding stations were obliged to put the adjacent towns and villages out of bounds, so that soldiers could not visit them without a pass; and that one commanding officer, actually helpless to prevent wholesale intoxication and fearing outrages, ordered a supply of spirits to be sent out to the Veldt, that his men might get drunk quietly and out of sight. Nor did the troops confine themselves to merely getting drunk. At Newcastle, a distinguished officer told Dr. Russell that, being asleep at an hotel in Utrecht, the soldiers of the —— Regiment attacked the house, and smashed the windows with paving-stones, because they were refused drink. Getting under the bed for shelter, he was knocked over with a stone, and the rioters only left when he produced his revolver and called on the landlord to fire. The officer commanding the station, in consequence of this outrage, closed all the liquor-shops, and made it penal to sell any drink. Dr. Russell was informed by one of the chief merchants in South Africa that at Heidelberg, which the latter had just left, every store had been broken into and wrecked by the troops. At Middleburg, the picket which had been sent from the adjacent camp to protect the town, smashed the windows and broke into the hotel of the leading Boer with drawn bayonets. Dr. Russell was present when the outrage was reported by the sufferer to Colonel Lanyon. Nor did the troops content themselves with attacking houses in pursuit of drink. Robberies were frequent, from fowls upwards. At Middleburg, the principal hotel-keeper was knocked down and robbed of twelve sovereigns by the men of a detachment, because he refused to serve them with liquor. Nor were the mess stores of Sir Garnet Wolseley safe. They were stolen, and the wines and spirits among them drunk, by the men belonging to the Head-Quarters Camp. Surely, apart from the question of Dr. Russell's character, he would not be so foolish as to give such specific instances in support of his allegations, unless he felt quite certain that he could prove what he had stated. For our own part, grieved as we are that such things should be true, we cannot but think that Dr. Russell has rendered good service to the Army by drawing attention to these distressing occurrences, and thus taking the most effectual step to prevent their recurrence. We feel quite certain that if the inquiry is held with no foregone conclusion, but with an honest intention naught to extenuate and naught set down in malice, it will be found that the picture has been by no means over-coloured. We feel equally certain that the public will insist on a full, impartial, and searching investigation; and we therefore, for the present, take leave of this unpleasant subject.

If any proof were wanted to demonstrate how various are the results obtained with the same fuel in propelling different vessels, or that these results are determined by the conditions under which the combustion takes place, it is to be found in the Return ordered to be printed last August by the House of Commons, and now issued, of all the experiments made by the Admiralty on coal and patent fuel during the preceding twelve months. This Return comprises the reports of the captains and chief engineers of eighteen of her Majesty's ships, as also of the chief constructors and engineers of Pembroke and Portsmouth Dockyards, on experiments made with various kinds of coal and Cambrian Harp and Graigola Merthyr patent fuels, used separately mixed together, and also mixed with coal. It is quite impossible for a man of ordinary ability to arrive at any satisfactory conclusion as to the relative efficiency either of the coals or of the patent fuels experimented on, owing to the contradictory nature of the reports sent in by the different officers engaged on the trials. All that can be said is, that in one ship, owing presumably to the construction of her stoke-hole and furnaces, a certain fuel gives better results than any other, but at the same time, that same fuel gives bad results in other vessels, and, for ought we know to the contrary, may be set down as worthless by puzzled civilian permanent officials at the Admiralty. Thus for example, the Cambrian Harp patent fuel secured no gain in stowage in the Bellerophon, but was considered to afford more convenience than ordinary coal for stowing an extra stock of fuel, if required; but, in cleanliness and facility in sending it on board and stowing it in the bunkers, as also in removing it from the bunkers when completely filled, it is reported to offer no advantage over ordinary coal, while its power of producing steam is generally stated to be superior to other descriptions of fuel. In the Sirius, however, some twenty per cent. of space was gained in the bunkers by filling them with this same Cambrian patent fuel; but her officers report that they can discern no advantages in this fuel over others, in convenience for stowing an extra stock, if required! In the Argus, two per cent. of space was reported as actually lost in the bunkers by the use of this fuel, which is, nevertheless, reported upon from that ship as being superior to coal in cleanliness and facility in getting on board, and stowing in and removing from the bunkers; but its power of producing steam is set down as only equal to coal! Here, to all outward appearances, we have a very cameleon in fuel. It is by turns both cleaner and dirtier than coal; it is set down as superior to, and yet only equal to coal in its power of producing steam; and while in one ship there is a loss, in others there is a gain, in stowing it in the bunkers in lieu of coal. The same contradictory reports obtain in the case of the Graigola Merthyr patent fuel, the officers of the Pert reporting that this fuel has little advantage over coal in cleanliness, and none in gain of stowage; while in the Rover the opinion obtains that it is cleaner than coal, and that it effects a saving in space sufficient to enable an extra weight of sixty-nine tons of fuel to be shipped. Surely more care should be taken by officers, to whom the duty is confided of making reports on special subjects, to see that the conditions under which the trial or experiment is made leave nothing to be desired. We can readily understand that, through clumsy stowage, a waste of space may occur; and we fail to find except in one instance, that any special arrangement or plan was devised for the stowage of the patent fuel ordered to be tried. The mode of stowing adopted by Mr. Lloyd, the chief engineer of the Tourmaline, was both simple and ingenious, and is worthy of special notice. When the patent fuel was stacked in the bunkers, it was so arranged as to leave a wedge-shaped space from the doors to the shoots. This space was subsequently filled with broken fuel. On the doors of the bunkers being opened, the broken bricks fell down like ordinary lumps of coal, leaving the sloping sides of the stacked bricks intact. On the broken fuel being expended, the bricks were passed out into the stoke-hole without any difficulty being experienced. Such was not the case, however, in those ships in which the engineers allowed their coal-trimmers to stack entire bricks right up to the coal-bunker doors, and from those vessels we are not astonished to see it reported that no advantage was gained from the use of patent fuel, either in stowage or in removing it from the bunkers. But there are other uses for patent fuel besides that of combustion on board men-of-war, and these have been ably noticed by Commander (now Captain) R. H. Harris, of the Argus, in his report to Vice-Admiral Sir E. A. Inglefield, C.B. In the first place, for protective purposes, it is far more efficient than ordinary coal, as, in case of actual necessity, all the coal-bunker doors could be kept closed, it being possible to pass the bricks with ease up through the lower deck or bunker lids, and that in sufficient quantity to keep steaming at a high rate of speed. Then, again, this patent fuel would at all times, and especially in time of war, be free from the danger of an explosive machine or "coal torpedo" being hidden in it, and thereby be likely to be introduced into the furnace to blow up the boilers. Every brick of patent fuel has to be broken up in the stokehole before it can be used as firing, and, while undergoing this breaking-up process, any foreign substance would be detected with, at any rate, far less fatal consequences than if, undiscovered, it were thrown into the furnaces for a lump of coal. Besides, considering the pressure to which the brick is subjected in the process of manufacture, it would be impossible to insert therein anything approaching to a torpedo, and yet make the brick its usual weight. The majority of the officers who have tried patent fuel of the Cambrian Harp or Graigola Merthyr type express it as their opinion that while equal, if not superior, to steam coal in all respects, a very much larger stock can at all times be stowed on board ship. These facts should cause patent fuel to be adopted by the Admiralty, if only to increase the efficiency of our "short-winded" ironclads, whose present steaming capabilities rarely exceed the seven days of the week. With most, indeed, the seventh day may truly be termed a day of rest, for before that day our ironclads run short of coal. In such a state even the most powerful ironclad would be at the mercy of any modern foreign gunboat. If this serious defect in our ironclads can be remedied by the stowage of a greater quantity of patent than of ordinary fuel in their bunkers, then the sooner that fuel is adopted in the Navy, the better will it be for its efficiency; and the sooner bunkers are altered to stow such fuel advantageously, wherever such alteration is necessary, the better will it be for the Service at large. At the same time, it would be well for public officials to devote more care and forethought in organising trials of new inventions, as under the present slipshod system of investigating into the merits of anything new, many a labour or money-saving appliance or commodity is thrown aside as worthless, while in reality valuable, and capable, if properly treated.

The Select Committee appointed to inquire into the relative merits of Machine Guns is about to resume its labours at Shoeburyness. We are informed that its adjournment was at the request of Vice-Admiral Boys, who had been appointed to preside while still serving on the Thunderer Gun Committee, and that the words "sine die" were used, not by the Secretary of State for War, or any official at the War Office, but by Captain Baimbridge, the secretary of the Select Committee. Since we exposed the injury being done by those who insist on retaining the Boxer cartridge as the Service pattern ammunition, we have been assured that the question has been much discussed in high quarters, and are informed that the argument brought forward in support of the Boxer cartridge being retained is, that not only is the Woolwich machinery solely adapted to the manufacture of this ammunition, but also that an enormous stock of these cartridges is on hand. Besides, all the rifles belonging to the Government have their chambers bored to receive the Boxer cartridge, and a change of pattern would consequently necessitate, not only a change of machinery at Woolwich, but the renewing of all the barrels of the rifles at present in use or in store. These arguments, however, omit to take into consideration the efficiency of her Majesty's Forces, and the fact that all foreign Governments have discarded the Boxer cartridge and adopted the far superior, solid-drawn brass case. Damp easily penetrates and destroys the Boxer cartridge. Not so, however, the solid-drawn brass cartridge, a very large consignment of which remained three weeks under water in the vessel conveying it from America to Turkey, which was wrecked; yet on the ten millions of cartridges being recovered, the whole were found to be in perfect order, and fit for immediate use. Boxer cartridges, under similar circumstances, would have been entirely destroyed. For many years past, the manufacturers of small-arm ammunition in this country have given up all hope of convincing the War Office of the inferiority of its pet cartridge, and receiving no encouragement from the Government to improve the manufacture and quality of small-arm ammunition, they have been supplanted in all markets by their enterprising rivals in America. Across the Atlantic, it has long since been recognised that the best of rifles can be rendered unserviceable by using inferior ammunition. Hence American manufacturers, from the very first, turned their attention not only to perfecting the rifle, but also the cartridge it was meant to fire. The result of this policy has been that, since Mr. Samuel Remington first undertook to compete with the established factories of England in 1867, over twenty-five millions sterling have been paid to America by the Continental Governments of Europe, and of South America, China, &c., in payment for improved firearms and ammunition, thus commissioning the manufacturers of the United States to do the work formerly performed by the men of Birmingham and Sheffield. The factories of Belgium and of Essen, have also followed in the wake of American manufacturers, and while these have been securing large orders, British works and British workmen have been idle. American manufacturers, encouraged by the adoption of their improvements, increased their plant and machinery to such an extent that, although Birmingham firms tendered for the supply of arms and ammunition to Turkey, a contract requiring the manufacture of 600,000 rifles and 300,000,000 cartridges, but which ultimately far exceeded those figures—quoting a price barely sufficient to cover cost and contingencies, and leave a small profit, Rhode Island and Connecticut firms, with factories capable individually of turning out 1,000 rifles and 3,000,000 cartridges a day, each true to gauge, bid 20 per cent. lower, carried the work to America, and made the fortunes of all interested in the contract. Now, had our own firms received the same encouragement from the Government to adopt or make improvements in small-arms and ammunition, as foreign manufacturers received from their Governments, they would have been able to extend their works by adopting improved plant and machinery. But the obsolete Boxer cartridge stops the way. We do not mean to imply that the Boxer cartridge was not the best of its kind when first invented. Nothing of the sort. What we do say is that in this, as in everything else, modern science and inventive genius have made improvements, which have naturally superseded the original invention. Officers and men universally condemn the Boxer cartridge, both in the Army and in the Navy. Indeed, no single advantage or point of superiority can be claimed for the Boxer over the improved cartridge now generally used in foreign armies; the very opposite is the case. Nevertheless, until the Government decides on using the superior quality of ammunition, our manufacturers cannot well discard the old plant and machinery for the new, and in the meantime the country is losing money. We hope, therefore, that the condition imposing upon inventors the absolute necessity of adapting their machine guns to fire Boxer ammunition will be abandoned at the forthcoming trials, and that, instead, every inventor will be allowed to fire that description of ammunition for which his gun is the best adapted, for nothing can possibly be gained by reducing the standard of efficiency. The forces of Sweden and Norway, China, the South-American Republics, and Roumania are armed with weapons of American design, and in most cases of American manufacture. These nations, and also France, Germany, Austria, &c., are adopting the solid-drawn brass cartridge as the most serviceable, and in every way superior to the Boxer. England alone retains the latter in use; and sooner than discard it, we have seen, and still see, the War Office exact a lower standard of efficiency in the weapons under competition for adoption in the Service than is required by any other power. What is required is to ascertain which cartridge and which system of machine-gun is the most serviceable, so as to increase the efficiency of her Majesty's Forces.

Lord John Hay is displeased with "the dwellers in the sea-king's halls," it is said, on account of their treatment of his Flag Lieutenant,—that is, the hauling-down promotion, done away with some time ago, was not revived. If any one deserved a point to be strained for him, it is the noble Lord who commanded his squadron so well, and did such good work at Cyprus. But there is no gratitude in the world.

The appointments of storekeepers and cashiers at the Naval Hospitals at the Cape of Good Hope and Jamaica have not yet been filled up, and we understand that the Admiralty are still willing to receive applications from retired assistant-paymasters who are desirous of these appointments. The pay is £100 a year, in addition to the retired pay; free quarters and a colonial allowance will also be given.

The "Ogle Exhibition," founded by the late Admiral Sir C. Ogle, for the gratuitous board and education of the son of a post-captain R.N. at the Royal Naval School, New Cross, has become vacant.

Major H. H. McCarthy, Royal Marines, has been awarded the Greenwich Hospital pension, vacant by the death of Major Waters. Major McCarthy was throughout the Syrian campaign of 1840. He was gunnery instructor at Woolwich, and afterwards barrackmaster at the same division; but failing health compelled him to retire in 1868, before he had served sufficiently long to attain to the highest rate of pension.

Mr. Nordenfeldt wrote last week complaining that our article on machine guns made no mention of the Gardner gun, sent over from America to compete at Shoeburyness. We fail to see that this can form any just cause of complaint, for it was not on the supposition that it was a perfect or faultless gun that we omitted to mention its performance. The United States authorities hold that of its defects the following are the most important:—1. The main-spring of one of the locks in a two-barrelled Gardner gun is at all times compressed when the gun is not in use, rendering the spring liable to snap when brought into action. 2. The rear end of the locks have friction rollers, and the recoil falls on the crank. The locks are only supported by about one-sixteenth of the revolution of the crank, and in case of a "hang-fire" are left without support. 3. Two barrels can only do a limited amount of continuous firing, and 10,000 rounds fired in rapid succession have been found sufficient to so overheat the metal, as to blister and ruin the barrel.

A vacancy has occurred on the list of Paymasters-in-Chief by the death of Mr. William Hickman, who was so well-known in the Navy as the compiler of the work on Courts-martial, by which the Service was so long guided.

The Niger expedition, undertaken by Lieutenant Burr when in command of the Pioneer, was brought before the House of Commons on Thursday by Mr. Richard, and we are happy to notice that there was no half-hearted defence of the conduct of the officers who had successfully conducted this unpremeditated expedition without definite instructions from home. We have more than once referred to the excellent services of Lieutenant Burr on this occasion, and as he has been informed of the approval of his conduct by the Government, we trust the Admiralty will soon give him an opportunity of further service. This is not the first time that this officer has done good work, although recognition has not always accompanied it. In 1873 he was appointed to the Argus for the Ashantee war; was present at all the engagements on the coast, and was doing duty as commander of the ship for a considerable period, actively employed in attacking towns, and was twice mentioned in despatches. Although the commander, first lieutenant, and the sub-lieutenants were promoted, he received no recognition whatever. He assumed the command of the Pioneer, April, 1878, and for nearly two years was employed in the notorious unhealthy rivers on the coast. He has received the thanks of the Foreign Office and the Admiralty for services in the Oil rivers, settling palavers successfully, &c., and thereby increasing trade. In 1879 was thanked by the Governor at Sierra Leone for services in the Scarcies River, protecting customs and preventing serious disturbances then imminent. In the same year he took the Pioneer 700 miles up the Niger, to present the Imperial and Colonial presents to the Emir of Nupi, and received the thanks of the Governor of the Gold Coast. The following month the Pioneer attacked and destroyed the inland town of Onitsha, against an overwhelming force, besides settling satisfactorily disputes that had been of long standing, the result of the expedition being in all respects successful, and the river opened to trade throughout, which had not been the case for a lengthened period. Lieut. Burr then received the thanks of all the merchants residing there, and of the African Company in London. After leaving the Niger, he was taken ill, and narrowly escaped with life, and had to return to England, and has been in hospital ever since. Whilst on service in the Scarcies River (already referred to), the Pioneer lost her surgeon by fever, and more than half the ship's crew were seriously ill. Such services certainly deserve recognition.

The Ranger, composite gun-vessel, of three guns, was launched on Thursday, from the yard of Messrs. Elder, by which firm she has been built and engined. Her cost is about £18,000, and she will be ready for sea at the end of the year.

Captain Cator, who has been selected for appointment as aide-de-camp to the Queen, has seen good service, having been specially mentioned in despatches for his services in the night attacks on Sebastopol in 1855. He was present at the capture of Kertch and Yenikale, and was in the Azoff expedition. He also served at the capture of the Peiho forts, and took part in the operations in the Canton River, was present at the taking of Canton, and was mentioned in despatches and obtained his promotion. He wears the Crimean, Turkish, and China medals, with the Sebastopol, Azoff, Taku, and Canton clasps, and the Medjidie of the fifth class. Capt. Douglas, who has also had the distinction of A.D.C. conferred upon him, was lieutenant of the Orion in the Baltic, the medal for which is the only one he possesses.

Sub-Lieutenant F. C. Sturdee, whom we recently mentioned as having been so successful with the examination papers at the College, has been promoted this week. His seniority was June 9, 1878, and such a lift as he has received will be of immense value to him in the future.

Commander Edward Hennah, who has held a commission as sub-lieutenant in the London Brigade of Naval Artillery Volunteers since February 1876, for service with the Hastings Corps, has resigned his commission. So also has Sub-Lieutenant Willett, of the London Brigade. The vacancies thus caused have already been filled.

By the appointment of Dr. Reid to the head of the Medical Department of the Navy, a general change of the senior officers at the hospitals has become necessary, Inspector-General David L. Morgan, C.B., having been moved from Plymouth to Haslar; Deputy-Inspector Ahmuty Irwin, C.B., from Malta to Plymouth; and Deputy-Inspectors Elliot from Chatham Division of Marines to Malta, and John Bernard from half-pay to the Chatham Infirmary.

The recent accidents in the boats of the Cambridge and Hector, during rocket practice, gave rise to an inquiry into the quality of the war-rockets which have been issued to her Majesty's ships, and the age at which serious deterioration sets in. To guard against similar accidents, it has now been decided that rockets returned into store from ships shall not be re-issued, and no rockets will be supplied for service after they are five years old. An order has also been issued that war rockets in store are to be tested, by firing 10 per cent. of each year's manufacture. Should one or more of any batch burst, a second batch of ten will be similarly tried, and if a burst occur in this second batch the whole of the rockets of the particular year's manufacture will be set aside; and will not be considered as available for issue. This testing will be repeated annually.

The Navy of Peru appears to have almost disappeared, for, according to an official report of the Chilian Minister of Foreign Affairs, Peru has only one ship-of-war, the Union, which has been compelled to seek protection under the batteries of Callao. The Atahualpa and the Manco Capac are mere floating batteries, the former in Callao and the latter in Arica. The remaining vessels belonging to the Peruvian Government, such as the Oroya, the Chalaco, the Limena, the Talisman, and the Rimac are wooden transports, badly armed, which cannot leave Callao without running an imminent risk of being captured. The condition of the Chilian fleet, on the contrary, is exceedingly advantageous. The ironclads Blanco Encalada and Cochrane, the corvettes O'Higgins and Chacabuco, the gunboats Magallanes and Covadonga, the armed transports Amazonas, Loa, Abtao, and Itata, have been recently repaired, and are in perfect condition for service. The transports Angamos (formerly the Belle) Copiapo, Santa Lucia, Lamar, Tolten, Paquete de Maule, Huanay, Matias Cusiño, and Toro are fit for the conveyance of troops, war material, and provisions. In October the Chilian fleet was reinforced by the Huascar, which has been thoroughly repaired, and is now ready for sea. The gunboat Pilcomayo, captured from the Peruvians, is also ready for service. The Angamos, the fastest of the Chilian ships, is to go to Valparaiso, to have put on board one heavy gun and some smaller ones, which recently arrived from Europe. At the commencement of the war, Chili was almost entirely without effective arms; but four large steamers, the Glenelg, Genoese, Marenhense, and the Hylton Castle, which arrived in succession from Europe, brought all that was required. The last-mentioned steamer has just landed in Valparaiso a most valuable cargo. According to the latest news received, the Blanco Encalada has succeeded in capturing a Peruvian torpedo-boat, north of Callao.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Rear-Admiral Hood, consisting of the Minotaur, Agincourt, Northumberland, and Achilles, arrived at Vigo on Tuesday, and will remain there until the 23rd inst.

The officers who will remain in the Wolverene with the Commodore and his Staff, on the ship being paid off and receiving a new crew from the Raleigh, are,—Lieutenant Waties Corbett, Navigating Lieutenant W. J. Symons, Lieutenant Charles Kitching, R.M.L.I., Midshipmen W. Baker, Colin Keppel, Frederick Pasco, and Clerk H. de C. Ward. The officers borne for special service, surveying, &c., will not be disturbed.

We regret to hear that a report has been received at the Admiralty of an accident on board the Northampton with a Nordenfeldt gun, but full particulars have not yet been received.

The following arrangements have been made for the disposal of the officers of the Wivern, when that vessel arrives at Hong Kong, and is paid off and retained for harbour defence. Commander Jones will be appointed to the Victor Emanuel; Lieutenant Walter Warren, Navigating Lieutenant Charles Morshead, and Surgeon Thomas Williams go to the Kestrel, on her being recommissioned. Paymaster Greet was to have been appointed to the Kestrel as assistant-paymaster-in-charge, but he has been promoted since the Admiralty selected him. Lieutenant William Auton and Engineers Barrett and Follett will join the Iron Duke. Chief Engineer Leopold Green and the warrant officers will remain in the Wivern.

Admiral Sir G. P. Hornby was in the Alexandra at Malta on February 4, having with the flag the Téméraire, Rupert, Fawn, Condor, Cruiser, Falcon, Cockatrice, Cygnet, Helicon, Antelope, Euryalus.

An invention of Captain Cator, late in command of the Defence, has been tried by the ships of the Channel Squadron. It consists of a kind of bell-buoy, which being taken in tow in a fog, warns the ship next astern, and consequently lessens the chances of collision. The passage of the buoy through the water keeps the bell constantly ringing.

Many have recently learned, with extreme astonishment, that two of the Naval surgeons now passing through the preliminary course at Netley are "gentlemen of colour." Surgeons entering the Army must make a declaration "on honour" that their parents are of "unmixed European blood." Why does the Navy require no such declaration? Is the Naval Medical Service in such a state that the Admiralty are only too glad to accept any medical man who will join the Navy "mixed" or "unmixed?" This is a matter to which we desire to call the attention not only of the Admiralty, but also of the Parliamentary Bills Committee of the British Medical Association.

We understand that the Admiralty, taking into consideration the density of the fog and the strength of the stream at the time, is satisfied that the collision between the Lively and a merchant vessel in the Mersey must be attributed to accident, and that no want of care was shown by those in charge of the Lively.

Some curiosity has been excited by the arrival of the Boxer in England, as she had no orders from the Admiralty to come home and pay off. She has only just completed her three years in commission, and had it been intended that she should have paid off, her late commander would not have been relieved, on promotion, by Commander Pearson in November last. We hear that she is thought to be unhealthy, some fatal cases of yellow fever having occurred on board, and a special inspection of the ship has been ordered to be made at Sheerness before she proceeds to Chatham to be paid off.

It is with the deepest regret we have to record the death, yesterday morning, of Rear-Admiral Charles W. Hope, Superintendent of Devonport Yard, an appointment which he has held since February last. It is not enough to say that Admiral Hope was a popular officer, for he had won the affectionate regard of those who served under him, and was looked upon as a friend by them. The greatest sympathy is felt for his widow and family, and his death robs the Service of an excellent officer.

Sixteen sub-lieutenants have this week been promoted, and three assistant-paymasters. These officers' seniority as commissioned officers ranged as follows:—the sub-lieutenants from June 20, 1875, to June 9, 1878; the assistant-paymasters from November 7, 1865, to December 12, 1865. This is quite worth remarking, as showing the different rates of promotion in different branches. And yet their Lordships have had the want of feeling to reduce the apparent position of senior assistant-paymasters by depriving them of the extra distinction lace which was recently granted. This deprivation of a stripe is equivalent to disrating; and it has been done in the face of a special Order in Council granted by her Majesty. But the Board of Admiralty seems to possess unlimited power, and to obtain an Order in Council just as a matter of form, afterwards making what alteration may be deemed fit when the collective wisdom of the Board is brought to bear upon the question under discussion.

It is reported that the defects in the screw of the Euryalus have been ordered to be made the subject of inquiry by a Court assembled at Malta. Probably it will awaken the Admiralty to the desirability of having better dock accommodation in the East, for it is hardly a credit to so great a maritime power that the flag-ship on the East Indies station should be compelled to work her way, a cripple, under convoy, from Bombay to Malta, while his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief is left to fly his flag in any little gunboat which may chance to be handy.

We wish to call the attention of the newly-appointed Director of the Naval Medical Department to the fact that many of the best appointments for senior surgeons have for some time past been given to staff surgeons. These appointments are as follows:—Alexandra, Assistance, Belleisle, Bellerophon, Boscawen, Cambridge, Dasher, Duke of Wellington, Duncan, Excellent, Ganges, Hector, Lily, Hibernia, Lord Warden, Minotaur, Royal Adelaide, St. Vincent, Tyne, Valiant. And just recently the promoted surgeons have been reappointed to:—Bacchante, Téméraire, Malta Hospital. Is this just? All these billets are of the best, especially the last one, and they are, with few exceptions, home appointments. Medical officers with private means have been allowed to retain shore appointments, after promotion, because, they say, of their expenses. Other staff surgeons have obtained junior appointments by interest, saying they would not accept an appointment where they had to take turns with a surgeon, and they are all the time keeping senior surgeons out in the cold. It is to be hoped that those abuses which have prevailed from the top to the bottom of the Medical line under the control of the late Director may now be discontinued.

The following resolution, passed by the Legislative Council of Natal on December 2 last, has been published in the London Gazette:—"That this Council, in the name of the people of Natal, thanks the Imperial Forces, both military and naval, for the gallantry and perseverance with which, under very peculiar and difficult circumstances, they brought to a conclusion the measures deemed necessary by the Imperial Government for breaking up the power of the Zulu king."

Major S. G. Huskisson, half-pay, late 80th Regiment, arrived at Hong Kong on the 2nd ult., by the steamer Glenfinlas, and resumed his duties as assistant-military secretary to Major-General Donovan, C.B., on return from active service at the Cape.

A good deal of indignation appears to have been excited in France, by the sudden removal of General Henrion, from his post at the military school of St. Cyr, where he had commanded to the general satisfaction of his superiors for the last ten years. The present Government appears to have found that the General was not sufficiently Republican, and that he was turning out officers imbued with Conservative notions. His successor, General Cholleton, does not appear to have distinguished himself in any remarkable degree, but his political notions are probably in keeping with those that prevail at present in France.

A French contemporary relates that during the Crimean war, and shortly before the termination of Carnival time, it was proposed to open fire from a new battery, upon which Marshal Canrobert, who is not usually given to joking on such occasions, directed that the said battery should be only unmasked on Ash Wednesday. And it was thus Lent commenced in the Crimea.

A special meeting of the Metropolitan commanding officers will be held this (Saturday) afternoon, to receive the report of the committee appointed on the 17th ult. to make the necessary arrangements for an Easter field-day. Since the appointment of the committee, which consists of Lieutenant-Colonels Lord Ranelagh, Hope, V.C., Vickers, Brown, Radcliffe, Baylis, Routledge, and Lord Truro, it has been actively engaged in prosecuting inquiries. Unlike some previous occasions—notably last year, when ground was not obtainable anywhere—several sites have this year been suggested, those offering the best facilities being Brighton, Aldershot, and Dunstable. There are many and sound reasons in favour of a combined field-day of the Regulars and Volunteers in Hants, and if the proposition had met with better favour than it received from the two companies concerned—the South-Western and South-Eastern—there is little doubt the Volunteers would gladly have participated in it; but as only limited travelling accommodation is available, it may be assumed that the project will be abandoned in favour of Brighton, which offers peculiar facilities for a large field-day, with its extensive area of down-land, on which several memorable sham-fights have been carried out, and the almost unlimited accommodation the town affords for the troops, prior and subsequent to the Bank holiday. The only difficulty in the way of the selection again of the queen of watering-places, was the old one of transit; but this has been overcome, in the words of Mr. Knight, the general manager of the London, Brighton, and South-Coast Railway Company, after "much difficulty and anxiety," and mainly "through the strongly-expressed wish which the Volunteers appear to have to attend Brighton again, and, from what I can learn, the equally strong desire which prevails on the part of the inhabitants of Brighton to receive the Volunteers once more." There is an increase in the terms of conveyance, but it is not believed this will have much effect on the attendance.

The Secretary of State for War evidently does not see his way clearly to a general issue of the Martini-Henry to the Volunteers at present. At any rate, the weapon will not be used in all the competitions for which it has been proposed, at the next Wimbledon meeting. An additional "loan" of a few thousand would have answered that purpose, but it is not considered advisable that the Auxiliaries should be entrusted with them yet.

The letter we published in our last week's issue on the subject of the emoluments of Militia adjutants, is somewhat misleading. The writer refers to regiments whose head-quarters are at Brigade Depôts; but we must point out that there are but 61 regiments, from a total of 123, which are so situated. We have received the following statement, from an Adjutant of a five-company regiment, of his actual pay and allowances for 1879:—

Pay, 365 days, at 11s. 7d. per day	£211	7	1
Lodging allowance, do. 2s. 3d.	41	1	3
Fuel and light allowance, ...	9	12	4
Servant's allowance, do. 1s. 0d.	18	5	0
Forage allowance, do. 1s. 6d.	27	7	6
Stable allowance, do. 9d.	13	13	9
Mess allowance, 83 days, at 4s. 0d	16	12	0
Recruits, Militia, 72 do. 2s. 6d.	9	0	0
Do. Line, 14 do. 5s. 0d.	3	10	0

A Line captain, with his regiment, receives £211 7s. 1d. pay, quarters in barracks, and fuel. He has to pay mess and band subscriptions, no inconsiderable sum; whereas the adjutant who sends us the above particulars, states that his mess and wine bills (dining every night) average from £12 to £16 for 27 days' training. No doubt this is moderate, and would be exceeded in many regiments; but he shows only 72 Militia and 14 Line recruits raised, which is a very small average, as we believe in some large regiments, adjutants raise as many as 400 and 100 respectively, which would make their allowances on this head alone £75. The expense of change of uniform is moderate, where Militia and Line regiments from which the adjutant comes, wear the same-coloured uniform; and an adjutant is not obliged to keep a horse except during training, the expenses attendant on recruiting being allowed to the extent of the forage allowance. We must warn captains applying for these appointments that the Commander-in-Chief has a strong objection to adjutants resigning before their five years' tenure of office expires. Many applications have been refused, even when applicants were within a few months of completing their term.

In time of war, one conspicuous defect in the military training of the British soldier almost invariably comes forth into prominence. He cannot be compared with the French and other Continental soldiers, in the art of adapting to his necessities whatever may be found capable of adaptation. The armies of the chief Continental States are now provided with spades, so that they may be ready in any emergency to throw up temporary intrenchments to shelter themselves from the fire of the enemy; and proposals have been made, and, to some extent, acted upon, that the elements of veterinary science should be taught to those branches of the Army which are concerned, from the nature of their duties, with horses and other animals of transport. During the wars in New Zealand, the natives were surprised at the inability of the British soldiers to provide themselves with a temporary shelter at night, while they were always able to throw up quickly some rude sort of hut or other shelter. During the present Afghan war, another difficulty has presented itself,—the want of resource and ingenuity exhibited by the British soldiers in the preparation of their food. During the last few years, schools of cookery have been established in all the most important towns of England, under the highest patronage, with a view to remedying what had long been acknowledged to be a great national defect,—the ignorance of the mass of the people as to the proper preparation of food. Our soldiers, during times of peace, have inevitably much leisure, which they do not, as might be expected, always use to the best advantage; the importance of a good system of cookery, even when the most simple materials are employed, is universally admitted; the effects of a good dietary, especially in time of war, upon the health and spirits of the soldiers are also generally acknowledged to be most beneficial; why, then, should not our soldiers have the opportunity of learning, through a brief course of elementary instruction, how to make the most of the food supplied to them? As we have said, in all large centres of population there are now established, in full working order, schools of cookery, each with an efficient staff of instructors. The best mode of preparing preserved meats, soups, vegetables, and other similar materials could easily be imparted to regular classes of soldiers, and the knowledge thus gained would certainly diminish much of the hardship and inconveniences which must always necessarily attend campaigning, even under the most favourable auspices. The system of instruction might be put to a practical test during the autumn manœuvres, and any other similar movements of troops. When on the march, suffering from exposure to heat or cold, from the effects of bad roads and of bad water, and a general deficiency of all sanitary arrangements, the necessity for healthy food, properly prepared, becomes a matter of paramount importance. From an economical point of view, also, this question is well worthy of consideration. Much would be saved which is now hopelessly and recklessly wasted. One other consideration must also be borne in mind. Owing to the short-service system, numbers of men are constantly passing from the ranks of the Army to take their place as members of the civil population, in various trades and callings. The whole community would be gainers if, in addition to the habits of discipline and regularity and the traditions of esprit de corps which they bring back with them, they should also help to spread that knowledge of thrift and economy in food which is, unfortunately, so rare among the working-classes of our population. A short course of instruction, such as we have indicated, could easily be provided for all soldiers quartered in any of the important military stations of the kingdom. The cost would be trifling, while the gain would be inestimable.

In the face of what we have learnt from Dr. Russell and Mr. Archibald Forbes concerning the lack of discipline in South Africa, it is inconceivable that Mr. Otway, Sir Henry Havelock, and Mr. Samuellson should seek to abolish altogether the punishment of flogging. In such places as the Transvaal and Natal, troops returning from a campaign can only be kept in order by fear of the lash. No other effectual punishment is possible. As a commanding officer told Dr. Russell, if he were to carry out his orders fully, he would have no men for duty, as half the regiment would be employed guarding the other half. Those who object to flogging are bound in fairness and common sense to point out some other means of maintaining discipline when before the enemy or in wild districts. This they have not done; their arguments are therefore worthless. It is to be regretted that flogging should be a necessity, but as long as the Army is so uninviting a profession as it now is, there will always be in every regiment a certain number of ruffians only to be kept in order by fear of the lash. Yet these ruffians are the objects of the sympathy of Mr. Otway and Sir Henry Havelock! For our own part, we sympathise rather with the unfortunate inhabitants who are the victims of want of discipline among the soldiers. A good man has no reason to dread the "cat," for no one is obliged to steal, commit drunken assaults, and wreck houses.

The Gazette of last night contains a further instalment of promotions for the Zulu campaign. Among those selected for brevet promotions are Lieutenant-Colonels Clarke, C.B., 57th Foot; Bond, 58th Foot; Rogers, V.C., 90th Regiment; Major Tongue, 24th Foot; Captains Harvey, 71st Foot; Stewart, 3rd Dragoon Guards; Hamilton, 90th Foot; Viscount Downe, 2nd Life Guards; Brunker, 26th Foot; and Murray, 61st Foot. The claims of several of these officers we have referred to from time to time since the appearance of the gazette, and we are indeed glad to find that our remarks had had the desired effect in obtaining a reconsideration of the claims of officers of the expedition generally. No one can well complain that the promotion now granted has in any one case been undeserved.

Last December, we alluded to a rumour which was being noised about by gunners that H Battery A Brigade, R.H.A., although entering upon its fourth year of the delights of Woolwich, and first on the roster for service in Ireland, having returned therefrom in 1863, was to be retained in England; while another battery of the same brigade, namely, A Battery, which left Ireland in 1865, and which, since its return from India, at the same time as the former battery, has had two years of Aldershot, is to be sent to Hibernia in its place. This rumour was soon known to be a true one, by means of exchange agents, who sent circulars to all the officers whose batteries were down for Ireland, offering them exchanges on liberal terms. It is somewhat curious that these gentlemen should invariably be fully aware of all that is going to emanate from a certain Office, before it is officially announced. We certainly should like to know the reason why a battery is treated with such especial favour. It cannot be because it is considered necessary that it should have a turn of Aldershot before going to Ireland, for another battery also going there has never been to that station. Besides, Newbridge, whither A Battery is bound, is close to the Curragh, the Irish Aldershot, and, as all officers who have been stationed there know, field-days usque ad nauseam are held in that camp. It would appear, then, that, in all fairness, H should be the battery to go there; in which case the roster would be kept, and what is in appearance a job would be avoided. Can it be the same influence that has enabled the officer commanding the battery, by means of repeated exchanges or transfers, to remain himself at Woolwich for five years,—a feat unparalleled in the Royal Artillery?

The Household Brigade Military Open Steeplechases will take place at Sandown Park, on Saturday, March 6, under the Grand National Hunt rules. The events will consist of the 1st Life Guards' Challenge Cup, the Household Brigade Cup, the Household Brigade Hunters Flat Race Plate, the Military and Veterans' Steeplechase Plate, the Army Steeplechase, the Military and Open Hunters Selling Plate, and the Surrey Farmers' Cup.

TORPEDO BOAT COLLISION.

The following are the particulars of the torpedo boat collision which we reported last week:—Four torpedo boats had been detailed off to attempt, during the darkness, to approach the Hecla within a radius of 600 yards, the Hecla using her powerful electric light to detect the boats, and thus disqualify them from action, and her steam pinnace and steam launch for purposes of protection, the boats being supposed to be armed with Whitehead torpedoes. Each torpedo boat is 58 ft. long and about 7 ft. wide, and possesses such powerful though compact machinery as to be capable of realising a speed of sixteen knots an hour. Each was in charge of a naval officer, and has a crew of five, consisting of an artificer, a stoker, a coxswain, and two blue-jackets. The attack commenced about seven o'clock, and the four torpedo boats, having previously steamed into harbour so that the precise moment of their approach should not be known, proceeded out again shortly after the hour. No. 52 boat was in charge of Lieut. Adams, of the Vernon, and had got within the requisite radius when the electric light revealed her, and being within range she was ruled to be placed hors de combat. She then cruised to some half-mile or mile off the Hecla, and remained stationary to watch the progress of the action. She had hardly brought up before No. 54 boat, which was under the direction of Lieut. Thompson, of the Hecla, came into collision with her, her stem striking the port side of No. 52 almost abreast of the funnel. Fortunately, No. 54 boat had seen the other craft, although only when a comparatively few yards distant, and there had been time to reverse her engines. The result was that she struck her, not at a speed of ten, but of six or seven knots. The stationary boat had one of her 18-in. plates bulged through, and her second watertight compartment flooded, but otherwise she was uninjured, and singular to relate, none of her crew were hurt. The other torpedo vessel had her stem knocked completely in, and her forward compartment filled with at least 18 in. of water, but her watertight division prevented the water reaching beyond that compartment. Her crew experienced the full effects of the concussion, but were only severely shaken, none of the glass work giving way, as was the case when the Herreschoff torpedo-boat ran into a steam tug in Stokes Bay. Both torpedo-boats, which were manufactured by Messrs. Thorneycroft, of the Thames, were enabled to steam into harbour without any assistance, and have been placed in the Dockyard camber preparatory to be taken in hand by the dockyard authorities for repairs. The thickness of their fine steel plates is about 1-16th of an inch.

THE RUSSIAN NAVY IN THE EAST.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

Sir,—A friend in China informs me that they were astonished to find the new Russian flagship superior to the Iron Duke in tonnage, in horse-power, in armour, in the number of her crew, and in weight of metal. The guns are 600-pounders, are protected by 12 inches of armour, and her crew number 650 men. It appears singular that no remarks have been made in the papers on the arrival of this formidable vessel, and as my friend is not a seaman he may have been misinformed. At the same time, it is quite evident that the commercial community keep themselves well posted in a subject which at no remote period will be identified with their personal interests. Some of your well-informed readers may be able to explain this rather mysterious affair. I simply relate the tale as it has been told to me.—I am, &c.,

R.N.

The Duchess of Edinburgh, accompanied by the Grand Duke Sergius Alexandrovitch, arrived at St. Petersburg on the 4th inst.

A party of naval cadets—about thirty in number—from the Britannia, arrived at Devonport on Wednesday by rail, and during the day visited the dockyard and Keyham, the Cambridge gunnery-ship in Hamoaze, as well as other objects of interest. They dined at the Royal Hotel; and, on completing their tour of the establishments, the party paid their respects to the Commander-in-Chief, Admiral the Hon. Charles Elliot, C.B., at his official residence, Mount Wise, and took tea at 5 p.m., after which they left by train for Dartmouth. Lieut. Mainwaring was in charge of the party. Other cadets of the Britannia visited Start Point Berry, Pomeroy Castle, and other places of interest.

The Army.

2nd Life Guards. Capt. H. H. Douglas, formerly of the regiment, died at 74 Elsham Road, Kensington, on the 10th inst., aged 80 years.

9th Lancers. Major Abadie, when we heard from Lahore, had passed through on his way to join his regiment, having resigned his staff appointment with the Kandahar Field Force for that purpose. He had accomplished the journey from Kandahar to Lahore with horse and kit in 16 days.

13th Hussars. The racing interest, says the Pioneer, has been hit hard at Lucknow by the exigencies of the Service. The owners of three racing-stables at that place have been sent to the front. Vet.-Surg. Anderson was sent to Kurum; Dr. Thorburn, attached to the 13th Hussars, has been sent to Peshawur; and Vet.-Surg. Garratt, 13th Hussars, has been sent to Jhelum. Mr. Garratt owned nineteen horses.

17th Lancers. Capt. Cooke has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on private affairs.

19th Hussars. Major J. Biddulph, who entered the Indian Staff Corps a few years ago from this regiment, has been specially deputed to the charge of the ex-Ameer at Meerut.

20th Hussars. Lieut.-Col. Lockwood is about to retire on a pension of £600 per annum. The Irish Times states that "Major Chevenix-Trench, now employed as professor of Hindostanee at the Staff College, will succeed to the command of the regiment on the early retirement of Col. Lockwood."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The following batteries are detailed for duty with the Reserve Division in Afghanistan, viz., D-A, I-C, and L-5.

The following appear in Indian General Orders :—Lieut.-Col. C. J. Tyler, R.A., is directed to proceed from Allahabad to Peshawur, for duty with the Royal Artillery at that station. Lieut.-Col. C. B. Le Mesurier, R.A., is directed to proceed from Umballa to Thull, for duty with the Royal Artillery, Kurum District Force. Major F. B. Roberts, R.A., is directed to proceed from Delhi to Deolali, and join No. 9 Baty. 8th Brig., into which he has been permitted to exchange. Capt. T. J. Jones, G Baty. A Brig., is directed to proceed from Lucknow to Meean Meer, to join E Baty. A Brig. R.H.A., for duty. Lieut. R. L. S. Vassal, R.A., is directed to proceed from Bareilly to Mooltan, for duty with H Baty. 1st Brig. Lieut. P. L. Williams, E Baty. 4th Brig., is directed to proceed from Jullundur to Lundi Kotal, and join No. 11 Baty. 9th Brig. R.A., for duty.

D Baty. 2nd Brig. arrived in Bombay from Kurrachee about the 18th ult. It was to have encamped for a few days, and marched hence to Ahmednuggur. The No. 1 Mountain Battery, at Rajkote, is under orders to proceed to Poona. The battery is very weak, half the men having been transferred to No. 2 Baty., which is on service.

The following officers have been granted leave of absence from India to England, all on medical certificate, viz. :—Capt. N. M. Burt, 8th Brig.; Lieut. E. Peel, 9th Brig.; Lieut. R. G. W. Hepburne, C Brig. R.H.A., and Vet.-Surg. S. Gillespie, A Brig. R.H.A.

Lieut. W. J. Tydd has been appointed inspector of police at St. Vincent.

The Woolwich correspondent of the Morning Post states that "the two batches of gentlemen cadets who are to be hastened forward for commissions in the ensuing double term are to be devoted, in a much larger proportion than usual, to the Royal Artillery, which is far more in need of replenishing than its sister-corps, the Royal Engineers."

Brevet-Col. H. T. Arbuthnot, 4th Brig., succeeds Col. F. Close as superintendent of the Small Arms Factory at Enfield. He served previously at the Birmingham factory as assist.-superintendent.

Capt. J. R. Slade, R.H.A., has been ordered to embark forthwith to join the E Baty. B Brig. at Candahar.

The P Baty. 3rd Brig. is to join the 7th Brig. on its conversion into garrison artillery, and will become the 20th Baty. It will leave Ireland towards the end of this month for Devonport, after having handed over the horses, guns, and equipment to the F Baty. 6th Brig.

Lieut. E. F. Dawson, 6th Brig., died at Secunderabad on the 10th ult., aged 28 years. The deceased, who was a son of the late Mr. H. Dawson, 6th Carabineers, entered the Service, Aug. 2, 1871.

A telegram to the Times, dated Cape Town, Feb. 11, states that Lieut.-Col. Brackenbury and Capt. Curling have left for India in H.M.S. Malabar.

Capt. G. B. N. Martin is acting as garrison instructor at Gibraltar.

Major C. R. Buckle's battery, 6th Brig., now on passage from India, will be sent to Athlone on arrival, to replace the P Baty. 3rd Brig.

Major Walton's battery of Royal Horse Artillery will be brought over from Ireland in the spring, and will probably be quartered at Woolwich. If the roster is adhered to, its relief will be found in the battery commanded by Major Talbot.

Capts. J. F. Maurice and W. G. Knox, 10th Brig., arrived home from the Cape on Wednesday, in the mail steamer Nubian.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The following account is furnished of the unfortunate accident which resulted in the loss of Capt. Dundas, V.C., and Lieut. Nugent, before Cabul :—"A sad accident occurred in another fort. Capt. Dundas, V.C., and Lieut. Nugent, R.E., had constructed three mines, which were to destroy the walls and towers, and all being ready, they went back to light the fuses. The Sappers were drawn up outside under their European non-commissioned officer, and noticed that two of the mines exploded almost instantly. Their officers were still within the walls, and when the dust and smoke cleared away they were missing. Search was made, and the bodies of Capt. Dundas and Lieut. Nugent were found lying under the débris. Both officers were dead. It is conjectured that the time-fuses, instead of burning slowly, flared up like a train of powder, and that the mines exploded a few seconds after the fuses were lighted. We have thus lost two good officers, by an accident which might have been prevented, if the equipment of the Sappers had not been cut down by the parsimony of the Government. So few fuses were sent up from India when the force advanced upon Cabul that the Engineers had to make others, and these were of course defective. It was those of their own make which were being used when the explosion occurred."

The appointment of instructor in surveying, at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, has become vacant by the death of Major M. Lambert, which occurred at South Shoebury Rectory, on the 6th inst., from double pneumonia. Major Lambert entered the Army, June 21, 1856, and became Major, Aug. 26, 1873.

Lieut.-Col. F. E. Pratt, who died on the 7th inst. at Edinburgh, was the son of the late Gen. Sir Thomas S. Pratt, K.C.B. He obtained his commission in June, 1851, and was employed, in the first instance, on the fortifications at Alderney. In the spring of 1853 he was ordered to Turkey, and entrusted with the duty of forming landing-piers at Varna for the troops of the Crimean expedition. He then accompanied Capt. Bent, R.E., to the Danube, and assisted in throwing across a bridge of boats at Rustchuk, and forming the tête du pont at Giurgevo. For this service he received the rarely-awarded distinction of the gold medal of the Medjidie. He was present at the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and served throughout the whole of the siege of Sebastopol in the trenches of the right attack. After the Crimean war he was appointed to the Ordnance Survey, on which he was employed for twelve years. In 1866, he was made instructor in surveying to the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, and two years later filled a similar position at Chatham. In 1876 he was made Surveyor-General of the newly-acquired colony of Fiji, and to the hard work, indifferent food, and continuous exposure there experienced must be attributed his decease, at the comparatively early age of 47. The funeral took place, with military honours, on the 11th inst., the General and Staff of the district being present, and all the available troops, the 6th Inniskilling Dragoons and the 50th Regt., forming the procession. The chief mourners were the sons of the deceased, Capt. P. C. Pratt, R.A., and Major Sitwell, R.E.

12th Regiment. Capt. Dowse is transferred from the 2nd to the 1st Batn., on promotion.

13th Light Infantry. The Western Morning News says :—"We regret to see that the battalion of the 13th Regiment, now at Devonport, is to be further denuded of some of its best men, by drafts for the 17th and 48th Regiments, now in India. It is this system of volunteering from one regiment to another, from home service for foreign service, which was so severely criticised by Lieut.-Gen. the Hon. Leicester Smyth at the recent Chamber of Commerce dinner. It tends to destroy all the regimental esprit de corps, and to leave the battalions at home mere skeletons, consisting largely of youthful raw recruits. In bribing men by a bounty, too often squandered in debauchery, to leave their own regiment for another, the whole scheme of recruiting, rising, and training the soldier is upset, and officers are disheartened, and cease to take pride in men who may any day be withdrawn from their control. The expedient may be necessary, but it is none the less regretable."

14th Regiment. Capt. Gordon remains with the 2nd Batn., on promotion.

16th Regiment. Major Cholmeley and Capt. Becher remain with the 2nd Batn., on promotion.

17th Regiment. Lieut. Buller obtains his company, vice Capt. Turner, appointed to the Pay Department. Lieut. Reader, 1st Batn., has been recommended for the adjutancy, vice Anderson, promoted.

18th Royal Irish. The Lahore paper says :—"The 1st Batn. 18th left Ferozepore for Peshawur, to join the Reserve Division, on the 4th current (of January), and are expected at Lahore on the 8th, whence they will proceed by rail."

20th Regiment. Capt. Randall is transferred from the 1st to the 2nd Batn., on promotion.

21st Fusiliers. 2nd Lieut. Smythe, 1st Batn., has been granted leave from India to England to July 14, on private affairs.

22nd Regiment. It has been officially announced at Aldershot that H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has approved of Brevet Major W. C. F. Molyneux, 1st Batn. 22nd Regt., being appointed brigade-major of the 3rd Infantry Brigade, in succession to Brevet Major R. W. Gordon, 93rd Highlanders, whose term of service in the appointment has expired. Pymr. (Major) Davidson, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate.

23rd Fusiliers. The 2nd Batn. was to have embarked at Gibraltar yesterday in the steamer Ontario, for conveyance to Plymouth.

24th Regiment. A Reuter's telegram, dated Gibraltar, Feb. 12, states that "the Ontario arrived here this morning from the Cape, with the 2nd Batn. 24th Regt. on board." [A telegram, dated Cape Town, Jan. 20, says :—"Lieut.-Col. Carrington is in Maritzburg. Considerable excitement has been created by some statements which have been published with regard to the burial of the dead at Isandula. Several persons who have visited the battle-field have reported that the parties previously sent to bury the dead did not finish their work. Two miles off, on the left front, the missing companies of the 24th were discovered, and on the right front, a similar distance away, bodies were found lying thick on the grass. Major Russell's body has been found among the dead. A party of civilians is about to leave for the battle-field from Maritzburg to complete the interment. Before the embarkation of the 24th at Durban, an address was presented to the Rorke's Drift heroes, when Col. Dunbar said that had the system of 'laagering' and forming square to resist assegais been adopted before that memorable day, his dear old company, Company M, would have been as successful at Isandula as B Company at Rorke's Drift."

25th Regiment. Capt. Hope, 1st Batn., has been appointed to the charge of the treasury chest at Lundi Kotal, vice Capt. Morris, 12th Foot. Lieut. and Adjt. Beadnell has been granted leave from India to England, to appear before a medical board.

ROYAL MARINES.

The Hampshire Telegraph states that the Admiralty had been in correspondence with the War Office as to the employment of Marines as boats' crews for the Generals commanding at the home ports. The Admiralty objected to this custom being any longer continued, and it has now been arranged that the boats' crews shall remain at the disposal of the present General officers commanding at Portsmouth and Plymouth, but on their being relieved, the men will return to duty at head-quarters.

An exchange on the officers' foreign-service roster has been sanctioned between Lieuts. F. E. Hast and G. T. Onslow, R.M.L.I.

51st Light Infantry. Lieut. Thackwell is performing the duties of provost-marshal, 2nd Brig., Khyber Division, Cabul Field Force.

56th Regiment. Lieut. Ricketts has been reported qualified for promotion to the rank of captain, having passed the special examination held at Portsmouth in December last.

59th Regiment. Capt. Sartorius has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate.

60th Rifles. Capt. de Robeck, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate. Capt. Bircham, 3rd Batn., is about to be appointed to the adjutancy of the 11th Middlesex (St. George's) R.V.

63rd Regiment. Consequent on the death of Capt. Day, the Committee of Paymastership has been reconstructed, and now consists of Capts. Gwynne, Palmer, and Cook.

65th Regiment. Lieut. Wilmer, having passed the higher standard in Hindostanee, has been appointed interpreter, vice Lieut. Ford.

67th Regiment. Capt. Seton is performing the duties of provost-marshal to the Cabul Field Force.

70th Regiment. Lieut. Burnaby obtains his company, vice Capt. Tibbs, retired.

74th Highlanders. The appearance of this fine corps, when landed from the Orontes at Greenock, was greatly admired. They are a remarkably fine body of well-seasoned and comparatively old soldiers, soon, alas! to be (like the 13th) sent to fill up the ranks of other corps. Their turn-out in faultless clothing, with snow-white helmets and neatly-folded puggeries, looked, as many military men in the crowd remarked, more like a regiment on guard mounting parade than one landing in midwinter from a crowded transport after a long voyage. Lieut.-Gen. Bruce inspected the regiment at Maryhill Barracks, Glasgow, on the 5th inst, and expressed himself as highly pleased with their smart and clean appearance, their admirable marching, and the way they stood under arms. He also remarked that he had seen many 74th men on furlough in Edinburgh and elsewhere, and that they looked as smart as if going to a General's inspection.

77th Regiment. Brevet Lieut.-Col. Bengough, who lately, the Irish Times says, returned home from special service at Natal, has been noted for employment on the Staff of the Army. The regt. embarked at Kingstown on Wednesday in H.M.S. Assistance, for conveyance to Dover

80th Regiment. A Reuter's telegram, dated Cape Town, Jan. 20, says :—"It is now understood that the 80th Regiment will embark at Natal, instead of marching to Cape Town viâ Kimberley."

83rd Regiment. Capt. Davonport is to join the depôt at Belfast for two years.

84th Regiment. In the House of Commons, on Monday, Mr. Freshfield asked the Secretary of State for War why the 84th Regt., leaving for Ireland on Tuesday, were to be moved, at great inconvenience and expense, to Sheerness, instead of being embarked at Dover. Col. Stanley: The troops have been sent to the place where the Admiralty sent a vessel to embark them. I understand that the Admiralty do not think it advisable for a large transport vessel to be alongside Dover Pier at this time of year. The regiment disembarked at Kingstown on Wednesday from H.M.S. Assistance, and took over quarters in the Beggars' Bush Barracks. The Irish Times says :—"It is now nearly sixteen years since this regiment, under the command of Col. T. Lightfoot, C.B. (now Major-Gen.), was quartered in the Royal Barracks, from whence it proceeded to Malta, and after a short service there to Jamaica, where it lost a considerable number of men from yellow fever. The service companies were afterwards moved to Halifax, Nova Scotia, from whence the regiment returned home in 1871."

86th Regiment. Lieut.Col. Adams, commanding the regiment, has addressed to us the following letter :—"Sir,—May I request your insertion of a few words in regard to the remarks which appeared in your last impression, opposite the 86th Regt.? The exceeding bad-taste of the puffs direct needs no comment,—it only disgusts; but I wish to notice the reflections unjustly cast on two other regiments, expressed or implied. If the 86th Regt. left Chatham station with less confusion than attended the departure of the 2nd Batn. 5th Fusiliers, it was due to the experience gained on that occasion, so that arrangements were made by the Chatham Staff to prevent that crowding by the mob with which the Fusiliers had to contend on the platform. In regard to the 49th Regt., I have only to observe that no complaint was made by me, nor was occasion given for any, on account of the state of any building handed over by that corps, and, moreover, that the ease with which the 86th Regt. settled into their new quarters was much due to the friendly assistance given by that regiment."

88TH REGIMENT. Capt. and Brevet Lieut.-Col. Dalrymple has joined Lord Lytton's staff at Calcutta, as A.D.C. as we stated last week it was reported he was about to do. Capt. Maher has volunteered for Transport Service in Afghanistan.

90TH LIGHT INFANTRY. The Lahore paper gives the following particulars of Lieut. Parkinson's death, which we announced last week:—"At Lucknow, on the 5th, Lieut. Parkinson, of the 73rd Regiment, whilst trying a horse, was thrown and received concussion of the brain. He remained insensible until the following day, when he died. The deceased was a popular and promising officer. He had not been in the Service quite two years."

91ST HIGHLANDERS. Lieuts. Schank and Goff arrived home from the Cape on Wednesday in the mail steamer Nubian.

95TH REGIMENT. Lieut. Gosset proceeds to Hythe on the 1st prox., to qualify for the appointment of adjutant.

98TH REGIMENT. Pymr. (Capt.) E. Hunter, on the Half-pay List, died on Dec. 25.

100TH REGIMENT. 2nd Lieut. Short has been appointed Instructor in Army signalling, vice Capt. Shepherd. The annual athletic sports came off on New Year's Day at Sealkote, and were in every way a success. On Christmas Day the colonel and officers visited the men's quarters. Rooms were handsomely decorated with evergreens and mottoes. In the evening the married officers and their wives dined in the mess, as the guests of the bachelors. On Dec. 30th the usual Christmas treat for the children came off, and was a decided success.

102ND FUSILIERS. Lieut. Mills has been appointed acting A.D.C. to Major-Gen. W. Welby, C.B., commanding in Ceylon, vice Lieut. Nelson, 12th Lancers, resigned.

104TH FUSILIERS. Lieut.-Col. Græme completes his five years in command on the 25th inst.

RIFLE BRIGADE. We hear from Peshawur that Capt. Mansel, 4th Batn., joins Gen. Ross's staff in Afghanistan as aide-de-camp.

1ST WEST INDIA REGIMENT. Lieut. Marshall has been appointed garrison-adjutant at Belize, British Honduras, vice Lieut. Bor.

2ND WEST INDIA REGIMENT. According to the Standard, "the Government of the Transvaal will be administered by Col. Lanyon, C.B., C.M.G., pending the arrival of Sir Garnet Wolseley in England, when the whole question of the future Government of our South African possessions will be discussed at the Colonial Office."

58TH BRIGADE DEPOT (Stirling). The officers of the garrison gave, on the 30th ult., a very successful amateur theatrical performance, concluding with a dance, which was kept up till a late hour, the reel and Highland schottische being danced with great vigour. A theatre was erected in the large mess-room, which is adorned with old armour and regimental trophies. The pieces performed were "A Blighted Being" and "Delicate Ground," the characters being well sustained by Capt. and Mrs. Godfrey, Mr. Hughes-Hallett (72nd Highlanders), Mr. Day (Ordnance Store Department), and Dr. Coats. On Dec. 15, a similar entertainment was given, the pieces being "Number One Round the Corner" and "Ruth's Romance."

COMMISSARIAT AND TRANSPORT DEPARTMENT. Assist.-Comy. J. Nethersole, on the Half-pay List, died on the 12th ult.

ORDNANCE STORE DEPARTMENT. Comy. T. Sparkes has left England for Ceylon, to relieve Comy. C. W. Elphinstone-Holloway, in charge at that station.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT. Surg.-Gen. C. A. Gordon, M.D., C.B., has been appointed principal medical officer of the Southern District, on return to England from India. The announcement published touching the fusion of the British and Indian Medical Department will, the Madras Mail anticipates, create dismay in the minds of the members of the old Indian Medical Department. Those who entered before the assumption of the Indian Raj by her Majesty, will have seen their hopes of promotion to administrative ranks becoming "smaller by degrees and beautifully less" for some time past, and now, at one cruel blow, any faint hopes they might have entertained will be cruelly dissipated. In 1855 there were about eleven administrative officers—eight superintending surgeons, and three members of the Board—all drawing good salaries; after March 31 next there will be four only, and these drawing inferior pay. It would be contrary to all precedent to suppose that Government intend to deprive officers of all chance of promotion without, as in the case of the Staff Corps, offering some compensating advantages. If officers were allowed to count all their service for pension, furlough leave not being deducted, and allowed their annuities immediately on payment of the balance due, many men who now bewail having entered a service the prospects of which are so cruelly blighted, would be willing to go. Surg.-Major T. W. Orwin has been granted leave from India to England, on medical certificate. The Madras Times says:—"The amalgamation of the Indian and British Medical Service, will create the following changes in the administration of the Medical Department:—Surg.-Gen. Crawford, A.M.D., is to be Surg.-Gen. of the Medical Department, assisted by Surg.-Major G. Bidie, M.B., I.M.S., as secretary; Surg.-Gen. [G. Smith, M.D., I.M.S., is to retire from the Service, and Surg.-Major G. Mouat, M.D., A.M.D., and at present secretary to the Surg.-Gen., B.M.S., will return to Europe, his five years' tenure of office in India having very nearly expired. As the number of deputy-surgeons-general of the two services is to be reduced from nine to six, and the Presidency and Mysore Circles are to be placed in charge of deputy-surgeons-general of the Army Medical Department, changes must follow among the deputy-surgeons-generals of the Indian Medical Service. Dr. J. Wilson, of Bangalore, is to be appointed to the Hyderabad Subsidiary Force, in room of Dr. van Someren, who retires from the Service. Dr. Oswald, M.D., will continue as deputy surgeon-general of the Southern Circle, and Dr. Theobalds, M.D., of the Nagpore Force. Dr. Colvin Smith, M.D., is to be appointed deputy-surgeon-general of the British Burmah Division, in place of Dr. J. M. Joseph, M.D., who will have to revert to executive duties. The above changes apply only to the military section of the Medical Service. The Civil Medical Department is to be placed under the orders of the Chief Secretary to Government, assisted by an under-secretary, who is to be an officer of the Indian Medical Service. Rumour has it that Dr. Cornish, the Sanitary Commissioner, has been selected for this post."

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT. The Lahore paper has the following:—"The Veterinary Department is doing admirable service in respect of the transport depots at Peshawur and Jhelum. At the former station the depôt hospital for sick animals, superintended by Vet.-Surg. Skoulding, R.H.A., has over 1,500 under treatment, nearly all of them from Cabul and the intermediate stations. The majority of these animals will be again rendered serviceable. At Jhelum the infirmary contains over 1,200 sick cattle under the superintendence of the Principal Vet.-Surg., to whose administrative ability is due the merit of a systematic and energetic working of the department in a direction hitherto untried. Two hundred baggage animals are discharged weekly on an average from each of these veterinary hospitals, and returned fit for service, where formerly they would have been sacrificed for want of care, rest, and attention. The veterinary staff both at Jhelum and Peshawur should be strengthened; at the latter station about 150 animals arrive daily, draughted from all parts of India. Constant inspection is therefore necessary to prevent the introduction of infectious disorders, and the work on the present establishment is extremely harassing."

CHAPLAINS' DEPARTMENT. The Queen has conferred an Army chaplaincy on the Rev. George Smith, late incumbent of the parish of Estcourt, in the colony of Natal. This gentleman, on the day of Isandula, espied from some high ground the Zulu advance on the Buffalo. He hurried to Rorke's Drift to warn the troops, and remained there through the night of the defence. Subsequently he volunteered to bury the bodies of Lieuts. Melville and Coghill, and was present at the battle of Ulundi. His gallant conduct in a previous Kaffir war had drawn attention to him. The death is announced of the Rev. T. Unsworth, on the Half-pay List, late Roman Catholic Chaplain.

MILITIA.

HIGHLAND RIFLES. Col. Ross, commanding this regiment, writes:—"I was much surprised to see, in your last number, the Highland Rifle Militia mentioned as one of the rifle Militia regiments that is unopposed to the change to red. The regiment under my command is very proud of being the Highland Rifle Militia. We have worn the green for five-and-twenty years, and would very much regret if we were now to lose that distinction."

THE VOLUNTEERS.

HON. ARTILLERY COMPANY. The Queen has been graciously pleased to accept a copy of the second and concluding volume of the "History of the Honourable Artillery Company," by Capt. G. A. Raikes, F.S.A.

The Indian Army.

5TH BENGAL CAVALRY. By latest accounts from Lahore, the regiment had passed through that station, en route to join the Reserve Division at Peshawur.

12TH BENGAL CAVALRY. The Lahore paper has the following:—"We hear from the front that forage for horses is scarce at Cabul, and that with a view to economising the stock in hand, Gen. Roberts is sending away two native cavalry regiments from Sherpur, the 12th and 14th Bengal Cavalry. These corps will, however, be employed at and between posts on the lines of communication." Gen. Hugh Gough, V.C., C.B., had a narrow escape in the action before Sherpur, when he was knocked over by a Snider bullet, which must have been nearly spent. It cut through his poshteen in the right breast, but was caught in the folds of woollen vest, and fell at his feet as he shook himself together again.

13TH BENGAL CAVALRY. Lieut. C. E. W. Macdonald, 6th Cavalry, doing duty with the 18th Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed officiating squadron-officer. Lieut. G. H. Lumsden, from the 8th Bengal Cavalry, has been appointed officiating squadron-officer, on probation.

14TH BENGAL CAVALRY. Lieut. C. G. F. Fagan, from the 7th Bengal Cavalry, and Lieut. W. C. Pollard, from the 16th Bengal Cavalry, have been appointed officiating squadron-officers, on probation.

1ST BENGAL N.I. Major G. Atkins has applied for leave to England, on medical certificate.

3RD BENGAL N.I. Capt. H. P. Kirke, Bengal Infantry, attached to the regiment, has been transferred for duty to the 27th N.I.

9TH BENGAL N.I. has joined the Reserve Division, for service in Afghanistan. The 9th being also ordered to the front, Capt. H. O. Woodhouse, cantonment magistrate, Meean Meer, will not be able to take up the appointment of cantonment magistrate of that station.

10TH BENGAL N.I. Lieut. A. M'L. Mills has been appointed to officiate as Adjt. of the Calcutta Volunteers, vice Capt. Hutchison, appointed to the staff of the Reserve Division at Peshawur.

16TH BENGAL N.I. has joined the Reserve Division for service in Afghanistan.

32ND BENGAL N.I. (PIONEERS). The regiment has been posted to the Reserve Division for service in Afghanistan. Major A. C. W. Crookshank, officiating military secretary to Lord Lytton, rejoins head-quarters, in order to accompany his regiment on service.

41ST BENGAL N.I. The Lahore paper says:—"The 41st N.I. marched out of Morar on the morning of Jan. 4 in great spirits, the bands of the 62nd Foot and 17th N.I. playing, the General and many other officers accompanying the exit from cantonments. The regiment proceeds by rail from Dholepore to Jhelum, and thence proceeds by route march to Peshawur. The European officers' complement is strictly according to the modern scale for field service—viz., one commandant, one captain, and one subaltern, probationer, sepoys 730. Capt. H. M. Rose, D.A.Q.M.G., Gwalior District, has rejoined his regiment, proceeding on service."

1ST GOORKHAS has joined the Reserve Division in Afghanistan.

5TH GOORKHAS. The following divisional order, expressing regret at the death of Major Cook, was published by Gen. Roberts during the investment of Sherpur:—"It is with deep regret the Lieutenant-General announces to the Cabul Field Force the death, from a wound received on Dec. 12, of Major John Cook, V.C., 5th Goorkhas. While yet a young officer, Major Cook served at Umbeyla in 1863, where he distinguished himself; and in the Black Mountain campaign in 1868. Joining the Kurum Field Force on its formation, Major Cook was present at the capture of the Peiwar Kotal, his conduct on that occasion earning for him the admiration of the whole force and the Victoria Cross. In the return in the Mongbyr Pass he again brought himself prominently to notice by his cool and gallant bearing. In the capture of the heights at Sung-i-Nawishta, Major Cook again distinguished himself; and in the attack on the Takht-i-Shahr peak, on Dec. 12, he ended a noble career in a manner worthy even of his great name for bravery. By Major Cook's death her Majesty has lost the services of an officer who would, had he been spared, have risen to the highest honours of his profession, and Sir F. Roberts feels sure the whole Cabul Field Force will share in the pain his loss has occasioned him."

4TH PUNJAB INFANTRY. The regiment has returned to India from the Kurum force, and has taken over quarters at Bannu.

1ST SIKH INFANTRY have taken over quarters at Kohat on return from Kurum.

4TH SIKHS. The Lahore paper says:—"Major A. Scott, V.C., on recruiting duty at Amritsur, has been ordered to Cabul as wing-commander of one of the native regiments short of officers, being relieved at Amritsur by Major Finnis from Gardaspore."

4TH MADRAS LIGHT CAVALRY. Brevet Major W. W. Hooper has returned to duty as squadron-officer, on the expiration of his leave to England.

1ST MADRAS N.I. has been told off for duty in Afghanistan with the Reserve Division.

9TH MADRAS N.I. Major J. A. Richmond, wing-commander, has been granted leave to England, on medical certificate.

12TH MADRAS N.I. Col. W. J. Vizard, commandant, has been granted leave to England for two years, on medical certificate.

15TH MADRAS N.I. has been told off for service in Afghanistan with the Reserve Division.

24TH MADRAS N.I. Major F. H. Vanderzee has resumed duty as wing officer, on return to India from leave in England.

27TH MADRAS N.I. The Madras Times says:—"The 27th has received orders by telegram from army head-quarters in Bengal to start at once from Cawnpore for Gwalior by rail and marching. It is to be replaced at Cawnpore by a Bengal regiment from Rawul Pindee that requires a bracing climate. The 27th have been only three months at Cawnpore. The climate of Cawnpore is described as being very cold just now, and fever is still prevalent." The officer commanding at Cawnpore, Brigdr.-Gen. Banbury, has issued the following complimentary order:—"Cawnpore, Jan. 7, 1880.—The 27th M.N.I. being under orders to leave the station for Morar, the commanding officer desires to express his regret at the loss of so excellent a regiment. The conduct of all ranks during their stay at Cawnpore has been most exemplary, and the commanding officer is satisfied that the regiment, wherever it may be placed, will do credit to the army of which it is so worthy a representative."

29TH MADRAS N.I. Capt. J. J. Fletcher, wing-officer, has been granted leave to England for two years.

32ND MADRAS N.I. Capt. A. Chaplain has resigned duty as wing-officer, on return to India from leave in England.

5TH BOMBAY N.I. The regiment left for the front on the 13th ult. in charge of Cols. F. Roome, A. A. Des Vœux, and R. A. C. Hunt, Capt. R. Hennell, Lieut. C. O. Nicholetts, and Surg.-Major Thorpe.

16TH BOMBAY N.I. The Indian Government s.s. Tenasserim sailed from Bombay on the 11th ult. for Kurrachee, with 11 officers, 15 native commanding officers, and 570 rank and file of the regiment. The following is the list of officers:—Col. T. W. W. Pierce, Lieut.-Col. T. S. Iredell, Capt. J. R. Watson and J. T. Carruthers, Lieuts. H. W. Seymour and J. S. Ashby, and Surg. Eaton.

The final sentence of the court-martial appointed to inquire into the loss of the Grosser Kurfürst has been officially promulgated. Admiral Batsch, the commander of the squadron, is blamed for reducing the space between the several vessels from four hectometres to one hectometre when the locality and circumstances must have counselled him to exceed rather than to shorten the ordinary distance. The Admiral's conduct is, however, excused by his zeal to raise the seamanship and manœuvring capacity of the crews. As regards the mistake committed at the helm of the König Wilhelm, it is evident that, terrified by the vessel not obeying the rudder with the requisite despatch, the men at the critical moment hesitated or misunderstood for a second the command given. The depositions are, however, too contradictory to admit of a distinct charge being formulated. Thirdly, it is regarded as proven that the Kurfürst would not have sunk had not the entrance-doors to the hollow space between the side walls been inadvertently left open. This guilty negligence is attributed to Lieutenant Fouque, who perished in the disaster. In conclusion, it may be observed that Admiral Batsch has been temporarily removed from active service, and is employed in the bureaux of the Admiralty.—Standard.

INDIA.

The following message by the Queen-Empress was published last month at Cabul:—"I cannot sufficiently express my satisfaction at, and thankfulness for, the great victory gained by Gen. Roberts on the 23rd. Pray convey to him my high sense of the conduct of my brave troops, and my deep concern at the loss of life and anxiety for the wounded." Another congratulatory telegram was received from the Secretary of State for India. Gen. Roberts published the following:—"The Lieutenant-General feels sure that the gracious message of the Queen-Empress will afford the troops under his command as much pleasure as it has afforded him. The Cabul Field Force may well feel proud of the high honour thus bestowed upon them, and of her Majesty's appreciation of their services, and he (the Lieutenant-General) desires to place on record his sense of the good work performed by the troops under his command against an enemy vastly superior in numbers, and at the time of the year when the inclemency of the climate added considerably to the hardships of all ranks, and which were cheerfully undergone by all."

The new arrangements for the control of our communications and transport are as follows:—Brigdr.-Gen. Hugh Gough has charge of the entire line from Cabul to Jumrood. Col. Low, 13th Bengal Cavalry, is director of transport with the force at and about Cabul. Col. Heathcote is director of transport with Gen. Bright's division, in relief of Col. Lockhart, now Assist-Qrmr.-Gen. with Gen. Roberts.

The Indian Daily News says:—"It is not difficult to see why Sir Edwin Johnson has refused the post of Commander-in-Chief in Madras. The Army Commission has sent in its recommendations, and the abolition of the Madras post is known to be one of the things that has found favour in its sight. It may be that Sir Edwin will not risk being abolished like Mr. Hume, and prefers his seat in the Council."

The Naga expedition is assuming proportions which are only insignificant in proportion to the operations in the North-West. The cost of commissariat supplies alone for the Naga expedition for the three months from October last to December amounted to £50,000, and a further sum of £20,000 for the same department has been sanctioned. It has been definitely proved that the raid upon the Cachar tea-gardens was by the Angamis, a tribe of the Nagas. Sir S. Bayley, the Chief Commissioner of Assam, has been at Calcutta on business connected with the expedition.

The following officers of the Madras Army will become entitled to colonel's allowances during the present year:—Cols. W. E. White, C. Hight, G. Pringle, J. J. Fulton, J. G. Touch, R. M. Macdonald, P. S. Cunningham, L. W. Buck, A. B. Marsack, C. S. Elliot, H. H. Firth, and De S. Barrow. Col. Macdonald is the Director of Public Instruction in the Madras Presidency, an appointment he is not likely to hold after June. Col. Buck is commanding at Rumpa, and will be lucky if he gets that "war" finished by the time he gets his allowances. Cols. White, Hight, Pringle, Touch, Scott Elliot, and Firth are already on furlough in Europe, in anticipation of the allowances. Col. Fulton is commanding the 32nd N.I., Col. Cunningham the 3rd, and Col. Marsack the 34th Regts. Col. De Symonds Barrow is Deputy-Inspector-General of Police in Oude.

The following is a correct detail of the troops to form the reserve division under General Ross, so far as yet known at Peshawur:—Artillery—D-A. Royal Horse Artillery, I-C. Royal Horse Artillery, L-5 Royal Artillery. Cavalry—8th Hussars, 4th Bengal Cavalry, Central India Horse. Infantry—1-5th Fusiliers, 2-14th Foot, 1-25th Foot, 9th Bengal N.I., 16th Bengal N.I., 32nd Bengal N.I., 41st Bengal N.I., 1st Ghoorkhas, 1st Madras N.I., and 15th Madras N.I. The constitution of the staff we have already published.

Service in India does not seem to be popular with our short-service soldiers, for a Bengal paper states that when orders were received not long ago to re-engage 3,000 time-expired men, only 125 volunteered.

Sir Neville Chamberlain has addressed the Madras Government on the subject of providing the sepoys of the Madras Army with clothing of the same pattern as that worn by the Bengal sepoys. The Local Government approve of the proposed change, but the sanction of the Supreme Government is required.

Lieut.-Col. J. H. E. Johnson, Madras S.C., officiating Staff officer of Madras, died on the 10th ult. from an overdose of chloral.

Cols. T. Wright, C.B. (Brig.-Gen. Wright, commanding Hyderabad Contingent), and G. B. Mainwaring, Bengal S.C., have been admitted to colonel's allowances, with effect from Jan. 8, 1880.

An Indian good-service pension is vacant, in consequence of Brigadier-Gen. Wright, C.B., Bengal S.C., having succeeded to his colonel's allowances from the 8th ultimo.

Lieut.-Col. J. Williams, Madras Infantry, is about to retire, on a pension of £365, and special annuity of £324 18s.

A Reuter's telegram, dated Calcutta, Feb. 7, states that "Gen. Sir Frederick P. Haines, the commander-in-chief in India, will proceed to Peshawur on the 20th inst."

We are in a position to announce that the Secretary of State for India in Council, after consultation with the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury and reference to the Government of India, has decided that the rate of exchange for the adjustment of Indian pay and allowances, and of retrenchments, family remittances, and messing money claims, shall be 1s. 8½d. the rupee during the official year commencing on April 1, 1880.—Home News.

Contrary to the general belief prevalent at the termination of last Session, it is understood that no further steps will be taken by the House of Commons in the case of Mr. Grissel, who, it will be recollected, was committed to Newgate, by order of the House, for breach of privilege, on the charge of endeavouring to influence the decision of a Select Committee, and who only surrendered two days before the termination of the Session, and consequently suffered but 48 hours' imprisonment, being liberated the moment the House rose.

THE "CARMICHAEL"
PORTABLE BOOT-TREE.

A want long felt has just been supplied by this most important invention. All sportsmen and military men know the great advantage of having both their long and short boots treed up every day, especially after they have been wet, but there is often great inconvenience in carrying about the boot-trees.

An officer in the 5th Lancers has lately hit upon the idea that an India-rubber tree, which, with ease, can be carried in the pocket, can, when put inside the boot, be inflated, filling out the boot tightly, and so making it an impossibility to shrink.

For officers on active service, autumn manœuvres, or whenever it is impossible to carry wooden trees, this invention will be invaluable.

This invention is patented for Great Britain and other countries.

Orders should be sent as early as possible, accompanied by an old boot as a pattern, to

TIC-SANO.—As the almost Arctic severity of the present winter has brought many diseases in its train, especially those of a neuralgic, rheumatic, and gouty nature, it is satisfactory to learn that a new remedy of a most efficacious and invaluable kind, called Tic Sano, has been discovered.

Extract from the Civil Service Gazette of December 13, 1879:—"All classes of society will learn with the greatest satisfaction of an undoubted remedy for Neuralgia, Gout, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Nervous and Sick Headaches, Gravel, and other most painful disorders, which has been discovered. It is known as RUSSELL'S TIC-SANO, is of a vegetable nature, and is consequently of a completely harmless kind, and much to be preferred to the thousand and one remedies and so-called specifics which have already made their appearance amongst us. It has also a wonderful effect upon the digestive organs, and for aged people, and those of delicate constitution, its use will prove most beneficial."

Army and Navy Gazette.

LONDON, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1880.

THE majority of the Committee appointed to consider the reorganisation of the Royal Marine Artillery is unquestionably of a biassed and thus one-sided character, being composed of Naval officers, Royal Marine Light Infantry officers, and a solitary Royal Marine Artillery officer, to represent the views of the corps, with a Royal Marine Light Infantry officer as secretary, to frame the report according to preconcerted ideas. But apart from this, if we look to the modus operandi of past reorganisations, one course has invariably been adopted, namely, to give sops in the upper ranks, and thus to close the channels through which remonstrances from the juniors have to pass. To the senior officers, whose course is nearly run, a salve can easily be applied, and so their obstruction is removed, or, in reality, bought off. To some Captains, who, in their own branch, would have to retire from age, but who, by amalgamation with the Infantry, may see that the tether of their official life will be prolonged, there is a salve. But as to the Subaltern, whose lifelong career is now at stake, he has been excluded from the opportunity of expressing an opinion. Amalgamating the Artillery and Infantry is by many held to be unjust. In the first place, there is as much difference, educationally, between the Royal Marine Artillery and the Royal Marine Light Infantry as between the Royal Artillery and the Infantry. The Royal Artillery and the Royal Marine Artillery pass the same Civil-Service examination, while the Cavalry, Infantry, and Royal Marine Light Infantry pass an examination of a lower standard. Latterly the Government have been converting some field batteries into garrison batteries. Perhaps, with a like want of common-sense, they may wish to convert some garrison brigades into infantry regiments. The idea may seem, as it really is, nonsensical; but such is really what is contemplated with the Royal Marine Artillery, who are in reality equally good as garrison artillery as Marine gunners. Fancy the outcry that would ensue on the proposed conversion of Artillery brigades into Infantry battalions, the same to be carried out on the recommendation of Infantry officers! Of the Royal Marine Artillery, we unhesitatingly affirm there is not a finer corps in the Service, either for physique, drill, or soldierly bearing. Now, as it requires much longer to train a gunner than an infantry soldier, and thus is more expensive, what false economy it is to convert Artillery into Light Infantry, and especially at a time when recruiting is going on for the Artillery. The Marine Artillery being equally "gunners," whether on board ship or in a fort,—if, therefore, they are not required for duty at sea, they should be retained for land service; and it is argued that the most simple mode of procedure would be to convert the Royal Marine Artillery into some additional brigades of garrison artillery, keeping the officers on a separate cadre, exactly in the manner pursued when the Indian Artillery was amalgamated with the Imperial Artillery. There could be no just cause for ill-feeling on either side, for, educationally, both are the same; while in pay and promotion they would not interfere with each other.

We have heard that Lord Chelmsford consulted the military authorities in reference to his desire to reply to the criticisms of Mr. A. Forbes, in the Nineteenth Century, on his operations in Zululand, and that the result has been that no reply will be made by him; but it is said that a counterblast to Mr. Forbes will be sent forth, by a professional critic of ability and knowledge.

We have no desire to extenuate the circumstances under which Colonel the Hon. F. Wellesley, Coldstream Guards, has lately been deprived of his appointment as Aide-de-Camp to the Queen. On moral grounds, the officer has not, and has never professed to have, any defence, but we must protest against the cruel injustice he is still being made to suffer. As we pointed out from the first, there was not the slightest shadow of a pretext for the charge which was laid at his door, by which it was made to appear that he had been guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman; and the fact of his having been restored to his former position in the Brigade of Guards, after full inquiry into all the circumstances of his dispute with a brother member of the Turf Club, conclusively proves that the view we took was the right one. But an attempt is now being made to blind the public into thinking that Colonel Wellesley has been reinstated in his regiment on the understanding that he shall retire from the Service. This report has been started for sinister motives, and in justice to Colonel Wellesley, we consider it only fair to make known that no such conditions have been imposed, and that if he should retire he would do so of his own free-will. His removal from the list of Aides-de-Camp followed as a natural consequence of the publicity which the matter obtained, but the attempt which has been made to injure the officer's professional character has been most unmanly, and cannot fail to meet the condemnation of every right-thinking person.

We have reason to believe that it is now definitely settled that Colonel C. G. Arbuthnot, C.B., Royal Artillery, will succeed Major-General Radcliffe as Deputy-Adjutant-General at the Horse Guards. We predicted this appointment some months ago, and it is with satisfaction we note its confirmation. Important reforms, we doubt not, may now be looked for in that long-suffering Royal Regiment.

We have been favoured with the sight of a letter from an officer of rank and ability in Afghanistan, which contains some interesting remarks on recent events in that country. The writer, whose letter is dated January 1, says that General Roberts was surrounded by 60,000 fanatics, who had responded to the jehad, or holy war, preached by the moollah Mooslik-i-Alum. This is the same man who preached a jehad against us in 1841, but he only succeeded then in collecting 30,000 men. The loss of the Afghans during the operations which ended on December 23 the writer of the above-mentioned letter estimates at 1,200 killed, and about double that number wounded. The Afghans assert that they will renew their attack on the festival of the Nao Roz, which is March 21. General Roberts's mistake was having at the commencement split up his small force into three parts, which had no means of communicating with or assisting each other. He also allowed walls and villages to remain standing close to cantonments, thus leaving for the enemy excellent cover, without which they would have been comparatively harmless. The writer is of opinion that our whole policy has collapsed, and that all idea of conciliating the Afghans is futile. The sooner we can clear out of the country without loss of prestige, the better. This question of prestige is our great stumbling-block. The writer winds up by saying that it is now manifest, as he and many others thought at first, that our best course would have been as follows,—to blow up the Bala Hissar, inflict a heavy fine on the city, destroy a portion of it, and then march back to India.

It is expected that the Gazette forming the new Commissariat and Transport and Ordnance Store Departments will be published almost immediately. On Thursday last, intimation was conveyed to those officers of the Ordnance Store Department who are about to be retired. The following retirements may be anticipated from this department alone, viz., four assistant-commissary-generals, four commissaries, seven deputy-commissaries, and four assistant-commissaries. In the Commissariat, a much larger number of retirements may be anticipated.

It is a curious fact that, notwithstanding the great distress existing on the west coast of Ireland, recruiting there, for the past four or five months, has been rather under than over the average. This is the more singular, when we consider that a Militiaman receives 10s. enlistment bounty directly he is attested, and that he can obtain his discharge any time a month before preliminary drill or training, on payment of £1. Moreover, the standard for Militia recruits is but 5 ft. 4 in., and growing lads between sixteen and eighteen are taken as low as 5 ft. 2 in. We should have thought that, had the distress four months ago been as great as agitators tried to make out, there would have been a regular rush for Militia bounties. This tends to show that the distress is confined principally to a class from which we do not obtain many recruits, viz.,—farmers with small holdings, who till the land themselves, and who cannot afford to be absent from their work during the training period.

Major W. F. Butler, C.B., half-pay, late 69th Regiment, who arrived home from the Cape on Wednesday in the mail steamer Nubian, will not, we understand, return to his former appointment as Deputy-Assistant-Quartermaster-General on the Staff of the Horse Guards.

A most extraordinary report reaches us to the effect that the Lieutenant-Colonel commanding a double-battalion regiment has been unexpectedly ordered to hold himself in readiness to embark for India, to assume command of the sister-battalion, now on service in Afghanistan. The Lieutenant-Colonel, there is reason to fear, will find it necessary to take leave to England, and the state of feeling which exists between the two Majors is such as to render it undesirable that the command should be left in either of their hands. Under the circumstances, the Horse Guards surely has but one course open to it, viz., to call upon both officers to retire. We have heard far too much lately of disagreements among senior officers in India, and the unpleasant stories which are continually reaching England as to the condition of certain regiments—of one three-figured one in particular—would seem to bear out the argument that the head of the Army is apt at times to allow his kindness of heart to get the better of his judgment. We have been shown, in the case of the 43rd and 62nd Regiments, how dangerous it is to allow matters to take their course, and officers should be made to understand that the authorities are not disposed to allow the interests of the Service to be jeopardised at the caprice of a few narrow-minded individuals, who find it impossible to serve on friendly terms with those they command or by whom they are commanded.

Colonel the Hon. D. M'D. Fraser, C.B., Royal Horse Artillery, will, we understand, succeed Brigadier-General Arbuthnot as Inspector-General of Artillery in India. Should an officer be required to fill Colonel Fraser's place, the choice will probably fall upon Colonel Saunders, who is at present unemployed, and who has not been on foreign service for twenty-three years. Enviable is the lot of Royal Artillerymen!

There is a report that the War Office has it in contemplation to offer to Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon Gudgin a distinguished-service reward of £50 a year, to compensate him for the injustice he has been made to suffer in not having received any decoration for his services recently in Zululand. We trust, in the interests of the Service, that this rumour will meet with official contradiction, for it is evident that Mr. Gudgin could under no circumstances consent to accept the proffered reward, seeing that the amounts drawn by the sister departments—the Medical and Chaplains'—are in each case £100 per annum; and that, by accepting a money grant, he would place in the hands of the known enemies and traducers of his profession a strong argument for deferring the consideration of the question now raised, with such good cause, as to the right of the Veterinary Officers of the Army to aspire to decorative honours. Considering the very important part which the members of the Veterinary Department must play in future campaigns, and how desirable it is that the officers of that department should be gentlemen of honour and integrity, we cannot suppose for a moment that Colonel Stanley or H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge knows anything of the proposed arrangements, or that this second indignity which the Veterinary Officers are being made to suffer has been countenanced by them. As we said last week, the overlooking of Mr. Gudgin's claims is considered by all the officers of the late Zulu expedition—and by none more than Major-General Marshall, who commanded the Cavalry Brigade—to be an unjustifiable slight. The sop now proposed to be thrown out to appease the anger of the indignant "vets." is simply an insult added to injury, and we shall, therefore, hope to learn that Mr. Gudgin, when the offer is made to him—if it should be—will decline it, with thanks.

Captain G. H. Hutton, 23rd Fusiliers, who was aide-de-camp to Major-General Bell, V.C., C.B., has been appointed acting aide-de-camp to Major-General H. D'O. Torrens, C.B., commanding the Belfast District.

We are surprised, in these days of Army reform and the vigilant economy which characterises the measures of the War Office, that the authorities have not thought of the Riding Establishment of the Royal Artillery at Woolwich, where five officers, several riding-masters, and a considerable staff of non-commissioned officers are maintained, principally, we believe, for the instruction of the Cadets of the Royal Military Academy. It would be interesting to know the average annual cost each Artillery cadet entails on the country, by this famous instruction in the principles of equitation; and we are at a loss to see why the equally efficient and inexpensive establishments maintained at Canterbury and Sandhurst might not, in a great measure, be copied at Woolwich.

Captain A. G. Wavell, 9th Regiment, has been appointed Staff officer of Volunteers in the Cape District, under the Government of the Cape of Good Hope.

The conditions of employment under the Commissariat and Ordnance Store Department Warrants are on a scale sufficiently liberal, doubtless, to attract many candidates for employment. It is worth noticing that the tendency of the many different appointments that have been established in recent years is, certainly from a pecuniary point of view, and very frequently as regards the prospect of professional advancement, to attract those officers who have ability, or have worked hard at their profession away from their regiments, yet on active service there is no more important officer than the company leader.

Lieutenant A. S. Drummond, Scots Guards, has resigned his appointment as aide-de-camp to Major-General E. W. Donovan, commanding the troops at Hong Kong.

The prospect which the new Commissariat and Ordnance Store Department Warrants hold out of giving employment to a considerable number of officers of field rank, make it worth while to consider whether the stringent rules for compulsory retirement could not be somewhat relaxed, without impeding promotion. The number of officers who are cast upon the world almost in the prime of life, but yet at an age too advanced to enter a new profession, and who consequently find themselves with nothing to do and very little to live upon, is increasing daily, and presents anything but a pleasant picture. Increased appointments for officers of the higher ranks, and liberal inducements offered for voluntary retirement, would go far to ensure a considerable flow of promotion.

Captain W. H. Burton, 26th Cameronians, has been appointed a captain-instructor at the School of Musketry, Hythe, vice Captain F. M'K. Salmond, 21st Fusiliers, appointed Deputy-Assistant-Adjutant-General for Musketry at Edinburgh.

The new Commissariat and Ordnance Store Department Warrants will give a fresh impulse to promotion, particularly amongst the subaltern ranks, thus causing a number of vacancies for first appointments. It is to be hoped that arrangements will be made to meet this demand, by increasing the number of students at Sandhurst, or the number of Militia candidates passed by the examiners. Under ordinary circumstances, regiments often have to wait several months before vacancies can be filled up, and when, by any such cause as the above, the demand is increased, the delay is proportionally greater. There ought, in fact, to be always a number of successful Militia candidates, or of students from Sandhurst, ready to be posted to regiments, as vacancies occur.

A couple of distinguished-service rewards are vacant, by the appointment of Lieutenant-Generals Sir E. H. Greathed, K.C.B., and Sir R. D. Kelly, K.C.B., to regimental colonelcies.

INVINCIBLE, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle, C.B., was to leave Alexandria for the Piræus of Athens about Feb. 6. She will probably remain at the latter port for a while, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle assuming the duties of senior officer in Greek waters.

JUMNA, Capt. G. Parsons, left Port Said on the 10th inst. for Malta and England.

MINOTAUR, Capt. H. Rawson, flagship of Rear-Admiral Hood, which left Lisbon on the 29th ult., arrived at Vigo on the 10th inst. The Salamis will await at Lisbon the mail of the 9th from Southampton, and will then join the squadron at Vigo.

NEWCASTLE, Capt. E. Kelly, left Lisbon on Monday for a cruise to Madeira, Teneriffe, &c.

NORTHAMPTON, Capt. J. A. Fisher, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir F. L. M'Clintock, was at Barbadoes on the 28th of January. Letters for the Admiral should be addressed to Jamaica, viâ Southampton, up to the 17th of February; after that date to Bermuda, viâ New York, and Halifax till further notice. A letter from an officer says:—"The Northampton, as a man-of-war, is simply perfection; but all is sacrificed to the battery and fighting powers generally, leaving little room for officers' accommodation, and in our mess we are cramped, besides its being awfully hot. I suppose, however, we shall manage to exist, and even to be jolly." She was to leave for Trinidad on Feb. 4.

NORTHUMBERLAND, Capt. H. R. Wratislaw, arrived at Vigo on Feb. 10.

PELICAN, Capt. H. Boys, would probably be sent to La Paz.

PENGUIN, Com. A. Paget, was at Panama on Jan 8.

PHILOMEL, Com. B. Berners, was cruising between Massowah and Aden on Jan. 24.

PIONEER, Lieut.-Com. H. Carre. In Parliament on Thursday, in answer to Mr. Richard, Mr. Bourke stated that for some time the town of Onitsha, 200 miles from the mouth of the river Niger, had been occupied by traders, who for the last twelve or fourteen months had been subjected to every kind of outrage by the natives. In consequence of these outrages, it was the intention of the traders to leave the town, and they were preparing to do so and to take their property away when they were prevented by the natives and chiefs. The acting Consul at Fernando Po happened at that time to be passing down the Niger, and in passing Onitsha communication was made to him that the traders intended to embark and take away their property. He immediately communicated with the naval officer at Fernando Po and the senior officer at that station, and a gunboat was ordered to proceed to Onitsha for the purpose of protecting British life and property. The vessel proceeded to the town of Onitsha, in order to take away the property of the traders. While they were engaged in that operation they were attacked by the natives, and in consequence of that unprovoked aggression the town was attacked and burned. The hon. member had asked if British Consuls had authority to use her Majesty's ships to bombard and destroy towns whenever the inhabitants were charged with giving trouble to Europeans. British officers had no such instructions, but at the same time it was the duty of naval officers and of Consular officers to act to the best of their discretion in critical circumstances. Taking all the circumstances of this case into consideration, her Majesty's Government had approved of the conduct of both the naval and Consular officers.

RALEIGH, Capt. C. T. Jago, was inspected in Plymouth Sound on Tuesday by the Commander-in-Chief, Admiral the Hon. Charles Elliot, C.B., and had her compasses adjusted later in the day.

TORCH, Com. R. H. Hamond, has relieved the Rapid at Corfu, where she remained on Feb. 4.

TOURMALINE, Capt. R. Dennistoun, was at Barbadoes on Jan 28, and was to leave for Tobago and Trinidad, in company with the flag, on Feb. 4.

TRIUMPH, Capt. A. H. Markham, bearing the flag of Rear-Admiral Frederick H. Stirling, was at Callao on Jan. 8.

TURQUOISE, Capt. M. B. Medlycott, was at Callao on Jan. 8.

TYRIAN, Lieut.-Com. Pike, was at Port Royal on Jan. 24.

WIVERN, Com. J. G. Jones, arrived at Spithead on Feb. 12, to take on board her torpedo equipment.

WOODLARK, which has been under repair for the past three years at Devonport, having cost a total of £10,780, or £2,500 more than the sum estimated and allowed, the excess expenditure has been severely censured by the Lords of the Admiralty, and a memorandum has been received at Devonport, calling the attention of the foreman engaged upon her to the irregularity of the excess expenditure, without first submitting it for approval as a supplementary estimate. The vessel is to be out of hand by Thursday, and inspected on the 27th inst., upon being passed into the first division of Steam Reserve for commission.—Western Daily Mercury.

WYE, Staff Com. Sarratt, arrived in Plymouth Sound on Sunday evening from Portsmouth, with men for the Wolverene, to be transferred to the Raleigh for passage. After receiving supernumeraries, the Wye left for the Mediterranean, calling at Gibraltar.

The under-mentioned men have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct:—Edmund Broad, gunner's mate, of the Royal Adelaide; John Bowds, Charles Kennedy, and James Collins, commander's boatmen; and John Mulcahy, boatman, of the Coastguard.

In the House of Commons, on Monday, Captain Pim, R.N., asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether he would lay upon the table of the House, at least a fortnight before the Navy Estimates were moved, in the form of a Blue-book similar to that of "Navy (Health)," annually laid before the House, the report of the operations of the Admiralty for the past financial year, together with propositions affecting expenditure for the ensuing year. Mr. W. H. Smith said that the hon. and gallant member was aware that the Blue-book relating to the health of the Navy related to matters which occurred in the previous, and not in the current financial year, and, in fact, was a mere historical document. It would be inconvenient to carry out the hon. and gallant gentleman's proposal. Sir J. Hay asked the First Lord of the Admiralty whether the colonial allowance payable to officers of the Navy and Marines serving on shore in South Africa would soon be paid. Mr. W. H. Smith said he hoped that officers of the Navy and Marines would soon be put on an equality with officers of the Army.

THE MILITARY MUTUAL-ADMIRATION SOCIETY.

[FROM A CORRESPONDENT IN NATAL.]

I think all true soldiers who have seen service of a serious kind have but one opinion of the exhibition some officers, who know better, have been making of themselves at home, according to the reports in the papers. It is simply astonishing—that is the mildest terms—that men like Lord Chelmsford, Buller, and Wood can lend themselves to the use which is made of them and of their names in reference to the miserable campaign in Zululand, the result of which I do not hesitate to say has been most destructive to the tone of the British Army. One would think that the battle of Ulundi, in which British infantry, supported by artillery, was drawn up in square to resist the feeble-hearted onslaught of a horde of ill-armed savages, was the climax to a series of brilliant military operations, in which our Army displayed its best qualities. Was it to be expected that they would all run away? I suppose not. Was there a single instance in which the Army in Zululand undertook an offensive operation, or ventured to attack the Zulus in the open? There is not an officer who has served with our troops in the field after Islandwana, who does not know that a most discreditable fear of the enemy took possession of the men; that they were victims of mortal terror, which took the shape of night alarms, stampedes, desertion of outposts, sentries running in, and promiscuous firing at imaginary Zulus. Why, Lord Chelmsford and Buller and Wood know the truth, as well as any man; and they have, I hope, told it to the Authorities at the War Office, though they may have found it convenient to butter up the soldiers whose offences they punished with a heavy hand. The troops were not so much to blame, when they were told by their officers that "if they did not laager themselves, the Zulus would come down and kill them all." "The Zulus are coming!" was a cry of alarm, not an inspiriting announcement that an enemy worthy of their steel were at hand for our soldiers. This is the truth. And there is not a doubt but that the very men of whom this is told would have displayed the very qualities for which British infantry are famous, had they not been allowed to fall into a state of moral degradation, immediately after the disaster, which ought never to have happened. What right had our Army to invade Zululand, if they were to stand for ever on the defensive? No,—the idea of laagering the invading force never entered the heads of the British officers in command till the ill-handled, ill-fated detachment at Islandwana was "rushed" to death on February 24. Buller and Wood did not laager, when they advanced at first; Pearson did not laager when he entered Zululand, and defeated the Zulus on the Inyozane. What a change set in when our men were ordered to sleep in their clothes and boots, and the rifles were left on the parapets of the entrenchments, and dared not halt for a couple of hours without entrenching themselves! Let the troops get all due credit for what they did, but let us not be made ridiculous in the eyes of Europe by fulsome flatteries, and by eulogising their conduct as if they were heroes, whose deeds threw fresh lustre on our arms. I am sorry to have to write these things, but it is in the nature of a protest against what has been said at home, which we out here know not to be true. The attack on Secocoeni was a kind of reaction against the Zulu spirit. There our troops attacked the enemy in his stronghold, and, strange to say, they never laagered the night before, when they were encamped on the open, within a few hundred yards of their enemy. And there was no scare and no night alarm, the men, under different influences and animated by confidence in themselves, being as steady as veterans. What was the state of affairs which was offered for the inspection of foreign critics and the world in general, after the main column was led out of Zululand in all haste by Lord Chelmsford? Pearson, shut up in Ekowe, quite content to remain inactive, and never venturing out of the cover of his entrenchments to face the enemy; Wood and Buller, more energetic and active, venturing at last to make the demonstration at Islandwana, which would have been fatal to their reputation for ever, but for the repulse of the Zulus in their attack on the fortified camp at Cambula; and weeks and months slipping by before the British relieved Ekowe, only to fall back again, garrison and all,—then to remain inactive till their hesitating advance was galvanised into something like a dash at the enemy, by the arrival of Sir Garnet Wolseley. The dates prove that Sir Garnet Wolseley arrived at Cape Town on June 23; his coming was known a week before, and was made known to the African authorities immediately, and the advance of the army was at once pushed on, so that Lord Chelmsford was fairly in motion by the time the new Commander-in-Chief had landed. But if Sir Garnet Wolseley had at once pushed on from Durban, instead of spending five days between it and Pietermaritzburg, and losing ten days altogether—necessarily, perhaps—at Pietermaritzburg and at Durnford, he could have got up to head-quarters two or three days before Ulundi. And what would have happened then? Why, the public would have assigned all the praise to the new General, and Lord Chelmsford and Sir E. Wood and Colonel Buller would have simply been "nowhere." But Sir Garnet had, apparently, the notion that the division under Crealock should unite with the northern division before the attack was made, and he was eager to get at the former, and move up to St. Paul's, to concentrate both. He left Capetown on June 24, and was at Durban on the 28th. Thence he could have reached Lord Chelmsford in five days—say, July 3—instead of tossing off Durnford. Then we should have heard of nothing but Sir Garnet Wolseley and of his Staff, and of the electrical effect of his presence, and sword of honour and addresses would have been presented to a different lot, always excepting the men of Rorke's Drift. Such is the fortune of war. Would that those who have formed themselves into a mutual-admiration society had followed the example of Newdigate, and only claimed credit for doing their duty!

THE SECOCOENI CAMPAIGN.

(FROM ONE WHO TOOK PART IN IT.)

Shortly after the battle of Ulundi, and just before peace was declared in Zululand, a flying column, under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Baker Russell, C.B., was formed to advance against a turbulent chief, who had his location on the north of Zululand, just outside the boundary, by the Pongola and Intombi rivers, one Manenono, who had of late given a great deal of trouble,—burning farms, and destroying the crops all about the Lüneburg district, and had driven off all the cattle his people could lay their hands on for miles round. Arriving there on September 4, 1879, the mountains where he and his tribe resided in caves were attacked, and most of the caves blown up, though not without slight casualty on our side. Part of the 4th Regiment, under Colonel Bray, C.B., the 94th, under Lieutenant-Colonel Malthus, some of the King's Dragoon Guards, Engineers, mounted Infantry, and Native Contingent under Major Black, taking part in it. After some resistance, Manenono surrendered, his chief or head-man having been captured a day or so previously. As soon as this was settled, and peace restored, the cavalry started to join head-quarters. The 4th were stationed at Lüneburg, and Major Black's contingent, who had done excellent service, were disbanded. A new column was then formed, consisting of the 94th, who were eventually to be quartered in the Transvaal, a detachment of Engineers, mounted infantry, a regiment of irregular horse, under command of Commandant Ferriera, the whole under the immediate command of Lieutenant-Colonel Baker Russell, C.B., with Captain Stewart, 3rd Dragoon Guards, as chief of Staff, to proceed against Secocoeni. On September 4, this column started, and crossed the Intombi for the campaign, marching by way of Derby and Middleburg, at which latter place the 2nd Battalion 21st Regiment joined it. From there on to Fort Weeber, then on to Fort Oliphant, where a halt was made, as the road on had to be made, and an advanced fort built, for storing provisions, &c. From here reconnaissances and surveys were taken, and the direction that the new road was to take, and the spot for the new fort, close by the Oliphant river, called now Albert Edward, were decided upon. The road and fort took very little time making; the Engineers and some companies of the 94th being sent on in advance. At Fort Albert Edward, all the troops assembled who were to take part in the fighting, with the exception of two companies of the 94th Regiment, which had gone round to Fort Berghers and Jellalabad, so that they might join with the Swazies to make a simultaneous attack on the other side of the mountain to which the town was built, on the day it was proposed to attack it. The column was now composed of the 2nd Battalion 21st Regiment and the 94th Regiment, six companies of each; a detachment of Engineers; the Transvaal Artillery, four guns; mounted Infantry, Ferreira's Horse, and some native contingent, and some of the Transvaal Mounted Rifles. Another small fort was built also between Albert Edward and Secocoeni Town, at which a halt was made, one march distant from the valley. On the evening of the 26th, the column began to move forward, the mounted men, some companies of the 94th, and the Rustenberg contingent having gone on in advance, to seize and hold two koppies which were close by the road along which the column had to go. These koppies were some eleven miles from the valley, and were held by the enemy. This was successfully done, Captain Browne being in command. About 2.30 on the morning of the 27th a terrific thunderstorm came on, which delayed the transport for some little time, and as the roads were so very slippery and heavy, the officer commanding the expedition thought it advisable to halt for a few hours to rest the cattle. So a halt was made and breakfast got ready, every one being quite ready for it, after so hard and drenching a night. At twelve noon, the "fall in" sounded, and about five the column marched into Secocoeni's valley, everything looking as quiet and peaceful as possible, the scenery most perfect, the three towns or stadts lying at the foot of a single big mountain, on the left of the valley as we entered, the Fighting Koppie standing darkly out between the second and third towns, the mealie fields, quite green with young mealies, and the different fruits of the mimosa tree giving a most picturesque appearance. The encampment was formed on the right of the valley, in front of the towns, about three miles off. All the precautions being taken to prevent a surprise or attack, dinners were issued. As the attack was to be made at daybreak, the camp was soon perfectly quiet and dark, every one lying down just as they were. Now and then a whistle or sound of a horn could be heard from the towns,—the chiefs calling their men together. At 2.15 on the morning of the 28th the camp was once again full of life, but scarcely any noise,—no trumpet or bugle sounds. A cup of coffee, tents all struck and laid on the ground, and at 2.45 the several corps had fallen in, and directly after started to take up their different positions. Between the town and the camp ran a river; this had to be crossed, which was speedily done. The Transvaal Artillery, supported by some companies of the 94th, the 2nd-21st, the remainder of the 94th Regiment, a detachment of Engineers, and two companies of the Rustenberg contingent formed the central attack, directly opposite the Fighting Koppie. The right attack was composed of Ferreira's Horse, Mapock's Contingent, and some of the Rustenbergs; the left by the mounted infantry and rest of the mounted troops, and some of the Native Contingent. The two companies of the 94th Regiment, under command of Captain Bowlby, and the Swazies, coming up and across the mountain from the other side, were to harass the rear. About 4 a.m. all the troops were in position, and at 4.15 the first shot was fired by the artillery—a shell well directed on the Koppie. Directly afterwards the firing on both sides became rapid and general. About 5.30 the town on the extreme left was partially in our hands, the enemy making a strong resistance. Two companies of the 94th went round to the right to strengthen the force on that side, the 2nd Battalion 21st going to the left, sending out one company in skirmishing order to attack the left and centre stadts, one company of the 94th being also sent towards the Koppie, likewise in skirmishing order, if possible to reduce the firing from it. The forces on the right, left, and rear had been gradually concentrating, and about 9.30 the three stadts were nearly in our possession. The firing had now somewhat ceased, so it was decided that a rush should be made for the Koppie, and if possible to seize and hold it. About 10 o'clock, a rocket was fired, as the first signal, and about five minutes after a second one, on which the rush was to be made. The very minute after the second one had gone forth, Colonel Baker Russell, at the head of the 2-21st, under command of Major Hazlerigg, their bag-pipes playing, rushed forward to the centre attack; Ferreira, at the head of his men, and Captain Froom leading his company of the 94th Regiment, the right attack; the mounted troops and Swazies the left and rear. Immediately the enemy saw that a rush was going to be made to the Koppie, they sent forth volley after volley, bullets flying in every direction. When the Koppie was reached, the sides and parapet that surrounded it were scaled, though not without great resistance. Captain Lawrell, of the 4th Hussars, orderly officer to Colonel Russell, was shot dead directly he put foot on the parapet. The orderly also, who was close behind Colonel Russell, was severely wounded. Commandant Ferreira, on the right, was the first over the parapet, and Captain Froom beside him; they mounted the Koppie close together, a brisk fire going on the whole time on both sides. Further to the right, Major M'Calmont and Lieutenant Couper were scaling up together. Nothing could exceed the dash and daring of the troops, each man seeming to do his utmost. At 10.15, the Koppie, that Secocoeni had declared could never be taken, and that no white man should ever put his foot into, was completely in our possession. It was most strongly fortified, parapets being built up of enormous blocks of stone, and big trees, and underwood in their natural growth adding to its strength, and some seven hundred or more in it to garrison and defend it. Whoever devised it had a very good idea of fortification. Two companies of the 94th, under command of Captain Froom, were then left to guard the Koppie, and to prevent any attempt being made to recapture it, and also to prevent those in it from escaping, a few other troops being left round the town, and on the mountain in rear. The rest returned to camp to dinner, which they well deserved, those left behind not being forgotten by their thoughtful chief. About five o'clock Major Anstruther arrived, and also one company of the 21st Regiment, at the Koppie, to strengthen those already left. Picquets and groups were then thrown out all round it, each group throwing up a shelter-trench, the company of the 21st being in the Koppie itself. As soon as night came on, the enemy began to make preparations for their escape, and the whole night through kept up an incessant fire, and, rushing forward, tried to break through the picquets. Just before dawn they got together, fired a volley, and made a determined rush for it, a very few escaping; the greater part of them were driven back. Every one seemed very glad when daybreak came and the firing ceased. The two companies of the 94th had been under fire from 4.15 on the 28th till 6 a.m. on the 29th, nearly twenty-six hours, and when relieved, the men seemed none the worse for it, though the night-work was most trying. The besieged certainly showed great power of endurance. It was not till the morning of the fourth day that some of them surrendered, though the prisoners who had come out and given themselves up previously were sent to them, to tell them they would be protected when they came out. One of the last to give in was one Mapthla, a renegade Swazie, half-brother to the King, who had aspired to the throne, and got beaten, so had to leave his own country. He had rather a numerous tribe who belonged to him, and was one who had given a great deal of trouble. Secocoeni, on the night of the fight, escaped from his cave in the mountain near the town to one about nine miles off. Ferreira, with his mounted men and a company of the 94th, under Captain E. S. Brook, went in pursuit of him, and surrounded the cave. At last, when he found all was lost, he surrendered, and was brought into camp, being afterwards taken to Pretoria. Sir Garnet Wolseley, K.C.B., and Staff were present, riding about during the whole time the fight was going on. From beginning to end, no campaign could have been more successful, the transport throughout being as perfect as it possibly could be. Taking into consideration the time of year, the reputed bad climate of Secocoeni's valley, the strength and confidence possessed by a powerful chief and tribe who had been for years the terror of the country for more than 100 miles round, no greater success could have been wished for.

THE THUNDERER GUN'S REMAINS.

The fragments of the 38-ton gun, destroyed for experimental purposes in the bursting cell in the proof grounds, Government Marshes, adjoining the Royal Arsenal, Woolwich, on Tuesday last, have all been recovered, and are found to number about 120 pieces. They have all been marked, and are being washed and arranged for inspection. The two projectiles were taken from the sand butt in front of the gun, both broken in pieces, and it is evident from the appearance of the bore that they broke up before leaving the gun, the marks of the rifling being in parts quite effaced. The muzzle end of the steel tube, about 3 ft. in length, is intact, with parts of the wrought iron supercoil remaining attached, and a singular appearance is presented by the rearmost end of this fragment, the steel having been violently rent and incurved, as though a shot or lighter fragment, moving faster than itself, had overtaken it and struck it with considerable force. The crusher gauges fixed on both projectiles have been recovered, but give no positive data respecting the pressure produced by the explosion. A very great pressure had been expected, and the copper crushers had consequently been subjected to a pressure of 35 tons to the square inch before being inserted in the plugs. This pressure was not exceeded in the explosion, and the only apparent deduction arrived at of importance is that a strain which would not be alarming in the powder chamber has sufficed to burst the gun at the spot where its thickness and strength suddenly diminished. The remnants of the gun and projectiles are watched by police on account of the temptations which they offer to seekers of curiosities, and it is hoped that the whole of them will be ultimately put together in their proper places for exhibition. The Thunderer's two 38-ton guns, which have met such similar fates, were the only two 12-inch guns of their weight in the Service, having been supplied on urgent requisition, before an increase of bore was decided upon. All the 38-ton guns now in existence have a calibre of 12½-in. and fire spherical projectiles, whereas the Thunderer's guns always employed the shot prepared for the original Woolwich Infants of 35 tons. It appears that the gun burst at almost exactly the same place as the gun which burst on board the Thunderer; the broken tube corresponds almost precisely with that of its sister gun, which is now on view in the Royal Gun Factories.

AMERICAN VESSELS IN THE ARCTIC.

A petition is in circulation, addressed to the Secretary of the U.S. Navy, requesting that as soon as navigation opens next spring the Government dispatch a war-vessel to the Arctic Ocean, to the relief of the whaling barques Mount Wollaston and Vigilant and the exploring yacht Jeannette. The Jeannette was originally Sir Allen Young's Pandora. Mr. J. G. Bennett, the well-known and energetic proprietor of the New York Herald (which is said to bring him a clear income over £120,000 a year, besides a large patrimony inherited from his father, who founded the paper), bought the Pandora of Sir Allen Young, and at Havre, July 4, 1878, she was rechristened the Jeannette, the name of Mr. Bennett's only sister, Mrs. Ball, of New York. She left Havre in July, 1878, and went to San Francisco. By a special Act of the American Congress, she was allowed an American register. Lieut. De Long, U.S.N., and Master Dauenbower, U.S.N., with two mates and a picked crew, took the vessel to San Francisco. The voyage took about five months, most of it being made under sail. It may not be amiss to state that Mrs. De Long pluckily went as a passenger in her at that time, taking her two children. By an Act of the United States Congress, the Secretary of the Navy was ordered to detail ten commissioned, warranted, or appointed petty officers of the United States Navy; besides the crew, were to be under naval discipline. There were no want of applicants, but Lieut. (now Lieut.-Com.) G. W. De Long, from his experience while in the U.S.S. Juniata, when it went to Dr. Hall's relief in 1873, was selected. Lieut. C. W. Chipp, U.S.N., who was also in the Juniata, went as executive, and Master (now Lieut.) J. W. Dauenbower as navigator. Passed Assist.-Engineer G. W. Melville and passed Assist.-Surg. J. M. Ambler comprised the commissioned officers. Besides a naturalist, are two ice-masters, who act as mates. Mr. Bennett, relying on the Navy Department, allowed the vessel to be overhauled at Mare Island. After getting her boilers fixed, so that they would consume more coal than the Jeannette could with economy of space carry, they otherwise overhauled her, until, we understand, Mr. Bennett was convinced he had better have built a vessel, as, for many other reasons, the Jeannette has not come up to expectations. The Navy Department then promised to send coal and stores north by a war-vessel. Mr. Bennett, relying on that promise, found, at the eleventh hour, that the only way to get stores north to Alaska in time was to send them himself. This he did by a schooner, but the Jeannette left San Francisco overloaded in July, when Mr. Bennett would have started her in May. She is now, as we have heard some time ago, in distress. Mr. Bennett's pluck and energy deserve every success; his generosity is unbounded, but as a good business man that he is, he never wastes money. In this case, we should say half the fault, if not more, should be borne by the Navy Department at Washington. When the department was rid of Mr. Robeson, we understood reform was to commence, but there seems to be a want of backbone in it somewhere, when, as we heard long ago, a captain of an American man-of-war got out of taking stores for the Jeannette by brow-beating the Navy Department.

THE REORGANISATION OF THE WAR OFFICE.

The promised Warrant for the reorganisation of War-Office clerks and writers in the manufacturing departments of the Army has been issued, and proves to be of a very sweeping character. In one department, the Royal Gun Factories at Woolwich, its effect will be to remove, either by resignation or compulsion, the whole of the clerks employed. The Warrant, which is issued by order of the Secretary of State for War, with the sanction of her Majesty's Treasury, revises and considerably reduces the clerical establishments, but sanctions a general increase of salaries to the clerks who are permitted to remain. The salaries of principal clerks, of which the present maximum is £550, will commence at £450, and rise by £20 a year to £650. Any clerk selected for a principal clerkship who may be in receipt of more than £400 a year will be allowed an increase of £50 from the date of his advancement, and present principals will receive an increase of £50 from April 1 next, when the order takes effect. The clerks will be divided into two classes (seniors and juniors), the former rising to a maximum of £500, and the latter to £400, both by yearly increments of £15. Gentlemen who are now promoted to the senior class will enter that class at £350, whilst those already in the senior class and the junior class will receive an increase of £30 from April 1. The clerks in charge of the Birmingham and Waltham Abbey offices will each receive an extra allowance of £50 per annum. Clerks who are in future appointed for service in the manufacturing departments of the Army will be under the Playfair scheme for the higher division, and will have a salary of £100 for the first year, which will be one of probation, and £150 for the second year, after the appointment has been confirmed, rising by £37 10s. every third year, to a maximum of £400. The places now filled by the principal and senior clerks will eventually, under the Playfair scheme, be duty-pay places, of which there will be ten, viz.,—four of £200 each, for the principal clerkships; five of £100 each, for the clerks in charge of the departmental account branches, including Birmingham; and £50 will be allowed to the head clerk at Waltham Abbey. All clerks now serving in the manufacturing departments will be liable to removal between the respective departments or the War Office in London; and it is to be distinctly understood that as regards future appointments to the position of principal and senior clerks, the selection will not necessarily be made from the Departmental Staff, neither will seniority, as regards length of service, be recognised as giving a claim to promotion. To mark this unmistakably, the Warrant gives the names of the gentlemen selected for the future establishment, with the departments to which they are appointed. The names also are given of the clerks who have accepted the superannuation allowances and gratuities offered in the War-Office Memorandum of January 13, and the Secretary of State sanctions their retirement. It is stated that their superannuation papers will be prepared without delay, together with those of the other gentlemen whose names are "necessarily omitted" from the new establishment, and who will also be retired on the same terms. Full pay will be allowed up to the 15th of March, but arrangements may be made to admit of the gentlemen who are about retiring from the Service to proceed on leave forthwith, if they should desire to do so. The Secretary of State desires that the general distribution of duties in the several departments shall be assimilated as far as possible, and the principal clerks will be held responsible, under the orders of the superintendents, for the efficient working of their respective offices. The cash duties will be discharged by clerks, appointed from time to time to act as departmental cashiers, but, as these duties are considered to be of an ordinary character, which should devolve upon the members of the permanent staff in turn, the special allowance (£50 a year) hitherto granted to the cashiers will cease. No security will be hereafter required from clerks acting as cashiers, and a separate order will be issued, with a view of simplifying the present arrangements. The office of accountant and auditor will be retained by Mr. J. C. Hurst, at the salary of a principal clerk, £450 to £650, and an immediate increase of £50. Mr. G. T. Jelley, of the Royal Laboratory, has been selected to fill the appointment of assistant-accountant and auditor, on probation for one year, at the salary of a senior clerk, £350 to £500. The appointment of a special assistant at the Royal Laboratory is to be continued, but it will be subject to reconsideration, in the event of a vacancy arising. Mr. Baden Pritchard will continue to hold the office of assistant and photographer in the chemical department, at an increased salary; and to all these special appointments duty-pay, at the rate of £50 a year, will be attached. Eventually, however, these offices will be filled by clerks appointed under the Playfair scheme.

With reference to the writers, the Warrant states that the present system, by which they are appointed and paid like the other wages classes, will remain unaltered; but, "with a view to the encouragement of a very deserving class, and in order to mark the positions held by the principal writers, especially in superintending the work of subordinates, the Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of a foreman and assistant-foreman of writers in each department, with such increases of wages as the superintendents may think fit." Returns showing length of service, wages, &c., of the writers are to be transmitted twice a year to the War Office, and the superintendents are directed to submit on March 1, commencing in 1881, the names of any writers whom they may consider deserving of some special consideration.

Regulations are appended relative to hours of attendance and leave of absence. The hours are to be regulated by the superintendents, but seven hours per day of actual official work is required from each clerk, excepting on Saturdays, when four hours only will be expected. It is to be distinctly understood, however, that in times of pressure the hours of attendance may be extended, to meet the exigencies of the public service. Leave may be allowed to the extent of 42 days a year, including sick-leave, and subject to circumstances, and under the authority of superintendents. The writers may have twelve days' leave a year, but, as a rule, seven days' only should be granted to men under three years' service; whilst foremen, and other writers of exceptional merit, may be specially recommended for an extension of leave beyond 12 days.

NAVAL UNIFORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—As you are aware, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty have issued New Regulations for naval uniform, which, however, only affect two classes of officers to any appreciable extent—viz., the assistant-paymasters and engineers. Now, Sir, the new regulations take away the upper gold-lace stripe from these officers (those of eight years' seniority and upwards), and substitute a 3-16ths-inch gold braid for it. These unfortunate officers find themselves deprived of an honour, and held up to ridicule and laughter by the officers of the branches not affected, and their rank lowered in the eyes of the men to a great extent. This could very easily indeed have been avoided; there was not the slightest occasion to have altered the uniform of assistant-paymasters or engineers, the distinction between the latter and chief engineer (junior) being perfectly clear. With regard to the former, had the Admiralty granted the junior paymasters the additional half-stripe, the same as junior chief engineers, and left the assistant-paymasters as at present, every one would have been satisfied, and the distinction of ranks have been clear. As matters now stand, the paymasters find themselves still at a disadvantage in point of uniform with junior chief engineers, for no reason whatever. Assistant-paymasters and engineers cannot but feel that the very unusual course has been adopted of depriving them of an honour where no fault has been committed. Then, again, great expense has to be incurred by these officers in altering the endless number of coats (full and undress frock-coats, jackets, &c.) worn; and this will by no means improve the condition of them.—I am, &c.,

COMMON-SENSE.

The Cologne Gazette states that the German Admiralty have come to the conclusion, on the ground of recent experiences in the fleets of various nations, that the provision made for cruisers in the "plan for forming a fleet," framed seven years ago, is insufficient, and an increase of that portion of the German Fleet is now under consideration. The correspondent adds that no decision has yet been come to as to the new vessel which is to take the place of the Grosser Kurfürst, sunk in the Channel. It is not even decided if the new vessel is to be an ironclad, opinion appearing to be gradually going against that class of ships.

Advices from Washington state that efforts are being made to reorganise the naval administration of the United States, which has been allowed to become antiquated and ineffective. Mr. Harris, of Massachusetts, on behalf of the House Naval Committee, to which the matter was referred by the Government, has presented a report dealing with the question in detail, one of the topics treated being the condition of the vessels forming the fleet of the United States. The report is very sweeping in its condemnation of all the ships. The five first-rates are "obsolete as vessels of war;" of the twenty-seven second-rates, three are "unfinished and rotten on the stocks," seven are laid up unfit for further use, others are otherwise incapacitated, and only nine are fit for service. Of the twenty-nine third-rates, six are "worthless, and should be broken up to save the expenses of their care," and only fifteen are fit for service; while the six fourth-rates are declared to be "of really no account as vessels of war." In addition to the above vessels there are twenty-four ironclads, some of which are rotten on the stocks, never having been finished, others are unfinished, and only fourteen fit for service, these being moreover all fourth-rates, carrying two smooth-bore guns.

At a recent meeting of the Society of Antiquaries, it was reported by the secretary that a communication had been received through the Admiralty from Capt. Sulivan, R.N., of the Sirius, announcing that the remains of the great navigator, Christopher Columbus, had been lately found in the cathedral of San Domingo, the chest in which his bones had been laid not having been removed, as was supposed, to Havannah, but still remaining in the chancel of that cathedral, with an inscription both inside and outside of the lid, "Christopher Colombe, the great Admiral." The thanks of the meeting were voted to the Admiralty, though considerable doubt was thrown on the accuracy of the report by several members of the society.

He became retired captain, July 1, 1865.

LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.

The PUREST. The MOST PALATABLE. The MOST DIGESTIBLE. The MOST EFFICACIOUS.

Incontestably proved by Thirty Years' Medical Experience to be

THE ONLY COD LIVER OIL WHICH PRODUCES THE FULL CURATIVE EFFECTS IN CONSUMPTION and DISEASES of the CHEST, THROAT AFFECTIONS, GENERAL DEBILITY, WASTING DISEASES of CHILDREN, RICKETS, and ALL SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

SELECT MEDICAL OPINIONS.

DR. SINCLAIR COGHILL,
Physician Royal National Hospital for Consumption, Ventnor.

"I have convinced myself that in Tubercular and the various forms of Strumous Disease, Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL possesses greater therapeutic efficacy than any other Cod Liver Oil with which I am acquainted. It was especially noted, in a large number of cases in which the patients protested they had never been able to retain or digest other Cod Liver Oil, that Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL was not only tolerated, but taken readily, and with marked benefit. Dr. DE JONGH'S OIL is now the only Cod Liver Oil used in the Royal National Hospital for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest."

JOSEPH J. POPE, Esq., M.R.C.S., Late Staff Surgeon Army, Professor of Hygiene, Birkbeck Institution.

"I found during my Indian experience that the worth and character of Dr. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL remained unchanged by tropical heat or foreign climate, and it was, from its uniformity of character, particularly adapted for long-continued administration. The value of 'hydro-carbons' in all debilitated states of the system is now becoming thoroughly recognised; and it is, without doubt, from the animal oils and fats, rather than from their vegetable substitutes, that we may hope to derive the surest benefit. The Oil of Dr. DE JONGH places in everyone's reach a reliable and valuable remedy, one that cannot be too widely recognised."

Sold ONLY in Capsuled Imperial Half-Pints, 2s 6d; Pints, 4s 9d; Quarts, 9s; by all Chemists.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

ARUNDEL & CALEDONIAN HOTELS.

The ARUNDEL is near the New Law Courts, in the Strand, being next door to the Temple Station.

The CALEDONIAN is on the Adelphi Terrace, and close to Charing Cross.

These two old-established Family Hotels, from their especially advantageous position, both overlooking the Thames Embankment, combine light, air, and perfect quiet, although in the centre of London. They are now under one management, and are conducted on the principle of a fixed charge of SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE PER DAY, which includes a good Bedroom, Breakfast of hot and cold meats, Luncheon, Dinner of six courses, and Tea and Coffee in the evening; also the use of large, well-appointed Sitting-rooms, including an ELEGANTLY-APPOINTED DRAWING-ROOM.

These Hotels, containing upwards of 200 Rooms, have been for many years largely patronised by Members of Parliament, the Clergy, and by Military and Naval Officers and their Families, by reason of their central, but retired localities, affording all the comforts and luxuries of high-class Hotels.
